The Bankruptcy Act, 1890, which was passed on August 18, 1890, and came into operation on January 1, 1891, provides (s. 23) that where a debt, including interest, “has been proved” on a debtor’s estate, such interest shall for the purposes of dividend be calculated at a rate not exceeding 5 per cent. per annum, without prejudice to the right of the creditor to receive out of the estate any higher rate of interest to which he may be entitled after all the debts have been paid in full:—

Held, that the section was not retrospective in its operation, and therefore did not apply to a debt, including interest above 5 per cent., proved under a scheme adopted by the Court before the date of the passing of the Act.

Seem: If the scheme had been adopted between the dates of the passing of the Act and of its coming into operation, the section would have applied. In re ATHELUMNEY. Ex parte WILSON - Wright J. [1898] 2 Q. B. 547

In 1889 A. mortgaged certain property to secure 2000*l.* and interest. Shortly afterwards a receiving order was made against A. on his own petition. In July, 1890, he made a composition with his creditors under s. 18 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, which was approved of by the Court, under which the creditors were to be paid by three instalments extending over a year.

The mortgagees neither attended the creditors’ meeting nor assented to the scheme of composition.

Default was made in payment of the instalments. A. died two months after the expiration of the year, and this action was commenced by a creditor for the administration of his estate, which proved to be insolvent.

The mortgagees valued their security at 1500*l.*, and claimed to be admitted as creditors in the action for 500*l.*, the balance of their debt. Their proof had been admitted by the trustee under the composition deed:—

Held, that the Court of Bankruptcy had jurisdiction to proceed in the bankruptcy of A. under s. 108 and s. 18, sub-s. 11, of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, notwithstanding his death, and that the strict course would be to allow the applicants to take proceedings in that Court, but the plt. having submitted, in order to save delay and expense, to abide by the judgment of this Court on what would be the result of those proceedings, the claim was admitted. *In re HARDY. When a secured creditor presents a bankruptcy petition against his debtor and adjudication follows, there is nothing in the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, or the rules thereunder, that entitles the trustee in bankruptcy to redeem the petitioning creditor’s security at the value he places on it in his petition.

V. bought shares of H. and induced H. to give him the certificates of the shares and to accept his cheque for 3298*l.* 16*s.* in payment, representing that it would be met. The cheque was dishonoured and V. absconded. Soon afterwards V. was adjudicated bankrupt on a petition presented against him by H., based on the dishonoured cheque, H. alleging in his petition that he had a security or lien on the shares, which security or lien he valued at 3200*l.* Meantime H. had issued a warrant against V., under which he was arrested and committed for trial for fraud, and subsequently convicted. Thereupon the certificates of the shares were, on an order of the Court made under s. 100 of the Larceny Act, 1861, restored to H. The trustee in bankruptcy of V. then claimed to redeem the shares at the value placed on them by H. in his petition:—

Held, first, that as the title to the shares had, on the conviction of V., reverted in H. under s. 100 of the Larceny Act, 1861, he ought not to be deprived of them by reason of his mistake in treating them as a security in his petition; and secondly, that even if H. had affirmed the contract of sale for the shares, there was nothing in the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, or the rules thereunder, that entitled the trustee to redeem the shares at the amount at which they were valued in the petition.

The debtor became bankrupt while the pictures were still unsold, and the pictures were with other property of the bankrupt subsequently sold by the auctioneers, acting upon the instructions of the debtor's trustee in bankruptcy. The auctioneers claimed to deduct from the proceeds the money due to them for their charges in respect of the sale of the furniture and the abortive sale of the house:—

Held, that the deposit by the debtor of the pictures, with such an authority to sell and receive the proceeds, constituted a giving of credit by him to the debtors; that there were therefore mutual dealings between him and the debtors at the date of the bankruptcy, in respect of which the auctioneers had a right of set-off in bankruptcy under the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, s. 38. *PALMER v. On Dec. 31, 1892, D. sold his business to M. under an agreement which fixed as the price a portion of the profits expected to be earned for three years from the business sold. Thereupon M. took possession of and carried on the business. On Jan. 17, 1893, a receiving order was made against D., but no profits had then been earned from the business. At the end of the three years a sum of 300*l.* was found to be due from M. to D. under the agreement as the price of the business, and this sum M. paid to D.'s trustee in bankruptcy after deducting the 86*l.* due from D. to M. The trustee however objected that M. could not set off the 86*l.* against the 300*l.*; that he must pay the 300*l.* in full and be satisfied with a dividend on the debt of 86*l.*

The county court judge allowed the objection, and an appeal by M. to the Div. Ct. was dismissed, the Court differing in opinion. On appeal by M., by leave, to the C. A.:—

The Bankruptcy Act, 1883, s. 57, empowers a trustee with the permission of the committee of inspection to (amongst other things) employ a solicitor to take any proceedings or do any business which may be sanctioned by the committee of inspection, and enacts: "The permission given for the purposes of this section shall not be a general permission to do all or any of the above-mentioned things, but shall only be a permission to do the particular thing or things for which permission is sought in the specified case or cases."

In 1897 the tenant for life of large settled estates became bankrupt. The official receiver at first acted as trustee with a committee of inspection, and, with the sanction of the committee, employed A. & Co. as his solicitors in all matters relating to the letting and management of the estates. In 1898 M. was appointed the trustee in the bankruptcy with the same committee of inspection, and applied to them for permission to employ A. & Co. in the same capacity as before. Thereupon they passed the following resolution: "That Messrs. A. & Co. be employed by the trustee where necessary." Under this resolution M. employed A. & Co. in all matters connected with the letting and management of the estates. All the debts having been paid, A. & Co. carried in their bill of costs for taxation. The bankrupt objected to all items and charges relating to the letting and management of the estates on the ground that the written sanction of the committee for the disputed matters had not been obtained in accordance with the sections of the Acts and the Rules above stated. The committee deposed that they intended their resolution to apply to the disputed matters. The taxing master having overruled the objection, the plt. appealed:—

Held, (1.) that the resolution was in form insufficient; (2.) that the sanction of the committee need not be in writing, provided it was specific and given before the work was done; and (3.) that the bill of costs must be reviewed on this footing. In re VAVASOUR — Wright J. [1900]

In Jan., 1898, a trustee in bankruptcy disallowed a proof in the mistaken belief that it was not a provable debt, and by an oversight notice of rejection was not sent to the creditor. In Feb., 1898, the trustee applied under s. 82, sub-s. 1, of the Act to the Bd. of Trade for his release. In March, 1898, he paid a dividend, and in the list of proofs transmitted to the Bd. of Trade marked the proof as "disallowed." In April and May, 1898, he received letters written on behalf of the creditor asking in effect when the claim would be settled, but in the bonâ fide belief that the proof had been properly dealt with and disallowed he did not answer the letters nor inform the Bd. of Trade that he had received them. In June, 1898, the trustee obtained his release under s. 82, sub-s. 2. In July the creditor communicated with the Bd. of Trade, who thereupon applied to the trustee for an explanation. Some correspondence ensued, and in Jan., 1899, the Bd. of Trade revoked the order of release on the ground that it had been obtained by the suppression or concealment of material facts. The trustee appealed:—

Held, (1.) that the words "suppression or concealment of any material fact" must be read to mean such suppression or concealment as has in it an element of fraud; (2.) that on the evidence the trustee had not wilfully withheld information from the Bd. of Trade, and that under the circumstances the order of the Bd. revoking his release must be discharged, but without costs. In re HARRIS. Ex parte HASLUCK. — — — Wright J. The Bd. of Trade has power under s. 72 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, on the application of the prescribed number of dissentient creditors, to fix the remuneration of the trustee not only when the remuneration has been fixed by resolution of the creditors, but also when it has been fixed by a resolution of the committee of inspection in pursuance of authority delegated to them by a resolution of the creditors. *In re GALLARD. Under s. 72 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, the remuneration of a trustee is to be fixed by a resolution of the creditors, and is to be a commission or percentage payable partly on "the amount realized" and partly on "the amount distributed in dividend"; and s. 15 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, enacts that the commission payable on the amount realized is to be payable "only on the amount realized by the trustee."

The creditors of a bankrupt accepted a composition, and the sum required to pay the composition was provided by his father and distributed by the trustee. The creditors also passed a resolution that the remuneration of the trustee should be a commission of "5 per cent. on all amounts brought to credit and 5 per cent. on all amounts distributed to the creditors." The trustee claimed the commission on the sum provided by the father as being an "amount brought to credit" of the estate:—

Held, that the resolution, not being in accordance with the terms of s. 72 of the Act of 1883, was ultra vires:

Held, also, that the words "the amount realized" in s. 72—apart from s. 15 of the Act of 1890—mean "the amount realized by the trustee"; that the sum provided by the father was not a sum "realized by the trustee," and, therefore, that the commission claimed was not payable.

Semble, the words "distributed in dividend" in s. 72 mean "distributed in dividend out of assets realized by the trustee." In re CHRISTIE. Ex parte CHRISTIE Wright J. [1899] W. N. 217; [1900] 1 Q. B. 5

252. — Stock Exchange—Defaulting broker—Rules of the Stock Exchange—Official assignee of the Stock Exchange—Stock Exchange creditors—Outside creditors—Sum due to and from stock-jobbers—Book debts—Title of trustee in bankruptcy as against official assignee.

On Jan. 3, 1899, a receiving order was made against one W., a broker on the Stock Exchange, on a creditor's petition based on an act of bankruptcy committed on the previous Dec. 29; adjudication followed, and one K. became the trustee in bankruptcy. It happened that Dec. 29 was "ticket" day on the Exchange, Dec. 28 was account day, and Dec. 30 was pay-day. On Dec. 30, W. was officially declared a defaulter on the Exchange, and the same day the official assignee of the Stock Exchange, in accordance with the practice and rules of the Exchange, closed all W.'s contracts on the Exchange, and, after receiving and paying all sums due to or by members of the Exchange, there remained a surplus of about 600l. in his hands. W. had large outside liabilities. The official assignee had notice of the act of bankruptcy committed on Dec. 29. Two of the sums so received by the official assignee were: (1) a sum of 117l. 15s. 2d., being the proceeds of cheques sent to W. on Dec. 30 by outside customers to pay for certain contracts made by him on their behalf with jobbers on the Exchange; (2) a sum of 1262l. 15s. 2d. due to W. by jobbers on the Exchange:—

Held, on the evidence that as to 137l., part of the sum of 1262l. 15s. 2d., it represented merely the provisional or "making up price" on "ticket" day. It was therefore purely an artificial fund temporarily created for a temporary and special purpose, and not shewn to be in any sense the property of the bankrupt or of any of his clients, and fell within the principle of In re Plumby, (1880) 13 Ch. D. 667, and therefore the trustee was not entitled to it. As to the balance of 1262l. 15s. 2d., it did not represent the amount payable for the purchase or sale of a particular sum of stock, but merely the differences payable in the usual way on the Exchange in speculative transactions made by W. on behalf of outside clients, and which, if W. had received, he would not have held in a fiduciary capacity for the outside clients. This balance, therefore, was merely a book debt of W.'s, and was covered by the decision in King v. Hutton, [1899] 2 Q. B. 555; C. A. [1900] 2 Q. B. 504 (see next Case), and passed to his trustee in bankruptcy. The same considerations applied to the 117l. 15s. 2d., which comprised sums sent to W. by outside clients, not to pay for the purchase of any particular stock, but to provide for the differences payable by them. The trustee, therefore, was also entitled to these sums. In re WOODD. Ex parte KING Wright J. [1900] W. N. 84

Customer's speculative account—Bankruptcy of broker—Differences due to customer—Surplus in hands of the official assignee of the Stock Exchange.

A broker on the Stock Exchange was officially declared a defaulter. The same day the official assignee, under the Rules of the Stock Exchange, closed all accounts of the broker then open, and received and paid all amounts owing by or to him on the Stock Exchange, and, after payment of all the Stock Exchange liabilities of the broker, there remained a surplus in the hands of the official assignee. Shortly afterwards the broker was adjudicated bankrupt with large outside liabilities. Part of the surplus above mentioned comprised a sum of money which represented differences, being profits, due on contracts made with jobbers on the Stock Exchange by the broker as agent for an outside customer, who was running a speculative account on the Stock Exchange through him, and which the broker, on the day he became a defaulter, had been then solvent, would have received for the customer. Both the customer and the trustee in bankruptcy of the broker having claimed this sum of money, the official assignee paid it into court under an interpleader summons:—

Held, that the sum of money in question was merely a book debt of the broker and formed part of his general assets, and therefore passed to his trustee in bankruptcy; and that the remedy of the customer was to prove in the bankruptcy for the amount.

There is nothing in the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, to shew that it was the intention of the legislature, when vesting a bankrupt's equitable choses in action in the trustee, to relieve him of the effect of the rules of equity as to perfecting his title by notice to the holders of the fund. A bankrupt became entitled to a reversionary interest in a fund held by trustees under a will, but did not know of it nor include it in his statement of affairs. Before his discharge it fell into possession; after discharge he mortgaged it to a person who had no notice of the bankruptcy, and gave notice to the trustees of his mortgage:—

Held, that the subsequent mortgagee by his notice had obtained priority over the trustee in bankruptcy. In re STONE'S WILL

D. 262—that until his trustee intervenes all transactions by a bankrupt after his bankruptcy with any person dealing with him bona fide and for value, in respect of his after-acquired property, are valid against the trustee—applies where the after-acquired property consists of a legacy and a share of residue under a will, even where the trustee intervenes before the bequeathed property has reached the hands of a bona fide equitable assignee.

An assignment of the future-acquired property is not necessarily mala fide because at the time the assignee has knowledge of the assignor's bankruptcy and of the ignorance of the trustee in bankruptcy that the bankrupt has acquired the assigned property.

The law is the same on this point in the Colony of Victoria. HUNT v. FRIPP

The principles which underlie s. 53 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, with respect to the "salary or income" of a bankrupt, are also applicable to his "personal earnings." royalty, i.e. 20l., becoming payable were claimed by the trustee in bankruptcy as after-acquired property of the bankrupt. The co. took out an interpleader summons in the High Court, which was remitted to a county court for decision. The county court judge held that the 20l. was in the nature of personal earnings and belonged to the bankrupt, and refused leave to appeal. Subsequent royalties became due, and the trustee applied to the Bankruptcy Court for a declaration that they vested in him as after-acquired property of the bankrupt:—

Held, that the judgment of the county court estopped the trustee from asserting that the royalties were not the personal earnings of the bankrupt, but that 5l. a week was a fitting sum for the reasonable maintenance of the bankrupt and his family, and that the residue passed to the trustee in bankruptcy:

But held, also, that the solicitor of the bankrupt had as against the trustee a first charge for his costs of creating the fund, i.e., his costs properly incurred in taking out and maintaining the letters patent and carrying through the arrangements with the co.

The co. supplied R. during his bankruptcy with balls according to the contract, intending that he might sell them and apply the proceeds to his own use:—

promissory notes of the father and son; and, by way of further consideration, the father surrendered his debentures and a private debt due to him from the co. The father and son also covenanted to pay off any then unascertained creditors of the co., and to indemnify the co. and its assets against all claims in respect of the business, and the father covenanted with the son that all moneys paid by him, the father, under the arrangement, and all property thereby handed over by him to the son, should be treated "as an absolute and irrevocable gift" from him to the son.

The son thereupon took over the business, and carried it on with such success that, by means partly of his earnings and partly by contributions from the father, the whole of the purchase-moneys and debts payable under the arrangement were discharged. Subsequently, in March, 1899, the father became bankrupt; whereupon the trustee in bankruptcy applied to have the transfer of the business to the son under the arrangement of 1898 declared void as a "settlement" within s. 47 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883:—

Held, by the C. A. (affirming Wright J.), that the mere fact that the business had been acquired by the son partly by means of money obtained from or paid by the father was not sufficient to make the transfer a "settlement" within s. 47.

"Settlement" in s. 47 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, means such a conveyance or transfer by the donor as contemplates the retention of the property by the donee, either in its original form or in such a form that it can be traced, and does not extend to a conveyance or transfer of property which cannot be traced, as, for instance, where there is a gift of money to be employed in a business or in the purchase of a business, and the money is so employed or spent, the business itself not being settled.

within two years of his bankruptcy, without restricting the donee's power of alienation, but with intention that the donee shall use or retain the property for an indeterminate time, are voluntary settlements within the meaning of s. 47 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, and void as against the trustee in bankruptcy, but without prejudice to any sale or disposition of the property made by the donee before the bankruptcy in good faith and without notice of an available act of bankruptcy. But the donee may have to account for the proceeds of any such sale or disposition remaining in his hands at the commencement of the bankruptcy.

The payment of a premium on a life policy is not to be regarded as securing a certain part of the money assured by the policy. The whole of the premiums are paid to keep up the policy, and no proportionate part of the money payable under it is represented by the payment of any particular premium.

Consequently, where the owner of a policy on his life by a post-nuptial settlement in 1877 assigned it to trustees for his wife and children, and he himself continued to pay the premiums voluntarily, being under no covenant with the trustees to do so, and in 1899 became bankrupt and died:—

Held, that no part of the payments of premiums during the ten years preceding the bankruptcy was a "settlement" within s. 47 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, so as to entitle the trustee in bankruptcy to any proportionate part of the policy moneys.

ruptcy Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 52), s. 47—Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 75), s. 3.

In order to constitute a "purchaser in good faith" within s. 47 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, it is sufficient if there be good faith on the part of the purchaser; it is not necessary that both parties to the transaction should act in good faith. A wife (married in 1883) after marriage allowed her separate property to pass into her husband's hands, but not as a gift nor as a loan for the purposes of his trade. The husband having applied part of the property to his own use, settled the residue, together with property of his own, upon trusts under which he took a life interest, with a proviso for cesser in the event of his bankruptcy; the wife had no notice of any fraudulent intention on the husband's part:—

Held, (1) that the settlement was not void under s. 47 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883; (2) that to the extent of the wife's property received by the husband the proviso for the cesser of his life interest was good; and (3) that s. 3 of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882, did not apply. *MACKINTOSH v. According to the true construction of s. 47 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, a voluntary settlement is not void against the settlor's trustee in bankruptcy from its date, but is only void against the trustee from the time when his title accrues; so that if before that time the property comprised in the settlement has been sold, bonâ fide, to a purchaser for value, the title of the purchaser will be good as against the trustee.

By s. 3 of the Bastardy Laws Amendment Act, 1872, an affiliation summons may be applied for either before the birth of the child "or at any time within twelve months from the birth of such child . . . or at any time within the twelve months next after the return to England of the man alleged to be the father of such child, upon proof that he ceased to reside in England within the twelve months next after the birth of such child."—The alleged father of a bastard child left England about a month before the child's birth, and did not return till the child was fifteen months old. The mother then took out a summons which was dismissed for want of jurisdiction on the ground that the summons was out of time.

Held, that the alleged father ceased to reside in England during the whole period of his absence; that he was therefore a person who had "ceased to reside in England within the twelve months next after the birth of such child" within the meaning of s. 3 of the Act of 1872, and that the justices had jurisdiction to adjudicate upon a summons taken out within twelve months after his return. *REG. v. Held, that his "last place of abode" for service within s. 4 of the Bastardy Laws Amendment Act, 1872, was his American residence, and the service was bad:

Held, also, that the Court had power on an application for a certiorari to inquire into the validity of the service, as the jurisdiction of the justices only attached on proof that the summons was duly served. REG. v. FARMER alleged to be the father left the house where he had up to that time resided, and went to America, but the evidence did not show that he had any place of abode in America. Ten days after the birth a summons was left at the house where he had resided:—

Held, that this house was his last place of abode, within the meaning of the Act, and the service was sufficient.

A bastard child having been born in Sept. 1896, the mother on Oct. 21, 1896, made three separate applications to three different justices for a bastardy summons against the deft., but as she was at that time unable to find him the issue of the summons was suspended. In July, 1897, the mother, having found the deft., procured one of the three justices to issue his summons upon the application so made to him on Oct. 21, 1896. On Nov. 3, 1897, that summons was heard, and dismissed on the ground that the evidence was insufficient. On Nov. 17, 1897, she procured another of the three justices to issue a further summons against the deft., which summons purported to be founded on the application to the said justice of Oct. 21, 1896. The summons was heard and a bastardy order made:—

Held, that the three applications made on Oct. 21, 1896, were in substance but one application, and were exhausted by the hearing and dismissal of the summons on Nov. 3, 1897, and that the order was consequently made without jurisdiction. REG. v. ROBINSON

A branch of a country banking co. received from a customer a bill of exchange and forwarded it to a London bank for presentation. The bill was dishonoured, and the London bank on the following day sent notice of dishonour by post to a branch of the country banking co., but not to the branch from which they had received the bill. On the next day they discovered the mistake, and telegraphed notice of dishonour to the branch from which they had received the bill. The notice given by that branch, and all subsequent notices, including that to the deft., who was an indorser of the bill, were sent in due time. In an action by the holder of the bill :—

Held, by A. L. Smith and Rigby L.J.J., Collins L.J. dissenting, that sufficient notice of dishonour had been sent by the London bank to comply with the provisions of s. 49, sub-ss. 12, 13, of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882.

Held, by Collins L.J., that for the purpose of notice of dishonour the branches of a bank must be regarded as distinct, that the written notice

A deft. was restrained from negotiating certain bills payable to his order. The bills at the date of the order were in the possession of his solicitor as a security for a debt. Subsequently deft., at the solicitor's request, indorsed one of the bills:—

Held, that the delivery of unindorsed bills to the solicitor was not negotiating them; that the indorsement by converting the solicitor from a transferee into a "holder" was negotiation; and that the solicitor, by exercising his right to call for indorsement under s. 31, sub-s. 4, of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, and the deft. by making the indorsement were guilty of a contempt of Court. "Bearer" means the person in possession of a bill payable to "bearer." "Holder" means the payee or indorsee of a bill or note. DAY v. LONGHURST - Stirling J. [1893] W. N. 3

11. — Indorser—Bill not complete and regular—Indorsement by way of security—Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 61), ss. 55, 56.

It was agreed between the plts. and A., who owed them money, that they should draw a bill on him, and that the deft., who was A.'s father, should indorse it to guarantee payment. They accordingly drew a bill on A. to their own order and, without indorsing it, gave it to A., who returned it to them accepted by himself, and indorsed by the deft. They then indorsed it, and it was not paid at maturity.

In an action against the deft.:—

Held, that he was not liable as indorser under s. 55 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, nor as having incurred the liabilities of indorser under s. 56, since at the time he put his name on the bill it was not complete and regular on the face of it, as it lacked the plt.'s indorsement; nor was he liable on a contract of suretyship, since the provisions of the Statute of Frauds were not satisfied.

In s. 61 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, which enacts that when the acceptor of a bill is or becomes the holder of it at or after its maturity, in his own right, the bill is discharged, the expression “in his own right” is not used in contradistinction to a right in a representative capacity, but indicates a right not subject to that of another person, and good against all the world.

The deft. gave three promissory notes to cover his indebtedness to the payee, and subsequently two more notes, in substitution for the first three and to cover further advances. All the notes were payable on demand and were given on the understanding that they should not be negotiated. The payee indorsed all five notes generally to the plts. After the payee had so negotiated the notes the deft. paid to him the amount due on the last two notes, but the deft. was not aware that the payee had parted with the notes, and did not ask for or receive any of them from him. At a later date the payee obtained the five notes from the plts. by fraud, and handed them to the deft. In an action by the plts. on the notes:—

Held, that the deft., when he received back the notes, did not become holder for value, since the previous satisfaction of the notes by him was not a consideration given by him when he received back the notes, and that as they were then overdue he acquired no better title than the payee had while they were in his hands, and that the plts., being entitled to disaffirm the transaction between themselves and the payee, by which the latter obtained possession of the notes, could recover in the action. *NASH v. Held (affirming the decision of Kekewich J.), that a parol renunciation by the holder of all rights under a promissory note, accompanied by a delivery of the note to a devisee of the maker, the real estate in whose hands was liable to the payment of the debt, and who had for some time paid interest on it, did not operate as a

A bill of exchange drawn and accepted by English firms and payable in England was indorsed in Norway by the payees to the order of M., who indorsed it in blank, and handed it in Norway to S. as agent for A., an Englishman resident in London, and for an English firm of A. & Co. in which A. & J. were partners. While the bill was current it was seized in execution under a Norwegian judgment against J., and when overdue was sold by auction to M., who sold the bill in Sweden to K. without any notice of infirmity of title. On claims by K. and A. & Co. to the proceeds of the bill:—

Held, (1) that as the question was, which of two persons was entitled to receive payment and the payer was not affected, the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, s. 72, did not apply; (2) that the case was governed by the law of the country (Norway) where the bill was transferred, and, on that law, the equitable claim of A. & Co. could not be sustained. *ALCOCK v. An unmarried woman of the name of Ott, about the year 1879, went to live with a man as his mistress and took the name of Mrs. Spencer, by which name alone she was thenceforward known. In 1893 the man made a settlement upon her, and in that settlement she was described by her true name of Ott. In 1899 she executed an absolute deed of assignment of certain personal chattels to the trustees of the settlement, by whom it was registered, and in that deed of assignment and the registration of it she was described by the name of Ott alone, no reference being made to the name of Spencer. The chattels comprised in the deed having been seized in execution of a judgment, the trustees of the settlement claimed them. On the trial of an interpleader issue, it was contended by the execution creditor that the deed, not having been registered in the name of Spencer, was invalid :—

Held, that the Bills of Sale Act, 1878, did not require the name of the grantor to be stated at all, and that consequently the insertion in the register of a name other than that by which alone the grantor was known would not invalidate the registration, even though the effect of it was to deprive persons searching the register of all means of ascertaining therefrom whether the grantor was the true owner or not of the chattels which were in her possession. *STOKES v. The deed contained a proviso that no creditor should benefit who did not within three months assent to the deed:—

Held, that notwithstanding the proviso, the deed was “an assignment for the benefit of the creditors of the person making the same,” within s. 4 of the Bills of Sale Act, 1878, and did not require to be registered as a bill of sale. HADLEY & SON v. BEEDOM

He had conducted the negotiations with respect to the giving of the bill of sale and the payment of the composition, and he had to see that such composition was paid to the creditors other than the grantees:—

Held, that the bill of sale was duly attested, “because the attesting witness was not a “party thereto” within the meaning of s. 10 of the Act of 1882. PEACE v. BROOKS

Subsequently, by letter written to the mortgagee, W. acknowledged that he held the mortgaged premises as tenant at a weekly rent slightly in excess of the interest under the mortgage, admitted arrears of rent to be due, and undertook to deliver up possession at any time on four weeks' notice:—

This agreement was reduced into writing and the sheriff was paid out, the man in possession remaining in possession for the auctioneer:—

Held, that the written agreement was not an assurance or licence to take possession, or in any other respect a bill of sale within the Acts of 1878 or 1882; as it did not constitute the auctioneer's title, and did not operate, and was not intended to operate, the goods were actually transferred from sheriff to auctioneer. CHARLES-WORTH v. A husband and wife executed a bill of sale to T. on chattels to secure repayment of a loan of 300l. with simple interest. The wife on the same day mortgaged her interest under certain wills to T. to secure repayment of 300l. with compound interest. Both securities were given for the same debt and as part of the same transaction. The bill was registered, but the mortgage was not:—

Held, that the agreement in the mortgage to pay compound interest was a condition which ought to have been written on the same paper as the bill, and that the bill was therefore void under s. 10, sub-s. 3, of the Bills of Sale Act, 1878.

In considering whether a defeasance or condition is within that sub-s., it is immaterial whether it is in favour of grantor or grantee. EDWARDS v. MARCUS - C. A. [1894] 1 Q. B. 587 adhered to." These rules and regulations contained various provisions very burdensome to the plt., and which had not previously been mentioned to him. He did not assent so as to bind himself to them; but the deft. afterwards wrote to him treating the rules and regulations as part of the bargain:—

Held, that the bargain being complete at the time when the bill of sale was executed, and the rules and regulations being no part of it, the false statement of the deft. that they were part of the bargain did not enable the Court to hold as against him that they were part of it, and so to hold the bill of sale void as being made subject to a condition or defeasance not expressed in it. LINFORTH v. 17. — Consideration — Statement of — Farm stock, specific description of — Schedule — Accordance with form — Bills of Sale Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 43), ss. 4, 8, 9.

A bill of sale given in consideration of a present advance is bad if it fails to contain an acknowledgment of the receipt of the money.

Where the chattels comprised in a bill of sale are of a kind which requires to be replaced from time to time by the substitution of other similar chattels, as in the case of the live stock on a farm, a more specific description of them in the schedule is necessary than in the case of chattels which do not require to be replaced with the same degree of frequency, such as the furniture of a house.

A bill of sale expressed the consideration to be a sum of money "now due and owing." In fact, part of the said sum was advanced contemporaneously with the execution of the deed. Part of the chattels comprised in the bill were described in the schedule as "Stock: 2 horses, 4 cows." There was no evidence that at the date of the bill there were any other horses or cows on the premises of the grantor:—

Held, that there was not such a specific description of the stock as to satisfy s. 4 of the Bills of Sale Act, 1882; and that the bill of sale was void on the grounds that the consideration was not truly stated, and that, as the bill omitted to acknowledge the receipt of the money then advanced, it was not in accordance with the statutory form. DAVIES v. Of the money paid by the grantee to the grantor a part was, in pursuance of a previous agreement between them, applied by the grantor to the retirement of a promissory note then current upon which the grantor and grantee were jointly and severally liable:—

Held, that as the liability, to the satisfaction of which the money was agreed to be applied, was a liability to a third person and not to the grantee, the fact that the liability was not a debt already due did not render it obligatory to set out in the bill of sale the agreement as to the application of the money, and that the considera-

19. — Consideration not truly stated — Sum payable in futuro — Sum under 30l. — Bills of Sale Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 43), ss. 8, 9, 12.

A bill of sale purported to be given in consideration of 13l. 12s. then owing by the grantors upon a promissory note and of 16l. 8s. then paid to the grantors, making together the sum of 30l., the receipt of which the grantors thereby acknowledged. The promissory note referred to was for the sum of 14l. 3s. 4d. payable by weekly instalments of 11s. 4d., of which one had been paid and the remainder had not become payable when the bill of sale was given. The consideration paid for the promissory note was 10l. only. The sum of 16l. 8s. was paid to the grantors upon the execution of the bill of sale:—

Held, that the bill of sale was void as not truly stating the consideration for which it was given, and as being given in consideration of a sum under 30l. DARLOW v. BLAND

20. — Consideration — Statement of — Term for defeasance of security — Bills of Sale Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 43), ss. 8, 9.

An untrue statement of the consideration is not a deviation from the form in the sched. to the Bills of Sale Act, 1882; and therefore does not render the bill wholly void under s. 9, but only in respect of the personal chattels comprised therein under s. 8. A collateral agreement that the bill of sale shall not be made available till certain other securities were exhausted is not a term for the "defeasance" of the security; and the non-insertion of such agreement does not make the bill void under s. 9, as not being in accordance with the form in the schedule. HESELTINE v. A debtor who owed a sum of money partly secured by an existing bill of sale executed a second bill of sale of the same chattels to secure a fresh advance, on the understanding that out of the sum advanced he should pay off the existing debt. The bill of sale was expressed to be made in consideration of the fresh advance, without alluding to the intended application of the money. The money was actually paid to the grantor and applied by him as agreed:—

By a bill of sale the grantor covenanted (inter alia) to produce “when called upon” the last receipt for the rent, rates and taxes of the premises where the chattels were; and the deed provided that the chattels thereby assigned should not be liable to seizure or to be taken possession of by the grantee for any cause other than those specified in s. 7 of the Bills of Sale Act, 1882 (the section being set out); and then followed a further proviso that if the chattels thereby assigned should be seized or taken possession of by the grantee “in consequence of the breach of any of the covenants therein contained,” he should be at liberty to sell the same. The trustee in bankruptcy of the grantor contended that the bill of sale was void because the second proviso enabled the grantor to seize on non-production of receipts for rent, &c., on an oral demand, whereas the Act requires the demand to be made in writing:—

Held, that the deed considered as a whole substantially complied with the provisions of the Act, and was valid. In re BULLOCK. Ex parte WARD

A bill of sale was given to secure the repayment of money advanced by several creditors of the grantor, in order to enable him to pay a composition to them and to others of his creditors. It contained stipulations that the grantor, a trader, should not during the existence of the security obtain credit to the extent of 10*l*. without the consent of one of the firms parties thereto, but this clause was not to apply to purchases of goods from any of those firms; that the grantor would give them the greater portion of his business, and that he would keep proper books of account of his business, and permit any of the firms or their agent to inspect the same:—

Held, that the insertion of those stipulations rendered the bill of sale void, under s. 9 of the Act of 1882, as not in accordance with the form in the schedule. PEACE v. BROOKES

and contended that the agreement was a bill of sale and void for want of registration:—

Held, (1) that the agreement gave no power to seize goods, but only to retain possession of goods come to his hands; (2) that when the goods came to the agent's hands he had possession coupled with an agreement which gave him a legal, not an equitable right, and the agreement was not void as a bill of sale. *MORRIS v. A debtor gave a bill of sale of goods as security for a loan. The sheriff having taken the goods in execution on behalf of a judgment creditor of the grantor, the grantee gave the sheriff notice of his claim. The sheriff took out an interpleader summons, and on the same day a receiving order in bankruptcy was made against the grantor, and he was afterwards adjudged bankrupt. The official receiver did not claim the goods under the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, s. 11, but appeared on the hearing of the interpleader summons and concurred with the judgment creditor in asking for a sale under Order LVII., r. 12, and an order for the sale was accordingly made. It appeared on the evidence that the sale of the goods by the sheriff was not likely to produce enough to pay what was due on the bill of sale:—

Held, that, assuming Order LVII., r. 12, not to be defeated by s. 11 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, a sale ought not to be ordered, and that as it was very doubtful whether the goods would realize enough to pay the bill of sale holder, and neither the official receiver nor the judgment creditor were willing to redeem or to give a guarantee against loss if the proceeds of sale proved insufficient, the proper course was to order the sheriff to withdraw.

Semble, that if the official receiver had asked for the delivery of the goods to him under s. 11 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, the operation of Order LVII., r. 12, would have been excluded, but that as he had not so done, but asked for a sale, that rule could be applied. STERN v. TEGNER of the bond was that if the debt. should at all times thereafter, in obedience to a perpetual injunction granted by the High Court of Justice, refrain from trespassing on the plt.'s lands therein mentioned, or the walls, gates, or fences thereof, or inclosing the same, and from pulling down or removing or otherwise injuring the same, or inciting others to commit any such trespasses, the obligation should be void. The debt. committed a breach of the injunction :—

Two properties belonging to plt. and debt. were separated by a hedge and ditch. The hedge was on plt.’s side of the ditch, and both were the property of plt.’s predecessor in title, who in 1865 had made certain use of the ditch, covered over the ditch, putting in drain-pipes and allowing the drainage of both houses to pass thereby.

Thenceforward deft. used the surface of the ditch as part of his garden, while plt. cut the hedge from deft.'s side when necessary, and on two or three occasions opened the ditch to clean out the drain :—

Held, assuming that plt. had originally owned the ditch, that deft.'s acts were sufficient to dispossess plt. within 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 3, and that plt.'s rights were now statute-barred.

By the Public Health Act, 1875, s. 158, where the execution of any work is an offence, in respect whereof the offender is liable in respect of any by-law to a penalty, the existence of the work during its continuance in such a form and state as to be in contravention of the by-law shall be deemed to be a continuing offence.

A builder was convicted for building a house without sufficient air space, contrary to a by-law. The builder was not the owner, and had not been in possession, nor had any right to go on the premises after the conviction. Afterwards the builder was prosecuted for a continuing offence in respect of the continuance of the work in the same state, in contravention of the by-law, and convicted.

On a case stated:—

Held, that the builder, having no power to remedy the breach complained of, was not guilty of a continuing offence, and the conviction was wrong. WELSH & SON v. WEST HAM CORPORATION — — — Div. Ct. [1900] 1 Q. B. 324

2. — Party wall—Adjoining owners—Implied contract to pay half cost of party wall.

A building society, who were the mortgagees of a building estate, joined with the mortgagor in selling a site on the estate to a purchaser; the conveyance contained a covenant by the purchaser to perform the building and other conditions in the schedule, one of which was that the purchaser first building a party wall should be repaid half the value by the purchaser of the adjoining site. The purchaser, having built a house on the site, mortgaged it to the building society, who subsequently under their power of sale sold it to the plt. At a later date the building society, in exercise of their power of sale under the original mortgage of the building estate, sold the residue of the estate to a company, who in their turn sold to the defts. a site adjoining the plt.'s house, the agreement of sale containing a similar (though not verbally identical) condition as to party walls to that above mentioned. The defts. built a house on their site, making use for that purpose of the plt.'s party wall, half of which (as provided by the building conditions) was built on the plt.'s, and half on the defts.' land :—

Held, that the circumstances raised an implied contract on the part of the defts. to pay half the cost of the party wall to the plt. as the owner of the adjoining house, notwithstanding that the wall had in fact been built by the plt.'s predecessor in title. IRVING v. TURNBULL

Act. 93 of the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, provides that nothing therein or in the Special Act contained shall be deemed to exempt the undertakers "from any Act for improving the sanitary condition of towns and populous places which may be passed in the same session of Parliament in which the special Act is passed, or any future session of Parliament." A water co. by their special Act, passed in 1897, and incorporating the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, were empowered to erect and maintain a water tower in a specified place. Shortly after the special Act came into force the local sanitary authority of the district, under the powers given by s. 157 of the Public Health Act, 1875, made by-laws providing that any person intending to erect a building should give the local authority notice of his intention and of the date on which the building was to be commenced, and deliver to them plans and sections of it, and a description of the materials with which it was to be constructed. The special Act did not incorporate the Public Health Act, 1875, but contained no provisions inconsistent with s. 157 of that Act or with the by-laws :—

Held, with respect to the erection of the water tower authorized by the special Act, that s. 93 of the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, had not the effect of exempting the water co. from the provisions of the Public Health Act, 1875, and that they were bound to comply with the by-laws made by the local sanitary authority under that Act. *UCKFIELD RURAL COUNCIL v. BUILDING SCHEME—Restrictive condition—Positive covenant—Implied negative stipulation.

Building land described as adapted for shops and business premises was put up for sale by auction subject to a condition that the purchasers of certain specified lots should respectively covenant with the vendors to erect within a given time on each of the lots respectively purchased by them a shop and dwelling-house of a given minimum value, but the lots in question remained unsold :—

Held, applying the test in Oriental Steamship Co. v. Tylor, [1893] 2 Q. B. 518, 527, that, having regard to the absence of any express provision as to the maintenance of the contemplated buildings when erected as shops and dwelling-houses, no negative stipulation ought to be implied that nothing but shops and dwelling-houses should be erected on the lots in question; consequently, that the vendors could not be restrained, at the instance of the purchaser of an adjoining lot, from erecting on the unsold lots a fire-engine station of a value exceeding the aggregate value of the contemplated buildings, there being no such departure from the condition as to render the whole transaction futile. *HOLFORD v. The conveyance contained a covenant by the pl.t. to observe the conditions, but no covenant by the corporation to be bound by them as to the unsold lots. The Treasury were not informed that there was a building scheme. Subsequently the corporation agreed to sell two other lots to trustees for a church. The pl.t. was refused an injunction restraining them from so doing, for the Treasury had only approved what was within the four corners of his conveyance, and without their approval the pl.t. could not sustain the larger outside right claimed by him. *DAVIS v. An instrument of dissolution under s. 32 of the Building Societies Act, 1874, is not equivalent in its operation to a winding-up order made by the Court. Under such an instrument, advanced members who had covenanted to pay up their advances by instalments cannot be compelled to do so forthwith. The signature of a member of a building society to one only of the two duplicate instruments of dissolution is inoperative.

An infant member of a building society can consent to dissolution of the society; and the consent of a principal to such a dissolution may be signed by an agent on his behalf.

For the purpose of consenting to dissolution of a building society joint holders of a share are to be considered one member, and must all sign the instrument of dissolution.

A member of a building society who holds shares both jointly and severally need not sign the instrument of dissolution in more than one place to testify consent in respect of all his shares. DENNISON v. JEFFS North J. [1896] 1 Ch. 611

6. — Priority of payment of members.

A building society having suffered loss, passed a resolution in 1889 to reduce the shares from 12*l.* to 10*l.* The rules then in force entitled any unadvanced member to withdraw his payments on account of shares by giving one month's notice, such withdrawing members to be paid in rotation, but not more than one withdrawing member was entitled to be paid at each monthly meeting. In Feb. 1890, altered rules were adopted entitling members to withdraw amounts standing to their credit by giving one month's written notice, the amount due in respect of shares to be five-sixths of the net amount paid on them. In 1892 an instrument of dissolution, under s. 32 of the Building Societies Act, 1874, was executed and registered; some members had given notice of withdrawal before the losses were known, others before the reduction of the shares.

BUILDING SOCIETY (Dissolution)—continued.—others after the reduction. One member had not assented to the reduction. Other members had not given notice of withdrawal:—

Held, (1) that all the members were bound by the reduction; (2) that the rule as to priority of payment applied to all who had given a month's notice of withdrawal before the date of the instrument of dissolution. BARNARD v. TOMSON

Mortgage.

7. — Infant borrowing member—Mortgage for advances—Repudiation on attaining twenty-one—Infants Relief Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 62), s. 1—Building Societies Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 42), ss. 13, 14, 21, and 38.

The Building Societies Act, 1874, s. 13, empowers building societies registered under the Act to make advances to its members by way of mortgage; s. 21 makes the rules of the society binding on all the members; and s. 38 enacts that any person under the age of twenty-one may be admitted a member of the society, unless such admission is prohibited by the rules, and may give "all necessary acquittances."

The Infants Relief Act, 1874, s. 1, enacts that all contracts, whether by specialty or by simple contract, thenceforth entered into by infants for the repayment of money lent or to be lent . . . shall be absolutely void, but this enactment shall not invalidate any contract into which an infant may, by any existing or future statute, or by the rules of common law or equity, enter.

In 1898 T., a member of a building society registered under the Building Societies Act, 1874, and whose rules enabled infants to become members, obtained advances to enable her to purchase some land and to complete some houses thereon. The transaction was carried out by a conveyance of the land to T., and a mortgage of it by T. to the society in the usual form as security for the advances made and to be made to her. At this time T. was a minor, but this was not known to the society. In 1899 T. attained her majority, and shortly afterwards brought an action against the society to set aside the mortgage as void under the Infants Relief Act, 1874. The society contended (1) that by virtue of the provisions of the Building Societies Act, 1874, and their rules, the mortgage was valid; and (2) that in any event T. could not retain the property and at the same time repudiate the charge created by the mortgage:—

Held, without deciding the first question, that the purchase and mortgage were one transaction, and that under the circumstances T. could not retain the property free from the charge upon it for the advances made by the society.

Quære, whether an infant borrowing member of a building society registered under the Building Societies Act, 1874, and whose rules enable infants to become members, can execute a valid mortgage to the society for advances. THURSTON v. An advanced member of a society executed a mortgage to the society with a proviso for redemption on payment of the several sums which under the constitution and rules and regulations of the society ought to be paid in respect of his shares and a covenant to the same effect. At the date of the mortgage advanced members were not liable to contribute to losses; but the rules were subsequently altered so as to make them liable, and a levy was made for contribution to losses suffered:—

Held, that the advanced member was not entitled to redeem except upon payment of his proportion of the levy. BRADBURY v. WILD

Ultra Vires.

9. — Alteration of rules—Repayment of fully paid-up shares—Building Societies Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 42), ss. 16, 18—Building Societies Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 47), ss. 1, 25, sub-s. 2.

The power of altering the rules of a building society established under the Building Societies Act of 6 & 7 Will. 4, and subsequently incorporated under the Building Societies Act, 1874, now depends on s. 18 of the Act of 1874 and s. 1 of the Building Societies Act, 1894.

A resolution duly passed by a majority of three-fourths of the members present at a special meeting for making a rule that the amount due from the society to each member in respect of any share or shares held by him on December 1, 1896, should be deemed to be and taken as thirty-three-fiftieths of the net amount paid on such share or shares is not ultra vires. STROMMINGER v. The secretary of a society received deposits in excess of the prescribed limits, giving, in pursuance of the director's authority so to do, provisional receipts followed by formal receipts signed by the directors, and appropriated part of the moneys deposited:—

Held, that every director who was a member of the board when the deposit was received was personally liable under s. 43 of the Building Societies Act, 1874, for the deposits made in excess of the prescribed limits. CROSS v. FISHER

12. — New rules—Known insolvency at time of passing—Ultra vires—Transfer of properties to members in exchange for shares—Payment of interest on shares.

A rule conferring special powers of realization and of compromising and settling claims may be rightly passed by a building society after known and recognised insolvency, so long as the rule does not of necessity involve altering the constitutional rights of its members inter se or the rights of creditors, inasmuch as it may be exercised so as to be advantageous to all members alike.

If, however, such a rule is so exercised as to give unfair or undue advantage to individuals, this will be a breach of trust.

A building society under its rules issued three classes of shares—A, B, and C. Of these the C shares were preferential, the holders being entitled to be paid interest in lieu of bonus and other periodical payments. In Oct., 1889, the society passed a rule that after Dec. 31, 1890, no further advances should be made upon shares then existing, and that from and after the passing of the rule the withdrawal of shares (other than C shares) by priority of notice should cease, and that the funds of the society should be applied, amongst other things, to the payment of capital and interest on the C shares.

On Oct. 28, 1891, the society passed the following rule: "In order to facilitate the realization of any properties now or at any time in the possession of the society, the directors shall have power to sell the same or any part thereof to any member, and receive in payment, either wholly or in part, any fully paid or subscription shares held by the member, whether under notice of withdrawal or not, provided that such shares shall be taken subject to the deduction of any withdrawal fee in force for the time being."

At the time of passing the rule of Oct., 1889, and thenceforward the society was known both to its officers and members to be insolvent in the sense that the assets of the society were not sufficient to repay in full the sum due to members on their shares; but there were no outside creditors.

The directors having acted in pursuance of the above rule of Oct., 1891:—

Held, in an action commenced against them as having acted ultra vires, that the rule of Oct., 1891, was not ultra vires, and that the directors were not liable for a breach of trust, and, further, that the payment of interest on the C shares was in accordance with the contract notwithstanding that the society was insolvent. *SIXTH WEST KENT MUTUAL BUILDING SOCIETY v. The 6000*l.* was handed to the society by H., who was credited therewith in part discharge of the 17,000*l.*:—

Held, (1) that the transaction with the insurance co. was ultra vires the society; (2) that the co.'s security for 6000*l.* was postponed to the society's security for 11,000*l.*; and (3) that the co. was not entitled to the security as against the society in respect of any part of the 6000*l.* applied in payment of any liabilities properly payable by the society. *PORTSEA ISLAND BUILDING SOCIETY v. debts depends, not on the law of partnership nor on the contract of the members inter se, but on the law of principal and agent, and if the assets are insufficient such members, whether advanced or unadvanced, are liable as contributories for such debts if incurred while they were members.

In the winding-up of a society registered under the Act of 1836, the claims were met in the following order of priority:—

(1.) Costs of realization of assets including costs of all parties on applications which were test cases.

(2.) Payment of ordinary creditors and depositors pari passu.

(3.) Deficiency due to ordinary creditors and estimated costs of winding-up other than realization to be met by a call on all members advanced or unadvanced.

In the winding-up in the county-court of a building society registered under the Building Societies Act, 1874, a special case for the opinion of the High Court may be stated under s. 3 (3) of the Winding-up Act, 1890.

In this case it was held that on the merits the petition for the compulsory winding-up of this society must be dismissed. The society was legal when constituted, and ceased to enjoy the full protection of the law in consequence of the repeal of the Act of 1836, which was the only Act which justified the society's existence. In a literal sense, the society was formed "in pursuance of some other Act;" but "formed" in s. 4 of the Act of 1862 must mean formed and having its existence recognised under the provisions of an existing Act. Therefore the society appeared to be an illegal one, and there was no jurisdiction to wind it up. In re ILFRACOMBE PERMANENT MUTUAL BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY

24. — Priorities — Building Societies Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 42), s. 32.

The question whether an investing member of a building society may withdraw so as to obtain priority over other members does not depend on the answer to be given to the question whether the society was solvent or insolvent when his notice matured, or on the answer to be given to the question whether the members or officers of the society then knew that the society was insolvent. The line is to be drawn at the time when there is a stoppage of the society's business, or a recognition, by those who are entitled to form a judgment, that the business must be stopped. In re AMBITION INVESTMENT BUILDING SOCIETY

The rules of a building society provided that members might withdraw from the society on giving certain notice; that the amounts receivable on withdrawal should be subject to any payments or deductions as might be determined by the directors; that payment of withdrawals should be made according to priority of receipt of notice by the society; and that the directors should have power to limit the number of shares to be withdrawn in any one month, and to limit the withdrawals so that they should not exceed one-half of the monthly income from share subscriptions. The directors had determined by resolution "that the terms of the rules limiting the shares withdrawable be enforced." The society went into voluntary liquidation. All outside creditors had been paid, but the assets were insufficient to meet the claims of all the shareholders:—

Held, that members who had given notices of withdrawal which expired before the commencement of the winding-up were entitled to be paid in full in priority to those whose notices had matured later, or who had given no notice at all:

Held, also, that the executor of a member who had died before the winding-up was entitled to priority over withdrawing members.

A member who had given notice of withdrawal, afterwards accepted from the society a loan upon terms whereby he still continued to receive interest upon his share, but paid interest upon his advance:

Held, that he was not entitled in the winding-up to set off the amount of his share against the unpaid balance of the loan. In re COUNTIES CONSERVATIVE PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY. DAVIS v. NORTON

A portion of the land so acquired was afterwards resold by the Commrs. as surplus land to the defts., a body of charity trustees, who, with the consent of the Charity Commrs., let it for general building purposes.

The burial board of Portsmouth, where by Order in Council no new burial ground was to be opened without the previous approval of one of the Secretaries of State, contracted in 1889 with the consent of the vestry for the purchase of a piece of land for the purpose of adding to their existing cemetery. The purchase was not to be completed till June, 1896. In the meantime no interest was to run, and the vendor was to be at liberty to remove the clay and make bricks on the land. In 1895 the property and liabilities of the board were transferred to the corporation. Shortly before the time for completion the corporation applied to the Home Secretary for his approval of the land as a burial ground, which he refused to give. The corporation then declined to complete, and the vendor sued for specific performance or damages:—

Held, by the C. A., affirming the decision of Byrne J. on this point, that s. 6 of the Act of 1853, which provides that no new burial ground shall be “provided and used” within the limits there specified without the approval of a Secretary

Held, that by the true construction of the Customs Tariff Act, 1894, s. 4, as amended by the Tariff Act, 1895, which in effect directs that duty be paid upon raw sugar "when such goods are imported into Canada or taken out of warehouse for consumption therein," the date at which duty both attaches thereto and becomes payable is when the goods are landed and delivered to the importer or to his order, or, when they are taken out of warehouse, if instead of being delivered they have been placed in bond.

Sect. 150 of the Customs Act, 1886, which directs that the precise time of the importation of goods shall be deemed to be the time when "they came within the limits of the port at which they ought to be reported," refers on its true construction to the port at which the goods are to be landed—that is, where the effective report is to be made. CANADA (Generally)—continued.

as representing the Crown and the provincial government, obtained the cession from the Ojibeway Indians of lands occupied as Indian reserves, the beneficial interest therein passing to the provincial government, together with the liability to pay to the Indians certain perpetual annuities:—

Held, that these lands being within the limits of the province of Ontario, created by the British North America Act, 1867, the beneficial interest therein vested under s. 109 in that province.

The perpetual annuities have been capitalised on the basis of the amounts specified in the treaties, the Dominion assumed liability in respect thereof under s. 111. Thereafter the amounts of these annuities were increased according to the treaties:

Held, that liability for these increased amounts was not so attached to the ceded lands and their proceeds as to form a charge thereon in the hands of the province, under s. 109. They must be paid by the Dominion with recourse to the provinces of Ontario and Quebec conjointly, under ss. 111 and 112; in the same manner as the original annuities. *ATT.-GEN. CANADA (Generally)—continued.

tion—Canada Temperance Act, 1886—Ontario Act (53 Vict. c. 56), s. 18.

The general power of legislation conferred upon the Dominion Parliament by s. 91 of the British North America Act, 1867, in supplement of its therein enumerated powers, must be strictly confined to such matters as are unquestionably of national interest and importance; and must not trench on any of the subjects enumerated in s. 92 as within the scope of provincial legislation, unless they have attained such dimensions as to affect the body politic of the Dominion.

Dominion enactments, when competent, override but cannot directly repeal provincial legislation. Whether they have in a particular instance effected virtual repeal by repugnancy is a question for adjudication by the tribunals, and cannot be determined by either the Dominion or provincial legislature.

Accordingly the Canada Temperance Act, 1886, so far as it purported to repeal the prohibitory clauses of the old provincial Act of 1864 (27 & 28 Vict. c. 18) was ultra vires the Dominion. Its own prohibitory provisions are, however, valid when duly brought into operation in any provincial area, as relating to the peace, order, and good government of Canada:

Russell v. Reg. (7 App. Cas. 829) followed; but not as regulating trade and commerce within s. 91, sub-s. 2, of the Act of 1867;

Citizens' Insurance Co. v. Parsons (7 App. Cas. 98) distinguished and Municipal Corporation of Toronto v. Virgo ([1896] A. C. 88) followed.

Held, also, that the local liquor prohibitions authorized by the Ontario Act (53 Vict. c. 56), s. 18, are within the powers of the provincial legislature. But they are inoperative in any locality which adopts the provisions of the Dominion Act of 1886. ATT.-GEN. FOR ONTARIO v. ATT.-GEN. FOR THE DOMINION - P. C. [1896] A. C. 348

Held, that the action must be dismissed, because the damages attributable to the defendants were on those findings (which could not properly be disturbed) inappreciable and irrecoverable.

The Court of Queen's Bench was in error in directing a new trial on the assumption that the findings as to damages are contradictory and illogical. KERRY v. ENGLAND

16. — Railway Committee of Privy Council—Canada Railway Act (51 Vict. c. 29), s. 262, sub-ss. 3, 4—Construction.

Held, that under the true construction of the Railway Act (Canada), 51 Vict. c. 29, the power conferred by sub-s. 4 of s. 262 upon the Railway Committee of the Privy Council to exonerate a ry. co. during a specified portion of the year from the duty of filling certain spaces specified in sub-s. 4, did not apply to the duty imposed by sub-s. 3 of filling certain other spaces specified by sub-s. 3. Such extension of power was not authorized by the grammatical construction of the sub-sections, nor rendered imperative by the context. GRAND TRUNK RY. CO. OF CANADA v. WASHINGTON - P. C. [1899] A. C. 275

17. — Railway Company—Contract by company ultra vires—Effect of consent judgment—Estoppel—Terms on which contract will be set aside—Relief—Parties—Misjoinder.

Where by contract, ex facie legal and regular, the appellant co. purported to incur liability to the respondent for ry. construction in an amount which was in reality calculated to cover the amount of bonus and of price of issued shares payable by agreement between the respondent and all the shareholders of the co. irrespective of either actual or estimated cost of construction:—

Held, that the contract was ultra vires of the co.:

Held, further, that a consent judgment obtained on the contract declaring the respondent's lien on the co.'s ry. and other property, the question of ultra vires not having been raised either in the pleadings or on the facts stated, was of no greater validity than the contract.

In a suit by the co. to set aside the contract and judgment, held, that they must be set aside on terms which were consented to of paying to the respondent the balance due to him for construction on a quantum meruit, securing the amount thereof by bonds of the co. if and when issued, the whole to be taken by him subject to first and other charges in favour of sub-contractors and banks in advance to them who had acted on the faith of the judgment to which they were not parties without notice of the illegalities of the contract.

The co. having joined some of their bondholders and shareholders as co-plts., raising questions affecting them individually, held, that the action of the Court should be confined to issues between the co. and the defts. GREAT NORTH-WEST CENTRAL RY. CO. v. CHARLEBOIS

Where an award of compensation made in an arbitration under the Canadian Railway Act, 1888 (c. 109 of the Revised Statutes of Canada), was appealed from:—

Held, that the Court rightly exercised its jurisdiction in reviewing the award by deciding whether a reasonable estimate of the evidence had been made. It was not authorized by the section to disregard the award and deal with the

Although there may be in various Canadian Acts and for other purposes substantial distinctions between rys. or ry. tracks and street rys. and tramways, yet, for the purpose of separating free and dutiable articles, such distinction is not maintained in Canadian Act 50 & 51 Vict. c. 39, and its three predecessors.

According to the true construction of that Act (see s. 1, item 88, and s. 2, item 173), the question whether imported steel rails are taxed or free depends solely upon their weight, not upon the character of the ry. track for which they are intended. TORONTO RY. CO. v. REG.

21. — *Rivers and lake improvements—"Public harbours"—Fisheries and fishing rights—Revised Statutes of Canada, c. 92, c. 95, s. 4—Revised Statutes of Ontario, c. 24, s. 47—Ontario Act of 1892 (55 Vict. c. 10)—British North America Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 3), ss. 91, 92, 108—Distribution of legislative power—Construction*.

Whatever proprietary rights vested in the provinces at the date of British North America Act, 1867, remained so unless by its express enactment transferred to the Dominion. Such transfer is not to be presumed from the grant of legislative jurisdiction to the Dominion in respect of the subject-matter of those proprietary rights:—

Held, that the transfer by s. 108 and the 5th clause of its schedule to the Dominion of "rivers and lake improvements" operates on its true construction in regard to the improvements only both of rivers and lakes, and not in regard to the entire rivers. Such construction does no violence to the language employed, and is reasonably and probably in accordance with the intention of the Legislature:—

Held, that the transfer of "public harbours" operates on whatever is properly comprised in that term having regard to the circumstances of each case, and is not limited merely to those portions on which public works had been executed.

With regard to fisheries and fishing rights:—

Held, (1.) that s. 91 did not convey to the Dominion any proprietary rights therein, although the legislative jurisdiction conferred by the section enables it to affect those rights to an unlimited extent, short of transferring them to others.

(2.) a tax by way of licence as a condition of the right to fish is within the powers conferred by sub-ss. 4 and 12.

(3.) the same power is conferred on the Provincial Parliament by s. 92.

(4.) Revised Statutes of Canada, c. 95, s. 4, so far as it empowers the grant of exclusive fishing rights over provincial property, is ultra vires the Dominion.

(5.) Revised Statutes of Ontario, c. 24, s. 47, is with a specific exception intra vires the province.

As regards Ontario Act, 1892, the regulations therein which control the manner of fishing are ultra vires. Fishing regulations and restrictions are within the exclusive competence of the Dominion: see s. 91, sub-s. 12.

Secus with regard to any provisions relating thereto which would properly fall under the headings "Property and Civil Rights" or "The Management and Sale of Public Lands":—

Held, further, that the Dominion Legislature had power to pass Revised Statutes of Canada, c. 92, intitled "An Act respecting certain Works constructed in or over Navigable Waters." *ATT.-GEN. 22. — Statute—Construction—Permissive statutory powers—Injunction—Liability for damages—Water—Irrigation—Land slides.

Wherever, according to the sound construction of a statute, the legislature has authorized a proprietor to make a particular use of his land, and the authority given is in the strict sense of law permissive merely, and not imperative, the Legislature must be held to have intended that the use sanctioned is not to be in prejudice of the common law right of others.

Metropolitan Asylums District v. Hill, (1881) 6 App. Cas. 193, approved.

Where the effect of British Columbian legislation was to authorize the respondents to irrigate their soil by the compulsory diversion of water from any adjacent stream, lake, or river, by conveying it over lands which do not belong to them, and to run the surplus water after irrigation through adjacent lands by means of flumes, ditches, or drains, all subject to provisions for compensation, and the respondents brought water upon their land in such manner as to be the substantial cause of damage to the appellants' line of ry. by causing a slide of their land:—

Held, reversing the judgment of the Court below, that, in the absence of provisions shewing an intention on the part of the legislature to take away the appellants' right to protect their property from invasion, they were entitled to an injunction to prevent the respondents' user of the water in disregard of their common law obligation to do no damage to the appellants' land. *CANADIAN PACIFIC RY. In an action by stockbrokers against their principal to recover the balance of their account in respect of sales and purchases of shares for private speculation on his account :—

Held, (1) that these transactions were "commercial matters" within art. 1233, Civil Code, which the plts. might prove by oral evidence; and that a plt. was a competent witness under s. 2 of 54 Vict. c. 45.

(2) An admission by the deft. in his deposition that he employed the plts. as his stock-brokers, and that they bought and sold something for him, is a sufficient commencement of proof in writing under art. 1233 (7) to let in oral evidence of the particulars.

(3) Art. 1233 (6) authorises reception of secondary evidence of bought and sold notes in possession of the adverse party without a notice to produce; and an objection thereto not taken at the trial cannot be taken on appeal.

(4) The deft. in giving authority to the plts. to do business on the Stock Exchange must be taken, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, to have employed them on the terms of the Stock Exchange, and, therefore, to have authorized the sale of his shares on failure to supply them with the requisite funds. *FORGET v. 28. — Corporation—Liability of—Accident to bridge under corporate control—By-law—British Columbia Municipal Act, 1892 (55 Vict. c. 33).

The appellant corporation having, under 55 Vict. c. 33, de facto taken over the care and control of a certain bridge: held, that their acts with regard to it were prima facie competent corporate acts. It would lie on the corporation to shew clearly that any acts done by their officers under their direction were ultra vires and illegal, and that conclusion could not be reached merely by reason of their not having passed a by-law under 55 Vict. c. 33 actually vesting the bridge in them.

In an action to recover damages from them for a fatal accident caused by the breaking down of the said bridge over which a tramcar containing the deceased was running :—

Held, that the finding of the jury that an act done by their officer had materially weakened the beam which afterwards broke amply justified a verdict against them; and that the liability, if any, of the tram co. for passing an extraordinarily heavy weight over it not having been before the jury, could not be raised in appeal. *VICTORIA CORPORATION v. Held, in an action for wrongful ejectment by the holder of a free miner's certificate under the "British Columbia Placer Mining Act, 1891" (54 Vict. c. 26), applicable to a part of the land granted, that he was entitled to mine for gold and other precious metals thereon, the above words not being sufficiently precise to transfer to the applicants' predecessor the right of the provincial legislature to administer the precious

Held, that s. 4 of the British Columbian "Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1890," which prohibits Chinamen of full age from employment in underground coal workings, is in that respect ultra vires of the provincial legislature.

Regarded merely as a coal-working regulation, it would come within s. 92, sub-s. 10, or s. 92, sub-s. 13, of the British North America Act. But its exclusive application to Chinamen who are aliens or naturalized subjects establishes a statutory prohibition which is within the exclusive authority of the Dominion Parliament conferred by s. 91, sub-s. 25, in regard to "naturalization and aliens." *UNION COLLIERY CO. In a suit by the appellants, being mortgagees of a division of 180 miles of the respondents' ry. and of its revenues subject to working expenses, for a sale of the division and for a receiver and other relief:—

Held, (1.) that this division of 180 miles is by the law of Canada applicable to the ry. a section capable of sale in its entirety, but that the provincial Court had no power to order a sale, part of the section being within and part without its jurisdiction; (2.) that so long as the ry. was worked as a whole the revenues of the division are subject along with other revenues to the working expenses of the whole line, and that the receiver was only entitled to the net earnings of the division so ascertained.

Their Lordships declined to hear argument as to the validity of the mortgage or of the power of sale, or of the mortgagees' right of entry, the pleadings and evidence not raising those issues, and the Courts below not having adjudicated thereon. *GREY v. Held, that a subsequent clause in the deed of grant giving to the co. the refusal on terms of other streets in the city for ry. purposes was insufficient to constitute, contrary to the plain meaning of the previous stipulations, a right of monopoly in any of the streets of the city.

The landowner had received and neglected a notice under s. 18 of the Act to appoint:—

Held, that the appointment was not a judicial act, and that a fresh notice to the respondent was not a condition precedent to its validity. The award gave the landowner a fixed sum as estimated damages for all works or occupation necessary to or required by the mining lessee:

Held, that the sections of the Local Revised Statutes, 5th Series, c. 3, which create the jurisdiction of the House and indemnify its members against legal proceedings in respect of their votes therein, are a complete answer to an attempt to enforce civil liability for acts done and words spoken in the House. Those sections, except so far as they may be deemed to confer any criminal jurisdiction, otherwise than as incident to the protection of members, are intra vires of the local legislature, as relating to the constitution of the province within the meaning of s. 92 of the British North America Act, 1867, or under the authority of s. 5 of the Colonial Laws Validity Act (28 & 29 Vict. c. 63), which was recognised by the Act of 1867, s. 88.

Held, that no individual customer had a right of action against the company for non-compliance with the provisions of the Act. 46. — Insurance, Life—Policies of life assurance—Proviso for cash payment of premium—Onus probandi—Duties of insurers' agent—Payment of premium by notes discounted and then dishonoured.

Where a life policy contains provisions to the effect that it shall not be in force till the first premium is paid, and that if a note be taken for the first or renewal premium and not paid the policy is void at and from default, the onus is on the policy-holder to prove cash payment of the premium.

Where the insurers' agent accepts in payment of a premium a note which is not paid when due, there is no presumption that he was to raise money thereon as an agent for the insured and pay the premium out of the proceeds.

And where the insurers accept their agent's note in discharge of an account current between them in which the agent was debited with the amount of the premium, that affords no presumption of an intention to treat their own agent as agent for the insured, or the insurance as subsisting contrary to the terms of their contract with the policy-holder.

A statutory power conferred upon a municipal council to make by-laws for regulating and governing a trade does not, in the absence of an express power of prohibition, authorize the making it unlawful to carry on a lawful trade in a lawful manner:—

So held, where, under c. 184 of Revised Statutes of Ontario, 1887, s. 495 (3), a municipal by-law was passed prohibiting hawkers from plying their trade in an important part of the municipality, no question of apprehended nuisance having been raised. *MUNICIPAL CORPORATION OF THE CITY OF TORONTO v. The appellant after his wife's death sued his daughter, the respondent, to recover as creditor of herself and his wife's estate moneys which he alleged that he had advanced to purchase properties in Quebec to which she was entitled either in her own right or under his wife's will:—

Held, on the evidence, that he failed to establish his claim.

The shares of promoters of a co. incorporated under the Revised Statutes of Quebec having been credited as paid in full under an arrangement by which half the amount thereof was paid in cash and half by receipts on account of the purchase price of the property acquired by the company:—

Held, that under art. 4722, par. 1 (originally enacted as s. 1 of Quebec Statute 47 Vict. c. 73, and reproducing s. 25 of the English Companies Act, 1867), the shares were rightly so credited; the promoters having acted in good faith and the purchase price being fair.

Contracts made by a broker employed to make actual contracts of purchase and sale, in each case completed by delivery and payment, on behalf of a principal whose object was not investment but speculation, are not gaming contracts within the meaning of the Code. FORGET v. 55. — Information—Code of Civil Procedure—Arts. 997, 998—Attorney-General's powers—General Railway Act, c. 109 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1888, s. 12.

Informations against associations under art. 997 of the Civil Procedure Code apply only to acts done in the assertion of some special power, franchise, or privilege, not conferred by law.

An allegation that a co. had closed a lane under the pretext that they had acquired private rights entitling them so to do is not sufficient under the art.

The Court has jurisdiction under art. 998 of the Code to prohibit the issue of an information under art. 997, but when it has once been issued the Att.-Gen. is dominus litis, and can discontinue, &c., independently of the relator. CASGRAIN v. ATLANTIC AND NORTH-WEST RY. CO.

Held, that, on the expiration of the three months the elector's statutory right was at an end, and could not be extended by any procedure clause (see art. 3 of the Civil Procedure Code) which presupposed an existing right of action and regulated its exercise. DÉCHÈNE v. Proceedings for civil recognition of a new parish are sufficiently founded on a decree for canonical erection thereof.

Proceedings before the Commrs. of the diocese with a view to civil recognition are not subject to the review or control of a Court of justice.

An objection to the formation of a new parish on the ground that one of the old parishes dismembered for that purpose is in debt is valid under Revised Statutes of Quebec, s. 3380; but where the debt relied on was contracted by the Fabrique it must be proved that the Fabrique is unable to pay it and that a levy on the Roman Catholic freeholders of the parish has been duly authorized. *ALEXANDRE v. The defts.' canal was constructed under an Act of Parliament by which the canal was to be open for use by the public on payment of tolls. Two sections of the Act (37 and 38) were identical in effect with the statutory provisions construed by the H. L. in Knowles & Sons v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry. Co., (1889) 14 App. Cas. 248, and Chamber Colliery Co. v. Rochdale Canal Co., [1895] A. C. 564.

Plts. sued defts. for—(a) a declaration that they were entitled to work all their adjacent coal, although the result might be to endanger or damage the canal, or, in the alternative, (b) a declaration that plts. were entitled to be paid, under s. 38, satisfaction for adjacent coal left as canal protection. Plts. also claimed a declaration that under ss. 37 and 38 they were entitled to be paid satisfaction for the subjacent coal left as protection:—

Held, that the plts. were entitled to declaration (a), but that on the plts. and defts. making admissions (substantially to the effect of the referee's findings in the Chamber Colliery Case, see [1894] 2 Q. B. 635) that the cost, if any, of repairing damages to be sustained to the canal and works by getting all the coal would be trifling compared with the value of the coal required to be left for the absolute protection of the canal and works, and that such damage could be repaired from time to time, and would not interfere with the navigation, and on the defts. undertaking (substantially in accord with the undertaking required by the C. A. in the Chamber Colliery Case, [1894] 2 Q. B. 632, 642) not to claim damages in the future in respect of the plts. working the subjacent coal, and at their own expense to repair any damage thereby caused, the plts. were not entitled to any declaration respecting the subjacent coal. *NEW MOSS COLLIERY CO. v. Annexation is an act of State, and any obligation assumed under a treaty to that effect, either to the ceding sovereign or to individuals, is not one which municipal courts are authorized to enforce.

The Crown Liabilities Act, 1888, permits such an action to be brought, but it does not empower the Court to make a declaration of right.

On an action by A. to recover damages exceeding $100 for personal injuries, the jury found that A. knew there was writing on the ticket, but did not know that it contained conditions as to the contract of carriage, and that the co. did not do what was reasonably sufficient to give A. notice of the conditions:—

2. — Goods shipped without bill of lading—Shipowner's liability.

The plt., a wool merchant at Bradford, bought wool in London and handed a delivery order to the deft., who shipped the wool on board his steamer in London, carried it by sea to Goole, and forwarded it by rail to Bradford, charging the plt. a through rate of 1*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* per ton, which covered all expenses of the transit from London to Bradford, including insurance. The insurance was effected by the deft., who selected the underwriters and paid the premium, after receiving directions from the plt. as to the amount per bale for which he was to insure. The plt. did not receive possession of the policy; and on previous occasions, when losses had occurred, the deft. had received payment from the underwriters, and had settled with the plt. The wool was shipped without a bill of lading. In cases where the plt. imported wool, he insured it for the whole transit, and the deft. charged only 1*l.* 5*s.* 9*d.* per ton for its conveyance from London to Bradford:—

Held, that the deft. had insured the wool, not as agent for the plt. but to cover his own liability of carrier, and had undertaken a liability equal to that of a common carrier, and had not, either expressly or impliedly, stipulated for any limitation of his liability, and therefore was liable without proof of negligence.

Ceylon Ordinances No. 21 of 1844, No. 10 of 1863, and No. 7 of 1871.

Two spouses by joint will directed that after the death of the survivor the lands in suit should be created fidei commissum, so that they may not be sold, mortgaged, or in any way alienated, and that "the three children of their deceased daughter and their surviving daughter shall divide into two and inherit according to custom, and they and their descendants possess without interruption":—

Held, that, by the true construction of the will, the moiety devised to the three grandchildren was burdened with one fidei commissum, and not with three fidei commissas separately applicable to the three shares. Accordingly one-third share of such moiety did not vest absolutely in each institute, so as to pass to his heir-at-law not in the direct line of descent from the testators; but the whole vested in the three institutes jointly with benefit of survivorship and with substitution of their descendants. *DONA MARIA ABEYSEKERA HAMINI v. Under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 14, there is no power after the death of a judgment debtor to make a charging order against his executor in respect of a judgment debt of the deceased, unless in some way judgment has been first obtained against the executor.

Whether such a judgment can be obtained under the present practice, quære.

Under s. 15 of the Act it is essential that the person who is to shew cause against the making absolute a charging order nisi should be the person against whom the judgment was recovered.

The executor of a deceased judgment debtor cannot shew cause against a charging order nisi made in respect of a judgment recovered against the deceased.

Leave given under rule 23 of Order XLII. to issue execution against the executor of a deceased judgment debtor does not operate as a judgment against the executor; it dispenses with the necessity of recovering judgment against him, and consequently does not satisfy the requirements of ss. 14 and 15 of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110:—

Before the order was made absolute judgment was pronounced for the administration of the debtor's estate:—

Held, by Stirling J., [1900] W. N. 13, that the order could not be treated as charging the interest of the executor, and that, having regard to the judgment for administration, the Court ought not to correct the form of the order:

1. — Churchwardens—Income of charity estates—Banking account—Anticipation of rents—Charge on charitable property—Charitable Trusts Amendment Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 124), s. 29.

Estates held on old parochial trusts, the origin of which was unknown, were in 1865 vested in trustees by a deed of appointment of new trustees upon trust to permit and suffer the churchwardens of St. B., in the City of London, to receive and take the rents as the same should from time to time grow due and be payable as formerly had been used, and for such charitable uses, intents, and purposes as the same had been usually employed by the parishioners of the said parish, whether in or about the repairs of the church, the relief of the poor of the parish, or any other of the public affairs of the parish. The churchwardens kept an account with a bank headed as the account of the churchwardens, not mentioning their names, and for many years this account had been kept as a continuous account, an adverse balance at the end of one year being paid out of rents of subsequent years. From 1885 to 1888 the then churchwardens, there being a temporary diminution of income, obtained from the bank, with the sanction of the Charity Commrs., advances amounting to 3000*l.*, which were carried to the credit of the churchwardens in the account. In 1891 a scheme by the Charity Commrs. under the City of London Parochial Charities Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 36), came into effect, by which the estates were vested in the Official Trustee of Charity Lands, and the administration of the rents in the Trustees of the London Parochial Charities. The bank then sued the individual churchwardens in whose time the advances had been made for the advances; and the churchwardens brought an action against the Official Trustee of Charity Lands and the Trustees of the London Parochial Charities to be indemnified out of the rents against the claims of the bank:—

Held, by Romer J., that on the construction of the deed appointing new trustees, the churchwardens for the time being could only receive the rents as they became due and apply them, and had no power to anticipate the income so as to have a claim on the future income, and that their claim therefore failed:

Held, by the C. A., that whether this was a correct view or not the churchwardens' claim was defeated by the Charitable Trusts Amendment Act, 1855, s. 29, which prohibits any sale, mortgage, or charge of a charity estate without the approval of the Charity Commrs. *FELL v. The founder of an eleemosynary charity by her deed of endowment declared that the objects of the charity should be selected by the trustees thereof (one of whom was to be the rector of the parish) from amongst poor men and women resident in a certain parish who should have (1) regularly attended divine service in the church of the parish for a fixed period, (2) been partakers of the Holy Communion, (3) lived a godly, righteous, and sober life to the glory of God's Holy Name; and she also declared that the lay trustees should always be members of the Church of England:—

Held, that the charity was one for the benefit of members of the Church of England “as such,” i.e., in their character of members of that Church, and to the exclusion of non-members thereof, and was accordingly an ecclesiastical charity within s. 75 of the Local Government Act, 1894; and held, therefore, that the parish council had no power, under s. 14, sub-s. 1, of the same Act, to appoint trustees of it.

In s. 75, sub-s. 2 (e), of the Act of 1894, the words “or otherwise for the benefit of any particular Church . . . or any members thereof as such” are not to be construed as limited to religious “benefit,” to the exclusion of mere temporal benefit.

There may be a charity in the legal sense for purposes which are both eleemosynary and ecclesiastical or religious.

The decision of Stirling J., [1898] 1 Ch. 391, affirmed.

A testatrix by her will (made in 1799) devised a rent-charge to be paid to the churchwardens for the time being of the parish of B. H. on a certain day in every year for ever, and to be laid out in the purchase of garments to be given to “six old and poor widows of the said parish whom they shall judge the properest objects to receive the same with preference to those who not being disabled by infirmity or sickness are most constant in their attendance on the public service of the church.”

Held, first, that the charity thus created was not an ecclesiastical charity within the meaning of the Local Government Act, 1894; and, secondly, that s. 14, sub-s. 2, of that Act had application to the case of a non-ecclesiastical charity, the only trustees of which were churchwardens, and accordingly that the parish council had power to appoint trustees of such a charity in place of the churchwardens.

The proviso at the end of s. 62, excluding "any cathedral, collegiate, chapter, or other schools" from the "exemption" contained in the section, does not extend to all schools of whatever description, but only extends to the schools there mentioned, and to schools of a similar character.

The decision of Stirling J., [1898] 1 Ch. 610, affirmed.

The trustees of an industrial school maintained by voluntary contributions, Government grants, contributions from school boards, boards of guardians, and other public authorities, and possessed of lands and buildings occupied by the school, presented a petition under Sir Samuel Romilly's Act (52 Geo. 3, c. 101) asking for the sanction of the Court to a proposed mortgage of part of the school lands and buildings;—

Held, by the Court, that the consent of the Charity Commrs. to the presentation of the petition and to the proposed mortgage was necessary, per Lindley M.R., upon the construction of s. 62; and, per Chitty J., having regard to the nature of the property proposed to be mortgaged.

In an appeal under s. 39 of the Endowed Schools Act, 1869, against a scheme of the Charity Commrs. under the Welsh Intermediate Education Act, 1889 :—

Held, that the policy of the scheme cannot be considered. It can only be modified so far as it is ultra vires. Where there was no direction to that effect in the instrument of foundation, nor regulations prescribed by the founder or under his authority in his lifetime or within fifty years of the founder's death, the scheme need not provide for religious instruction according to the Established Church. Such regulation cannot be presumed from practice extending over a long period. Sect. 13 of the Act does not apply to rights of patronage which are not at the date of the Act exercised by a member of the governing body or possessed in consequence of his gift. A modern endowment under the Welsh Act is one made since 1869. Such endowment if so mixed with the old endowment as that it cannot be conveniently separated must be deemed to be part thereof. In re ENDOWED SCHOOLS ACT, 1869, AND SWANSEA GRAMMAR SCHOOL

A charitable foundation provided for scholarships at Oxford for boys from six schools, one of which was a public school within the meaning of the Public Schools Act, 1868 :—

A bequest to trustees to expend the income or any portion of the trust funds "in grants for or towards the purchase of advowsons or presentations" is not a good charitable bequest.

Held, that since upon the true construction of the will no trust, charitable or other, which the Court could execute or control was annexed to the advowsons or presentations for the purchase of which the trustees had power to make grants, and there was no general trust for charity binding the whole fund, the whole gift failed and the residuary estate was undisposed of.

A testator, who died in 1855, bequeathed a sum of 1890*l.* Consols, to be invested in the names of trustees, to form a fund to be called the Superannuation Fund, for the purpose of pensioning off old and worn-out clerks of the firm of G. & S. In June, 1896, the firm of G. & S. was amalgamated with the firm of B. & Co., and in consequence of this amalgamation some difficulties had arisen as to the proper objects and distribution of the fund. The trustees now applied for the determination of the following questions: (1) Whether the gift was a good charitable gift; and, if so, (2) whether a scheme

Held, that, amongst the other charitable objects enumerated by 43 Eliz. c. 4, both the "aged" and "impotent" were especially mentioned, and "old and worn-out" clerks came within this description, and, having regard to the phrase "pensioning off" and to the frame of the gift, that poor clerks of the firm, and those unable properly to provide for themselves and their families, were intended to be benefited. So long as the gift was in favour of a section of the public, if within the scope of charitable gifts, it was a charitable gift; and the fact that the section of the public was limited to persons born or residing in a particular parish, district, or county, or belonging to, or connected with, any special sect, denomination, guild, institution, firm, name, or family, did not of itself render that which would be otherwise charitable void, or take it out of the category of charitable gifts. The property had long been dealt with by the society as its own, and for its own purposes, and the surviving members of the society contended that it was not now subject to or affected by any charitable trust, but belonged to the individual members for their own personal benefit, to be divided and disposed of as they might think fit:—

And it was also held that in a long and complicated deed of gift mistakes might be made which the Court might rectify if desired by the donor so to do, and yet such mistakes might not be important and serious enough to enable the donor to set aside the whole deed as failing in substance to carry out his intention.

The Stockport Industrial Schools were established by a trust-deed in 1866. The school buildings were conveyed to trustees upon trust to permit them to be used as a ragged, industrial and reformatory school under a committee of management. The trustees were empowered to sell the original buildings and apply the proceeds of sale in providing larger schools. The situation of the schools is now unsuitable, and the buildings were too small for the purposes of the trust. Notice had been given by the Government inspectors that unless the buildings were enlarged the number of children must be reduced. The trustees proposed to sell the existing buildings and apply the proceeds, together with other moneys in hand and a further sum to be raised upon mortgage of the new premises, in buying a new site and building larger schools.

Upon a petition presented by the trustees under Romilly's Act (52 Geo. 3, c. 101), the Court, upon the authority of Re Ashton Charity, (1856) 22 Beav. 288, sanctioned the proposed mortgage. In re STOCKPORT RAGGED, INDUSTRIAL AND REFORMATORY SCHOOLS

A testator, who died before the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act, 1888, by his will gave real and personal estate upon trust for sale and conversion; and directed his trustees to apply one-tenth of the fund to "such charitable institutions and objects as my said trustees may determine":—

Held, by C. A., (1) that the gift applied and extended not only to the pure, but also to the impure personal estate and the proceeds of the real estate of the testator, and conferred upon the trustees a power of selection; (2) that if and so far as the trustees selected charitable institutions and objects exempted from the operation of 9 Geo. 2, c. 36, the names of the charitable institutions and objects selected would be read into the will, and the gift would be a good charitable gift in their favour; (3) that, as to the impure personality and the proceeds of the sale of real estate, no exercise of the power of selection in favour of an unexempted charitable institution or object would operate as a valid gift.

If a gift of this kind gives the trustees a discretion enabling them to select such as are valid from a class including valid and invalid objects, that is sufficient to prevent the gift from being voided by the statute of 9 Geo. 2, c. 36.

Although some parts of Stuart V.-C.'s judgment in Lewis v. Allenby, (1870) L. R. 10 Eq. 668, may be open to comment, there is no necessary invalidity in such a gift as was the subject of that decision.

The principle upon which the Court proceeded in Lewis v. Allenby is the same as that on which the Court acted in Mayor of Faversham v. Ryder, (1854) 5 D. M. & G. 350, University of London v. Yarrow, (1857) 1 De G. & J. 72, and Carter v. Green, (1857) 3 K. & J. 591.

not overruled or intended to be overruled by Cunnaock v. Edwards, [1896] 2 Ch. 679.

The trusteeship of executors created by the Executors Act, 1830, was not intended to be different in its nature from that which existed previously under the rule established in courts of equity—namely, that in the absence of special circumstances executors were not to be regarded as express trustees.

A testator, who died in 1873, gave all his property charged with certain annuities to the trustees of a charity, and appointed K. to be his executor and gave him a legacy. The estate included freehold and leasehold property. K. entered into possession, and received the income of the testator's estate on behalf of the charity for a period of twenty years. Soon after the testator's death he read over the will to the testator's only son, who was his heir-at-law and sole next of kin, but gave him no information as to his rights under the will, having regard to the gift being to a charity. The son died in 1895 without ever having claimed the estate. In an action by the trustees of the charity for a declaration who was entitled to the testator's estate:—

Held, (1) that the gift to the charity failed under the Mortmain Act so far as the testator's property consisted of realty or impure personality; (2) that K. was not an express trustee for the next of kin, and that the title of the heir-at-law to the freeholds and of the next of kin to the leaseholds was barred by statute. *In re Lacy. A testator, who died after the passing of the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act, 1891, by his will, made before the passing of the Act, gave to a charity such part of residue "as may by law be given for charitable purposes," with a separate gift of the remainder to A.:—

Held, that the Act applied, and in the absence of a contrary intention the whole of the residue, realty as well as personality, went to the charity. In re Bridger. Brompton Hospital for Consumption v. Lewis

A gift of Metropolitan Surplus Land Stock to a charity is valid, for under the Act creating the stock the stockholder has no power of reaching the land, and the stock is not therefore an interest in land within the meaning of the Act of 1888. Held, that, on the true construction of the regulation, “extension” is not restricted to the enlargement of an existing road by adding to its length or breadth, but includes new lateral branches therefrom; and that the roads “already defined” are the roads mentioned in the whole of the preceding part of the regulation including the extensions. SHANGHAI MUNICIPAL COUNCIL v. Art. 22 of the maritime rules, which relates to vessels “crossing so as to involve risk of collision,” must be distinguished in its application, (1) as regards vessels navigating the open sea; (2) as regards vessels passing along the winding channels of rivers. In the latter case the vessels must follow, and must be known to intend to follow, the curves of the river bank:—

Held, in this case, that the deft. vessel, though she ported her helm, kept the course prescribed by the nature of the locality; and that at the moment of porting the vessels were not crossing vessels within the meaning of art. 22, since the reasonable inference, having regard to the locality and their previous courses, was that they would avoid collision.

2. — Transfer—Powers of judge.

The judge charged with commercial business has no further power of dispensing with the technical rules of evidence than any other judge of the High Court. Rule 6 of the Notice of the Q. B. Div. (above) as to commercial causes does not purport to extend that power.

The object of the establishment of the commercial court was not that on the one hand all commercial causes or on the other hand only short causes should be tried there, but that causes should be so tried which are likely to be more speedily, economically, and satisfactorily tried if brought before a judge having special familiarity with mercantile transactions:—

A cause will not be transferred from the Ch. Div. to the Q. B. Div. to be tried as a commercial cause merely because it is a commercial cause; but the Court will consider whether from its nature it is likely to be more speedily, economically, and satisfactorily tried by the Commercial Court. BAERLEIN v. Div. of the following issue of fact, namely, whether a certain piece of land was common land or subject to any commonable rights either of the commoners of the parish of C., or of the commoners of the parish of L. :—

Held, that evidence of reputation was admissible on the trial of such an issue.

A deposition made in the year 1815, in a suit to perpetuate testimony by a witness examined on commission on behalf of a predecessor in title of the defts., was admitted in evidence at the trial of this issue as being a statement made by a person vouched by the party on whose behalf the deponent was examined, and consequently an admission by conduct of a predecessor in title of the defts. This deposition had been sealed up by the examiners, but was now found unsealed :—

Held, that the mere fact that the deposition was now found to be unsealed was not evidence of user or adoption by the party on whose behalf the deponent was examined, and that, in the absence of evidence of such user or adoption, the deposition was inadmissible on the ground on which it was admitted.

By s. 51 of the Highway Act, 1835, power is given to a surveyor of highways to get and carry away gravel, &c., in any waste land or common ground. By s. 20 of the Commons Act, 1876, such right is not to be exercised, as regards certain classes of commons, "without the consent of the person or persons having the regulation or management of the same, or in default of such consent without an order of two or more justices in petty sessions assembled . . . who may in their order prescribe such conditions as to mode of working and restitution of the surface as to them shall seem expedient."

The appellants having refused leave to the respondents to take gravel from a common, the latter applied to justices, who made an order under s. 20 of the Commons Act, 1876, on the express ground that the section only gave them power to prescribe the conditions under which the right given by s. 35 of the Highway Act, 1835, was to be exercised, and that they had therefore no discretion to refuse altogether to make an order :—

Held, that the decision of the justices was wrong, and that they had absolute discretion, under s. 20 of the Commons Act, 1876, to make or refuse to make an order. HAYES COMMON CONSERVATORS v. BROMLEY RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL Div. Ct. [1897] 1 Q. B. 321

7. — Scheme for regulation under Metropolitan Commons Act, 1866 (29 & 30 Vict. c. 122)—Effect of Scheme.

The Court held that, assuming the plt. had made out a good paper title to the land, the fact that it was included in the area of the common as defined by the scheme was fatal to the action. The scheme, which had all the force of an Act of Parliament, provided that the conservators should maintain the common as delineated in the plan free of all encroachment, and should not permit any trespass on or inclosure of any part thereof. That was a positive enactment directing the conservators to do what the Court was now asked to restrain them from doing. It was true the scheme contained a clause saving to all persons all such estates, interests, or rights of a profitable or beneficial nature in, over, or affecting the common as they had before the confirmation of the scheme; but that did not extend to a right to deny that any particular piece of land was within the scheme, but referred to rights in the nature of profits à prendre. The Act of 1866 provided for the greatest publicity in the making of the scheme, and persons who did not exercise their right of objecting to the scheme before it was confirmed could not successfully do so afterwards.

The Court in so deciding was following a decision of Chitty J. in an unreported case of Conservators of Chislehurst Common v. Newton (1887), where the scheme was practically in the same form as that in the present case. COOK v. MITCHAM COMMON CONSERVATORS

A co. formed with the object of selling and managing estates, &c., and making advances and loans is a trading co., and as such has an implied power to borrow money to a reasonable extent:—

2. — Irregularity—Notice—Common officer of two companies.

Where one person is an officer of two cos. his personal knowledge is not necessarily the knowledge of both the cos. The knowledge which he has acquired as officer of one co. will not be imputed to the other co. unless he has some duty imposed on him to communicate his knowledge to the co. sought to be affected by the notice, and some duty imposed on him by that co. to receive the notice; and if the common officer has been guilty of fraud, or even irregularity, the Court will not draw the inference that he has fulfilled these duties.

Gale v. Lewis, (1846) 9 Q. B. 730; 16 L. J. (Q.B.) 119, distinguished.

The directors of a co. were empowered to borrow money on its behalf, but not beyond a certain limit without the consent of a general meeting. A general meeting gave the required consent, but the notices summoning the meeting did not, as required by the regulations of the co., specify that borrowing beyond the limit was to be authorized by the meeting. The money was borrowed from a society the secretary of which was also the secretary of the co., and he knew of the irregularity:—

Held, that the knowledge of the secretary could not be imputed to the society, and that the money lent could be proved for in the winding-up of the co. In re HAMPSHIRE LAND CO.

The articles of association authorized the co. to borrow, upon mortgage of its freehold and leasehold hereditaments, works, and “other property and effects” for the time being of the co., or upon bonds or debenture notes of the co., or “in such other manner as the co. may determine.” The memorandum of association contained no reference to any borrowing:—

Held, that the co. could under its articles mortgage its uncalled capital; and that, had it been necessary so to do, the co. could by special resolution have extended its articles so as to confer upon itself the power to charge its uncalled capital.

The articles of association of a co. provided that any member whose shares had been forfeited should, nevertheless, be liable to pay all calls owing upon the shares at the time of the forfeiture. The deft. had been the owner of shares in the co., but his shares had been forfeited for non-payment of calls. More than a year after the forfeiture the co. went into liquidation, and the deft. was then sued for the unpaid calls:—

Held, that, notwithstanding the provisions of s. 38 of the Companies Act, 1862, sub-ss. 1, 3, the action was maintainable, inasmuch as the deft. was liable, not as a contributory, but as a debtor to the co.

Where the resolution confirming a resolution by a co. to reduce its capital did not comply with the terms of s. 51 of the Companies Act, 1862, because there was not an interval of fourteen days between the passing of the two resolutions, but an order of the Court had been made in accordance with the resolutions under s. 11 of the Companies Act, 1867, and the Registrar of Joint

A co. by one of its articles provided that it should have a lien for all debts and liabilities of any member to the co. "upon all shares (not being fully paid) held by such member."

The co., by way of purchase-money for the property acquired by it, allotted fully paid shares to Z., a nominee of the vendor to the co. Z. also applied for and had allotted to him shares not paid up. He was the only holder of fully paid-up shares. At his death he was indebted to the co. in arrears of calls on the unpaid shares, but his assets were insufficient to pay the arrears. Thereupon the co., by special resolution under s. 50 of the Companies Act, 1862, altered the above article by omitting therefrom the words "not being fully paid," thus creating a lien on Z.'s fully paid shares:—

Held, by C. A., that the co. had power to alter its articles by extending its lien to fully paid shares:—

Held, also, by Lindley M.R. and Romer L.J. (V. Williams L.J. dissenting), that the lien so extended, having been made in good faith, was enforceable against Z.'s fully paid shares, since he took them subject to the original articles and the power of altering them given to the co. by s. 50 of the Act, and did not make any special or implied bargain that they should not be affected by any subsequent alteration of the articles; and that the fact of those shares being vendor's shares allotted in payment for the property purchased by the co., instead of being shares paid for in cash in the ordinary way, was immaterial.

James v. Buena Ventura Nitrate Grounds Syndicate, [1896] 1 Ch. 456, and Andrews v. Gas Meter Co., [1897] 1 Ch. 361, considered as to the "retrospective" effect of an alteration by a co. of its articles.

Where, under a co.'s articles, notice of general meetings is to be given to "members," and such notice may be served upon any "member" either personally or by sending it prepaid by post addressed to "such member" at his registered address, it is not necessary, in the case of a deceased member, either to send a notice addressed to him at his registered address, or to serve his

On a winding-up order the power of the directors to make calls comes to an end, and the only power to make calls is that given by statute to the liquidator in the winding-up. Therefore, when uncalled capital has been charged by the co. in favour of debenture-holders and a winding-up order is made, the Court cannot order either a receiver appointed in an action to enforce the debentures or the liquidator to make a call in the action, and can only order the liquidator to make a call in the winding-up. But the receiver in the action may be empowered to proceed in the name of the liquidator to enforce the call. FOWLER v. BROAD'S NIGHT LIGHT CO.

V. Williams J. [1893] 1 Ch. 724

(b) As a rule proceedings should be taken by the liquidator and not by some other person in the name of the liquidator; in this case the receiver was allowed to proceed in the liquidator's name to get in the calls on an undertaking to leave the books of the co. with the liquidator and to indemnify him against costs. HARRISON v. 9. — Sale of undertaking—Death of shareholder—Notice.

The Z. Co. was empowered by its memorandum of association to amalgamate with any other co. or to sell its undertaking. By the articles, fourteen days' notice was to be given of a call, and might be served by being posted to the registered address of a member. The Z. Co. sold its undertaking and assets to the N. Co., and, in accordance with the agreement, called up their unpaid capital. P., a member of the Z. Co., had died previously to the call. Notice was posted to his registered address, and was returned marked "gone away":—

Held, that a call of unpaid capital for the purposes of the sale was not invalid, and that as to notice, a "member" includes a deceased member as long as the shares remain in his name. NEW ZEALAND GOLD EXTRACTION CO. (NEWBERRY-VAUTIN PROCESS) v. PEACOCK

A subscriber of the memorandum of association of a co. limited by shares is (in the absence of any provision in the articles of association, or of an express agreement between him and the co., to the contrary) not liable to make any payment in respect of the shares for which he subscribes, except as and when calls are made upon him in accordance with the provisions of the articles.

If directors issue other shares besides those which are taken by the subscribers of the memorandum, there is nothing to prevent them from offering those shares on such terms as regards payment to the company on application and allotment as the directors may think expedient.

But if directors require other applicants for shares to make payments on application and allotment, and issue their own shares for which they have subscribed the memorandum without requiring any such payments to be made, and without disclosing to the other shareholders this difference between their position and that of the directors, they commit a breach of duty, even though in so doing they act without fraud, and in the belief that they are doing nothing wrong.

Directors who so use their powers as to obtain benefits for themselves at the expense of the other shareholders, without informing them of the facts, cannot be allowed to retain those benefits, but must account for them to the co., so that all the shareholders may participate in them.

An agreement was entered into with a trustee for an intended co. under which S., for a consideration which was not cash, was to take fully paid shares in the co. when incorporated. This agreement was adopted with modifications by the co. when incorporated, but the second agreement did not state the consideration given for the shares. The first agreement was not filed, but the second one was filed before the shares were issued. Some years afterwards a winding-up order was made against the co., and, after the decision in In re Kharaskhoma Exploring and Prospecting Syndicate, [1897] 2 Ch. 451, the official receiver and liquidator informed S., who was previously unaware of the fact, that he was liable to pay for the shares in cash. After the coming into operation of the Companies Act, 1898 (Aug. 2, 1898), S. applied by motion to the winding-up court for leave to file the first contract with the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies, and that on being filed it might be directed to operate as if it had been filed before the issue of the shares. The original of the first contract was not in the possession of S.:—

Another co. after incorporation agreed to purchase a private business, the consideration being fully paid shares. The agreement contained a clause providing that prior to the issue of the shares the co. should enter into and file a separate agreement of even date therewith to allot the fully paid shares to the vendors. The agreement referred to (which was the only one filed with the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies) provided for the allotment of the shares, but did not state what was being given for the shares except by reference to the other agreement. After the coming into operation of the Act of 1898, the vendors were advised that the shares were not protected as fully paid having regard to the decision in In re Maynards, Ltd., [1898] 1 Ch. 515. The vendors moved for leave to file the first agreement, and that such filing should have the operation of a filing before the shares were issued. The co., still a going concern, was served, but did not ask for costs. There were no pressing creditors, and the vendors' shares were of small nominal value:—

Held, without laying down any general rule as to whether the Court would in future cases direct notice to be given of the day for hearing the application, and that any one desiring to oppose could attend (see Palmer's Company Law, 2nd ed. p. 379)—that a duplicate of the original first contract, which was in the applicants' possession, must be filed, and that (except as to costs) the rest of the order must follow the lines of that made by Wright J. in In re May's Metal Separating Syndicate, supra. In re NORTHERN CREOSOTING AND SLEEPER CO.

On Dec. 6, 1894, a written agreement was made between a syndicate and H., as trustee for an intended co., whereby it was agreed that the vendors should sell, and the co. should purchase, a property called Millwood, in the Cape Colony, which was fully described, and that as consideration for the sale H., as the trustee for the intended co., should on or before Dec. 15 allot to the vendors, or as they might direct, 22,500 fully paid shares of 10s. each in the intended co., and should also allot to the vendors, or as they might direct, 277,493 shares of 10s. each in the intended co. upon each of which 8s. should be deemed to have been paid. This agreement was never filed with the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies. The co. was registered on Dec. 6, 1894, and on Dec. 11 the directors resolved to adopt the agreement. On Dec. 12 an agreement in writing was made between the syndicate (called the vendors) and the co. which provided that the co. would forthwith allot to the vendors, or their nominee or nominees, 22,500 fully paid shares of 10s. each in the co., and should allot to the vendors, or as they might direct, 277,493 shares of 10s. each in the co. upon each of which 8s. should be deemed to have been paid “as mentioned in an agreement dated Dec. 6, 1894.

In consideration of the allotment of such shares as aforesaid the vendors will forthwith thereafter give to the co. possession of the premises more particularly mentioned in the said agreement. In all other respects the said agreement is hereby confirmed.” On Dec. 19, 1894, another agreement in writing was made between the co. and the syndicate, which provided that, in consideration of the syndicate agreeing to give the co. immediate possession of “the lands and premises situate in the mining district of Millwood, in the Cape Colony, more particularly mentioned and referred to in an agreement dated Dec. 6, 1894, made between the syndicate and H., as trustee for the co.,” the co. should forthwith allot to the syndicate, or to their nominee or nominees, 22,500 fully paid shares of 10s. each in the co., and for all purposes the said shares should be deemed fully paid shares in the co. The syndicate should with all possible expedition procure the lands and premises to become vested in the co. free from all incumbrances. Both the contracts of Dec. 12 and Dec. 19 were filed with the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies—the first on Dec. 13 and the second on Dec. 28. On Jan. 2, 1895, 1406 shares of 10s. each were allotted and issued as fully paid to Markham and Darter respectively as nominees of the syndicate. The co. being in liquidation:—

Held, that the filed contract of Dec. 19 was a sufficient compliance with the requirements of s. 25 of the Companies Act, 1867, or that at any rate the two contracts of Dec. 12 and Dec. 19 were sufficient.

An application under the Companies Act, 1898, s. 1, for leave to file a contract or a memorandum in lieu of a contract, may be made either by motion or summons, but preferably by summons, and if by summons it should be heard in open Court and not in chambers, following the better practice on applications to rectify the register of shareholders.

Where a memorandum in lieu of a contract is approved by the Court and ordered to be filed with the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies under sub-s. 4, it is not necessary to file a copy of the order as well as the memorandum, but the memorandum should state on the face of it that it has been approved by the Court and directed to be filed by the order.

An English co., which carried on business in a Colony, passed resolutions under which a class of guaranteed preference stockholders became entitled to a cumulative payment of interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum in priority to the other stockholders. By a subsequent Act of the Colonial legislature a duty, in the nature of income tax, was imposed on all dividends or interest paid out of assets in the Colony to the members of companies carrying on business therein, and it was declared that the duty payable in respect of the amount received by any member should be a debt due by him to the Crown:—

Held, that the contract between the preference and ordinary stockholders being an English contract, the rights under it of preference stockholders, not domiciled in the Colony, were not affected by the Colonial Act, and that they were therefore entitled to their 6 per cent. without any deduction in respect of the Colonial duty. *SPILLER v. The notice convening the meeting of shareholders to consider the agreement described it simply as an agreement for the sale of the undertaking. The selling co. was governed by the Companies Clauses Act, 1845:—

Held, (1) that the provision in favour of the directors did not render the agreement ultra vires, but (2) that the notice, by reason of its omission to refer to this provision, did not fairly disclose the purpose for which the meeting was convened, and did not comply with s. 71 of the Companies Clauses Act.

P. asked G. to lend 6000l. on the stock, and he consented to do so on the certificate for the 8000l. stock being deposited. After P. had communicated with the co., its secretary deposited as required a certificate under its seal stating that G. was the registered holder of 8000l. debenture stock of the co., and that the stock was only transferable by deed registered in the co.'s books. G. then paid 6000l. to P., who paid the co. only 3000l. :—

In 1882 a co. borrowed money from P., for which they gave him a promissory note bearing interest at 5 per cent., and undertook that they would at any time, when called upon by the holder of the note, issue for the amount debentures, bearing interest at  $4\frac{1}{2}$  per cent., of a series which constituted a second charge on the co.'s assets, subject to a charge in favour of a first series of debentures previously issued. In 1894 an action was brought by debenture-holders against the co. to enforce their security. P. was one of the plts., as a holder of a first debenture, the other plt. being a holder of a second debenture. P. did not then claim to be a holder of a second debenture. He had continued to receive interest at 5 per cent. on his promissory note, and had not applied to the co. for debentures for the amount. After judgment in the action P. for the first time claimed to have debentures of the second series issued to him for the amount of his debt. The whole of the second series had not been issued, and the amount remaining unissued was sufficient to answer P.'s claim:—

Held, that P. had not waived his right under his agreement with the co.; that he was in equity a holder of debentures of the second series for the amount of his debt; and that he was entitled in respect of that amount to share in the distribution of the co.'s assets as if he were a legal holder of debentures of the second series.

B. & D., partners, dissolved partnership on terms of a sum payable by B. to D. D. sold his business to a co. of which he became a first director. The articles gave the directors power to borrow on debentures assignable free from equities. No director was to vote in respect of any contract in which he was interested, and if he voted his vote was not to be counted. One director was a quorum. Any debenture bearing the common seal, issued for a valuable consideration, was to bind the co. notwithstanding any irregularity touching the authority of the directors to issue the same (art. 115). Under pressure from D., B. agreed that the sum due from him should be secured by a debenture granted by the co. to B. and transferred to D. D.'s solicitors were given a copy of the articles. The co. owed B. more than the amount due from B. to D. payable by instalments not due at the date of the debenture, and interest at 6 per cent. was payable on undue instalments; the debenture carried interest at 5 per cent. Only B. and the secretary signed the debenture:—

Held, that the seal was duly affixed; that it was doubtful whether an uninterested director was present at the sealing; that the seal had been irregularly fixed; but that these objections were cured by art. 115:

Held, also, that the change from 6 per cent.

to 5 per cent. was a sufficient consideration to support the debenture, and that the fact of D.'s solicitors having a print of the articles did not affect D. with notice of the infirmities connected with the issue of the debentures, as an examination of the articles would not show that other directors were not present when the debenture was issued. *DAVIES v. A deed of charge on the assets of a co. registered under the Companies Act, 1862, to cover debentures is not a bill of sale within s. 14 of the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act, 1882.

The general district rate of an urban sanitary authority is not a tax or poor or other parochial rate within the meaning of s. 14 of the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act, 1882.

A deed of floating charge on the assets of a co. gave power to the trustee to appoint a receiver and manager, who was expressed to be the agent of the mortgagor:—

Held, that, on a receiver duly appointed under the power entering into possession of the premises and commencing to carry on the business of the co., there was a change of occupancy within the meaning of the Poor Rate Assessment and Collection Act, 1869, s. 16, and the Public Health Act, 1875, s. 211, sub-s. 3.

Held, that (i.) "costs of realization" were confined to costs of actual sale, and did not include costs of preservation; (ii.) the order authorizing the receiver to raise money gave him by implication power to create a charge having priority over the existing debentures; and (iii.) the fund in court must be applied first in satisfaction of the annual payments, and secondly of the charge created by the receiver. *LATHOM v. The Preferential Payments in Bankruptcy Amendment Act, 1897, received the royal assent on July 15, 1897. Before that date a winding-up order had been made against a co. which had issued debentures creating a floating charge, and a receiver had been appointed in an action for realization of the debentures:—

Held, that the Act was not retrospective, and did not apply so as to give priority over the debenture-holders to the preferential creditors referred to in the Act.

This decision was followed by Kekewich J. in Weeks v. Kent, Sussex and General Land Society, [1898] W. N. 39 (1). In re WAVERLEY TYPE WRITER. D'ESTERRE v. WAVERLEY TYPE WRITER — Wright J. [1898] 1 Ch. 699

A co. resolved on the issue of a defined number of debentures of equal amount, ranking pari passu, and creating a floating charge on the assets. The amount secured was to become immediately payable if the interest should fall into arrear. Some only of the debentures had been issued when the interest fell into arrear; whereupon an action was commenced on behalf of the debenture-holders for realization of their security. After the issue of the writ, but before the appointment of a receiver, the co. issued further debentures of the same issue to its solicitor to secure his costs of defending the action on behalf of the co.:—

Held, that as no receiver had been appointed

52. — Floating security—Equitable incumbrancers — Priority — Negligence — Possession of title-deeds.

In 1885 a limited co. issued a series of debentures charged upon all its property both present and future, such charge to be a floating security, but so that the co. was not to be at liberty to create any mortgage or charge upon its freehold or leasehold hereditaments in priority to the said debentures. In 1895 the co. deposited the title-deeds of some of its property with its bankers, on a memorandum of charge under seal, as a security for an overdraft. When this charge was given, the bank had no notice of the existence of the debentures and made no inquiries. In 1896 a debenture-holders' action to enforce the security was commenced in which an inquiry as to priorities was directed:—

Held, that the debenture-holders, having left the title-deeds with the co. so as to enable it to deal with its property as if it had not been incumbered, could not set up their prior charge against the equitable mortgage to the bank; that the bank had not been guilty of negligence, and, having a stronger equity than the debenture-holders, was entitled to priority. *In re CASTELL & BROWN, LD. 55. — Floating security—Garnishee order.

Debentures by way of "floating security" allow the co. to deal with its assets till winding-up, or stoppage of business, or appointment of a receiver. So where payment had been made by a debtor of the co. to a judgment creditor of the co. who had obtained a garnishee order absolute, such payment is valid, although the debenture-holders gave the garnishee notice of the debentures. Words in a debenture prohibiting a co. from creating a prior "charge" are to be read strictly, and do not defeat the rights obtained under a garnishee order. ROBSON v. SMITH Romer J. [1895] 2 Ch. 118

56. — Floating security—Goods seized in execution—Rights of debenture-holders.

A limited co. issued debentures secured by a floating charge upon all the property of the co., and also by a trust deed which vested in a trustee for the benefit of the debenture-holders the leasehold property and uncalled capital of the co., and gave him the right to call upon the co. to vest in him all other property of the co. except chattels within the meaning of the Bills of Sale Acts. Before the time for the payment of the amount secured by the debentures had arrived certain goods of the co. charged by the debentures were seized by the sheriff under a fi. fa. No winding-up resolution was passed and no receiver appointed, nor did the trustee put in force his powers under the deed, but the debenture-holders claimed the goods, and the sheriff interpleaded:—

Held, that the rights of the debenture-holders prevailed over those of the execution creditor since, the goods seized being validly charged with payment of the debentures, there was no interest of the co. in them available to satisfy the judgment debt. DAVEY & Co. v. WILLIAMSON & SONS, LD. Div. Ct. [1898] 2 Q. B. 194

provided that "notwithstanding the said charge" the co. might in the course and for the purpose of its business sell or otherwise deal with its property until default should be made in payment of interest for three months after the same should have become due, or until an order or resolution for winding up. After an instalment of interest had been due more than three months but before the debenture-holders had taken any step to enforce their security the co. by an issue of bonds mortgaged specific assets:—

Held, upon the construction of the condition, that after the expiration of the three months the debentures remained a floating security till the holders took some step to enforce it and prevent the co. from dealing with its property, and that the debenture-holders were not entitled to an injunction restraining the co. from paying interest to the bondholders.

60. — Foreign country, charge on property in—Receiver—French debt—Locality of debt—Unsecured creditor—Enforcing payment—Interference with receiver—Contempt.

In Oct., 1899, receivers were appointed in debenture-holders' actions of the undertaking and of the property whatsoever and wheresoever both present and future of an English co., the order following the wording of the debentures. Among the assets of the co. was a debt due to them from a French firm. In Nov., 1899, P. & Co., English creditors of the co., took proceedings in France for the purpose of attaching the debt due to the co. from the French firm. The plts. in the debenture-holders' action moved to restrain P. & Co. from intercepting, attaching, or taking in execution, or attempting to obtain payment of moneys due to the co. from the French firm, or from otherwise interfering with the receivers:—

Held, on the authority of Liverpool Marine Credit Co. v. Hunter, (1867) L. R. 4 Eq. 62; (1868) L. R. 3 Ch. 479, that the existence of the charge created by the debenture, though valid according to English law, did not entitle the debenture-holders to prevent P. & Co., who were unsecured creditors, from asserting and enforcing any rights given them by French law against this French debt; there being no equity in favour of the debenture-holders as against P. & Co., that the debt due from the French firm must be treated as being situate in France and subject to French law, and P. & Co. could not be prevented, at the suit of the debenture-holders, from taking any proceedings the law of France allowed for recovering their debt out of this French asset, and that the attachment which alone was recognised by the law of France ought to prevail over the title of the debenture-holders:

Held, further, that the appointment of the receivers made no difference; for though the Court can appoint receivers over property out of the jurisdiction, the receiver is not put in possession of foreign property by the mere order of the Court; something else has to be done, and until what is necessary has been done in accordance with foreign law, any person, not a party to the suit, who takes proceedings in a foreign country is not guilty of contempt either on the ground of interfering with the receivers' possession or otherwise, and for this purpose no distinction can be drawn between a foreigner and a British subject. *In re MAUDSLAY, SONS & FIELD. 62. — Form of judgment—Debenture-holder's action—Principal money not due—Security in jeopardy—Practice.

This was a debenture-holder's action in which a receiver had been appointed of the business undertaking and property of the debt. co. The plt. alleged that the debentures held by him were the only debentures of the debt. co. now outstanding. The principal moneys secured by the debentures had not become payable, and a sum which, at the date of the issue of the writ, was due to the plt. in respect of interest on his debentures was, after the issue of the writ, paid into court to the credit of the action. The plt., however, alleged that the debt. co. had ceased to carry on its business, was unable to pay its debts, and that his security was in jeopardy. The action now came on upon motion for judgment in default of defence.

Stirling J. made the order in the general form adapted from that settled by North J. and Kekewich J. in In re Wolverhampton District Brewery, Ltd., [1899] W. N. 229, directing (inter alia) an account of what was due to the plt. and the other holders (if any) of mortgage debentures issued by the debt. co. under and by virtue of such debentures. *WISSNER v. They issued debentures to the plt. and other creditors of P., which they accepted in satisfaction of their debts:—

Held (reversing V. It is not contrary to the true intent and meaning of the Companies Act, 1862, for a trader, in order to limit his liability and obtain the preference of a debenture-holder over other creditors, to sell his business to a limited co. consisting only of himself and six members of his own family, the business being then solvent, all the terms of sale being known to and approved by the shareholders, and all the requirements of the Act being complied with.

A trader sold a solvent business to a limited co. with a nominal capital of 40,000 shares of 1*l.* each, the co. consisting only of the vendor, his wife, a daughter and four sons, who subscribed for one share each, all the terms of sale being known to and approved by the shareholders. In part payment of the purchase-money debentures forming a floating security were issued to the vendor. Twenty thousand shares were also issued to him and were paid for out of the purchase-money. These shares gave the vendor the power of outvoting the six other shareholders. No shares other than these 20,007 were ever issued. All the requirements of the Companies Act, 1862, were complied with. The vendor was appointed managing director, bad times came, the co. was wound up, and after satisfying the debentures there was not enough to pay the ordinary creditors:—

Held, that the proceedings were not contrary to the true intent and meaning of the Companies Act, 1862; that the co. was duly formed and registered and was not the mere "alias" or agent of or trustee for the vendor; that he was not liable to indemnify the co. against the creditors' claims; that there was no fraud upon creditors or shareholders; and that the co. (or the liquidator suing in the name of the company) was not entitled to rescission of the contract for purchase.

A limited co. having, under its articles, power to issue debentures charging its assets including its uncalled capital, in Oct., 1892, passed a special resolution under s. 5 of the Companies Act, 1879, declaring that 5*l.* per share remaining uncalled up upon its ordinary 10*l.* shares should not be capable of being called up "except in the event of and for the purpose of the company being wound up." In June, 1894, when 5*l.* 15*s.* remained uncalled up, the co. issued debentures charging all its undertaking and property, "including its uncalled capital for the time being," with the principal money and interest secured by the debentures. The co. was afterwards ordered to be wound up, and the question arose whether the debentures issued by the co. created a valid first charge upon the 5*l.* per share reserved capital so as to entitle the debenture-holders to payment thereout in priority to the other creditors and the costs of winding-up:—

Held, by the C. A., affirming the judgment of Wright J., that upon the true construction of s. 5 of the Act of 1879, the co. had no power to create any charge on that portion of its capital which, in accordance with the resolution passed under that section, could only be called up "in the event of and for the purposes of the co. being wound up." The trustees appointed a receiver under the deed and he took possession of the assets and carried on the business of the co. Soon after his appointment the co. was ordered to be compulsorily wound up. The receiver continued to carry on the business and in so doing ordered goods from the respondents. In an action against the trustees for the price of the goods:—

Held, reversing the decision of C. A., Gaskell v. Gosling, [1896] 1 Q. B. 669, that though after the winding-up order the receiver ceased to be the agent of the co., he did not thereby or at any time receive any implied authority from the trustees to act as their agent, and that as the trustees never gave him any authority in fact they were not liable for the goods. *GOSLING v. The receivers and managers, not requiring all the money at once, overdrew with bankers to the extent of 500*l.*, and afterwards paid off the 500*l.* and interest out of assets in their hands. Subsequently they overdrew again to the full extent of 700*l.* without obtaining any further leave to borrow:—

Held, that, even if the prospectus could be looked at in order to ascertain the contract between the co. and the debenture-holders, the word "redeemable" meant only that the debentures were to be liable to redemption during the seventeen years, but that there was no obligation upon the co. that they should all be redeemed within that period.

A limited co. agreed to sell to H., B. & Co. 7000 barrels out of their stock at 3*s.* 6*d.* each. H., B. & Co. paid for them; but the co. fell into difficulties, its stock of barrels was exhausted, and as to more than 4000 it failed to deliver them. The co. had to the knowledge of H., B. & Co. issued debentures in the usual form of floating securities on all the property of the co. The debenture-holders obtained the appointment of a receiver, at which time H., B. & Co. owed the co. a liquidated sum for rent, and had the above claim against the co. in respect of the barrels:—

Held (reversing the decision of North J.), that the claim of H., B. & Co. against the co. was a liquidated claim of 3*s.* 6*d.* for each barrel not delivered, there being as to each such barrel a total failure of consideration which entitled H., B. & Co. to recover back their purchase-money:

Held, further, that H., B. & Co. could set off this demand against what they owed to the co., and that the knowledge of the existence of the debentures as a floating security at the time when the debt due to them was contracted was not such notice of an assignment as to prevent a set-off binding the debenture-holders.

Persons dealing bonâ fide with a managing director are entitled to assume that he has all such powers as he purports to exercise, if they are powers which according to the constitution of the co. a managing director can have.

H., B. & Co. pressed the co. for security for their claim as to the barrels; and at a meeting between them and the three directors of the co. it was proposed, but not finally settled, that the co. should issue debentures to H., B. & Co. by way of security, and should hypothecate to them various debts owing to the co. This meeting was adjourned to the next day, when only two directors were present (the quorum being three), but D., the managing director, was one of them. At this adjourned meeting H., B. & Co. advanced to the co. money to pay wages, and D. gave them a letter, signed by him on behalf of the board, by which, in consideration of H., B. & Co. finding cash for wages and payment of barrels, he agreed to execute a deed in conjunction with the board of directors creating and issuing to them the remainder of an issue of debenture stock; and he also gave to them a number of orders addressed to debtors of the co. informing them that the debts due from them were hypothecated to H., B. & Co. These orders were signed by D. as managing director. By the articles of the co. the directors were authorized to appoint a managing director, and to delegate to him such of the powers of the board as they thought fit; and it was not disputed that the board had power to hypothecate. There was no minute shewing what powers had been delegated to D., nor of his appointment as managing director, but he had acted as such:—

97. — Winding-up—Debenture-holder's action—Judgment—Transfer—Cross-claim by company against transferor—Right to registration.

After resolutions for the voluntary winding-up of a co. had been passed and a liquidator appointed, and judgment had been given in a debenture-holder's action against the co., R. became transferee, by way of security for a loan, of certain debentures from C., who had been a director of the co. The conditions of the debentures provided that transfers must be delivered at the registered office of the co. with a fee, and such evidence of identity or title as the co. might reasonably require, and thereupon the transfers would be registered; and that the principal and interest secured by the debentures would be paid without regard to any equities between the co. and the original or any intermediate holder. After R. had taken his transfer it was discovered that C. had been guilty of misfeasance, and he was ordered to pay a sum of money to the liquidator in respect thereof. R., who had had no notice of any cross-claim by the co., duly sent his transfer to the liquidator, who was also receiver in the action, for registration, but the liquidator declined to register it, and claimed to deduct C.'s debt to the co. from the amount due on his debentures:—

Held, that the right to transfer and to have the transfer registered was not affected either by the winding-up or by the judgment in the action, and that consequently R. was entitled to receive without deduction any dividend payable in respect

Held, that the addition of the word "future" did not extend the meaning of the term "property" as defined by Stanley's Case, (1864) 4 D. A subscriber of the memorandum of a co. incorporated without articles, and therefore under Table A of the Companies Act, 1862, convened a meeting of the subscribers to elect directors. No directors had been appointed at two general meetings held previously, although certain persons had been acting as de facto directors. A majority of the subscribers elected six persons as directors:—

100. — Appointment—Undischarged bankrupt—Clause validating the acts of de facto directors.

No. 114 of the articles of a co. provided that all acts done at any meeting of directors or by any person acting as a director should, notwithstanding that it should be afterwards discovered that there was some defect in the appointment of such directors or persons acting as aforesaid, or that they or any of them were disqualified, be as valid as if every such person had been duly appointed and was qualified to be a director. T., N., and S., the de facto directors, made a call, payment of which was resisted by some of the shareholders on the ground that T., N., and S., were not de jure directors. To shew that they were not, various irregularities were alleged, the most important of which was that N. had according to the articles vacated his office by parting with all his shares. After six days he acquired other shares sufficient for a qualification, and continued to act as director. His co-directors, who had power to fill up the casual vacancy occasioned by his parting with his shares, did not formally reappoint him, but all along treated him as a director; and it did not appear that they ever knew that for six days he had not been a shareholder:—

Held, by the C. A., that a clause such as art. 114 did not operate only as between the co. and outsiders, but also as between the co. and its members, and was sufficient to cover such irregularities as those alleged, and that the call was valid.

103. — Contracts with company—Declaration of interest—Collateral profits—Fiduciary character.

By the articles of association of a ry. co., it was provided that a director should vacate his office if he was concerned in, or participated in the profits of, any contract with the co. without declaring the nature of his interest; but "no director shall vacate his office by reason of his being a member of any corporation, co., or partnership, which has entered into contracts with or done any work for, the co.; or by reason of his being interested, either in his individual capacity, or as a member of any co., corporation, or partnership, in any adventure or undertaking in which the co. may also have an interest"; but the director was not to vote on contracts of this kind, and if he did, his vote was not to be counted. The ry. co., of which F. was a director, shortly after its formation entered into contracts with a steamship co. for the carriage and shipment of bananas. F. was the largest shareholder in the steamship co., and was also a partner in the firm that managed it: no disclosure of F.'s interest was made either in the prospectus of the ry. co., or when the contracts were entered into. The ry. co. brought an action against F. to make him liable for all profits received by him, as a shareholder in the steamship co., and as partner in the firm that managed it, under the contracts with the plt. co. F. having died before the trial, the action was revived against his executors:—

Held, on the authority of Imperial Mercantile Credit Association v. Coleman, (1871) L. R. 6 Ch. 558 (which has not been overruled on this point by S. C. (1873) L. R. 6 H. The L. Co. was promoted and formed by the directors of the L. Syndicate for the purpose of purchasing part of the property of the syndicate, consisting of nitrate works. The directors of the syndicate prepared and signed the memorandum and articles of association of the co., the articles nominating them as directors and stating specifically that they were also the directors of the syndicate. They also prepared the co.'s prospectus and purchase contract, and affixed the seals of the syndicate and of the co. to the latter. The co.'s solicitors and secretary were also the same as those of the syndicate. Two years after the date of the contract and the completion of the purchase the shareholders of the co., believing that their property had been purchased at an over-value and that there had been misrepresentations in the contract and prospectus, appointed an independent board of directors who, after investigating the facts and with the sanction of a general meeting of the shareholders, brought an action against the syndicate and the directors for rescission of the contract and damages on the ground of misrepresentation, misfeasance, breach of trust, and concealment of material facts, but not alleging fraud. From the date of the contract and down to and also since the commencement of the action the co. had, first by its original directors and afterwards by its independent board, carried on business and worked the property the subject of the contract. At the trial Romer J. dismissed the action:—

Held, by Lindley M.R. and Collins L.J., that the co. was not entitled to rescission or damages, for (1.) at the date of the contract the co. had, by its memorandum and articles, notice that its directors were also the vendors or agents of the vendor syndicate, and the mere fact that its directors did not constitute an independent board was not a sufficient ground for setting aside the contract; (2.) there had been no misrepresentation made to, or any material fact concealed from, any of the persons who were members of the co. at the date of the contract, those persons being the directors themselves; (3.) although the contract and prospectus were, on the evidence, misleading in certain particulars which would have entitled the co. at the time to repudiate the contract, yet through the subsequent alteration of the property consequent on its being worked by the co., the position of the parties had been so changed that they could not be restored to their original position; and (4.) the defts., the directors, had not been guilty of such negligence or breach of trust as to render them liable in damages in law for the loss occasioned to the co., or in equity to make good the loss.

But held, by Rigby L.J., (1.) that, in the promotion of the co., the preparation and sealing of the contract, and the preparation and issue of the prospectus, the original directors had, while acting as sole agents for the vendor syndicate, constituted themselves sole fiduciary agents for the purchasing co., and that the co. was therefore entitled to rescission (but accounting for the profits of its working), on the principle that no fiduciary agent can bind his principal by a sale to him of such agent's property, where the principal has purchased without independent advice; and that the notice in the memorandum and articles of the co. of the double relation of its directors was ineffectual to discharge them from the obligations involved in that principle; and (2.) that the co. had not lost its right to rescission either (a) through delay—for time did not run during the domination of the original directors and the non-disclosure by them of material facts—or (b) through alteration of the property, the alteration having been in effect the act of the vendor syndicate by its directors.

At the first meeting after T.'s interest accrued, T. said he was jointly interested with M., but did not declare the precise nature of his interest. Subsequently the other directors, without giving him notice, passed a resolution declaring T.'s seat vacant:—

Held, that a director was bound not only to declare that he had an interest, but to specify what his interest was. Though the paid-up capital of a limited co. cannot be lawfully returned to the shareholders under the guise of dividends or otherwise, yet the law does not prohibit such a co.—even if it be a banking co.—from paying dividends unless its paid-up capital is intact.

The payment of dividends out of the excess of the receipts over the outgoings of a year, after making some allowance for bad debts, losses made in previous years being ignored and in effect thrown on the capital, does not amount to a payment of dividends out of capital. If paid-up capital has been lost, its subsequent application in the payment of dividends is impossible.

Excluding cases in which it would be obvious that a particular debt or outlay could not be reasonably charged to capital, the question what losses can be properly charged to capital and what to income is a matter for business men to determine, and on such a matter the opinions of honest and competent men may differ. There is no hard and fast legal rule on the subject.

But if expenses or payments are obviously improperly charged to capital simply to swell the apparent profits and to make it appear that dividends may properly be declared, dividends declared and paid under such circumstances can no more be justified than if they were paid out of capital.

A director who is acting honestly himself is entitled to trust the officers of the co. not to conceal from him what they ought to report to him, if he has no reasonable ground for suspecting that they are deceiving him.

Directors are not liable for all their mistakes, but only for negligence which is in a business sense culpable or gross. Nor is a director liable for untrue representations made to the shareholders if he honestly believed the representations to be true and had at the time reasonable grounds for his belief.

The liquidator in the winding-up of a limited co. can recover from the directors dividends improperly paid by them, even though the creditors of the co. have been satisfied.

Turquand v. Marshall, (1869) L. R. 4 Ch. 376, distinguished.

A director resigned his office, and his resignation was accepted by the board. After this his name appeared as one of the directors in a report presented by the board to the shareholders. He took no part in the preparation of the report or in recommending the dividend proposed by it:—

Held, that, even if he knew that his name appeared in the report as a director, he was not liable for the statements contained in it or the recommendation of the dividend.

Clause 15 of the articles of association of a limited banking co. provided that the co. should have a paramount lien on all the shares held by any shareholder for all his debts to the co., and empowered the directors in case of non payment of any such debt, or in the event of the bankruptcy of the shareholder, to sell his shares, and apply the proceeds in discharge of his debt. Clause 98 empowered the directors to lend the funds of the co., or give credit, with or without security, and provided that no advances without security should be made or credit given to any director:—

Held, that the lien given by clause 15 was a security within clause 98, and that a loan might be made to a director without any other security than the lien, if the board considered his shares to be of sufficient value.

A former director of a banking co. was ordered to pay to the liquidator of the co. a sum of money, together with interest thereon at 5 per cent. per annum, on the ground that he had been guilty of a misfeasance in sanctioning the payment of dividends to the shareholders out of capital:—

R. was named in the articles of the H. Co. as one of its first directors. The articles provided that the first directors might act without acquiring their qualification, but that if they did not acquire it "within one month of their appointment, they shall be deemed to have agreed to take the same, and the same shall be allotted to them accordingly." R. after the registration wrote a letter referring to his having signed a proposed prospectus, shewing R.'s name as a director, and the articles of the co. He never acted as a director. Three of the subscribers acted as directors by signing a paper appointing a director in their stead within the three months allowed to qualify:—

Held, by C. A., revers. Wright J. (Lindley L.J. diss.), that upon the construction of the articles, as the three subscribers ceased to be directors within the three months, they could not be deemed to have agreed to take their qualifying shares, and their resigning within the period allowed for qualification released them, as the obligation to hold the shares ceased on resignation, and the obligation to acquire the shares was merely ancillary to the obligation to hold them. *In re R. 131. — Qualification shares—Rectification of register—Companies Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 89), s. 25.

To fix a director with liability in respect of his qualification shares, where these have been registered in his name without his application or knowledge, it is essential to shew that he has acted as a director at a time when he could not properly so act without being qualified. The articles of the A. Co. provided for qualification of directors, that the first directors should be allowed one month from the first general allotment to qualify, and that a director should vacate his office if he did not qualify in the prescribed time. C. signed the memorandum for one share, attended several board meetings within but not after the one month, but never applied for his qualifying shares. At the first general allotment, at which C. was not present, his qualifying shares were allotted to him and his name was placed on the register without his knowledge. As soon as he became aware of this he resigned, and did not act as a director after the expiration of the prescribed period for qualification:—

Held, by Stirling J., that C. was not stopped from denying that he had agreed to take the shares. On appeal fresh evidence was adduced to the effect that C.'s name was entered on certain loose sheets called allotment sheets signed by the chairman and secretary before his resignation, and copied into the formal register after the same:—

Held, by C. A., that C.'s name had not been placed on the register till after his resignation, and that he had entered into no binding agreement to take the shares:—

Semble, that if the allotment sheets had been intended and treated as a register of shares by the directors, the entry in them would have been valid registration.

The qualification of a director shall be the holding of shares of the co. of the nominal amount of 250*l.* A first director may act before acquiring his qualification, but shall in any case acquire the same within one month from his appointment, and unless he shall do so he shall be deemed to have agreed to take the said shares from the co., and the same shall be forthwith allotted to him accordingly." N. was one of the first directors, and from June, 1896, to Nov., 1897 (when the co. went into liquidation), he attended eight meetings of the board of directors. He did not acquire any shares within a month of his appointment; but in March, 1897, he acquired twenty-five shares of 10*l.* each, not from the co., but from its promoter. The directors never agreed as to the proportions in which the remuneration was to be divided amongst them:—

Held, that the agreement by N. to serve the co. on the terms of the articles as to qualification and otherwise, and the agreement by the co. to remunerate him, were cross and not interdependent contracts; that N. could not "cease" to hold a qualification which he never possessed; that as a member of the board he was nevertheless entitled to remuneration; but that he could only claim his share of the remuneration for one year, against which must be set off the 250*l.* due from him to the co. for the qualification shares which

The articles of association of a co. provided that "The directors shall be paid out of the funds of the co. as follows, viz. a sum of 150*l.* per annum to the chairman, and a sum of 100*l.* per annum to each ordinary director . . . by way of remuneration for their ordinary services." The co. having gone into voluntary liquidation on March 1, 1898, the directors claimed payment of remuneration at the rate of 150*l.* and 100*l.* respectively from June 30, 1897, when they were last paid, and which was the end of the co.'s financial year, to the date of their resignation shortly before the winding-up, and, on the refusal of the liquidator to pay, they issued an originating summons, raising the question whether they were entitled to payment, under s. 138 of the Companies Act, 1862. Each of the applicants held fully paid shares. One of them died when the case was part heard, and his executor applied to be allowed to continue the proceedings, but the liquidator refused his consent.

Held, upon reconsideration, that the applicants (other than the executor of the deceased applicant), being contributories, came within the words of s. 138 of the Act of 1862 and were entitled to pay, although the application was with reference to a claim by them to be paid certain directors' fees.

It followed that without consent the Court could not add the executor of the deceased applicant as a party to the proceedings. It was alleged that the directors had stated that they would waive their fees; but, even if that had been proved, it would not be enough to deprive them of the right of payment unless some alteration of position had thereby been brought about. It was also alleged, though not proved, that the services of the directors were useless. But because some of the work they did was of no use payment could not be refused. If the articles had said that the remuneration was to be so much for each year, there could be little question that, as Cozens-Hardy J. held in Salton v. New Beeston Cycle Co., [1899] 1 Ch. 775, nothing could have been claimed except for services for a full year. After some doubt as to the meaning of the article in this case, held that there could be no apportionment. One strong argument was that, if a director served a day or two, he would, if the opposite view were taken, be entitled to be paid de die in diem. Short of so holding, he could not say that under the article a director was otherwise entitled than to a lump sum for a year's services. The articles of an investment trust co. provided for the application to dividends of receipts from the dividends, income, profits, bonuses and advantages payable in respect of the co.'s investments.

By depreciation the present value of the investments shewed a heavy loss of which some portion was irrecoverable; during the past financial year the investments produced an income which substantially exceeded the expenses of management.

On the construction of the articles, held, that this excess was applicable for payment of dividend notwithstanding shrinkage in the value of investments or loss of fixed capital, although where the income of a co. arises from the turning over of circulating capital no dividends can be paid unless that capital is kept up to its original value, and that it was not necessary for the co. to apply for a reduction of capital under the Companies Act of 1877 before paying a dividend, and that the Court should not under such circumstances interfere with a declaration of dividend provided it was in accordance with the articles. *VERNER v. 159. — Closure—Sale of assets—Amalgamation—Distribution of consideration—Meeting of shareholders.

The objects of the A. Co. as stated by art. 3 of its memorandum were (inter alia) (a) to raise capital and invest it in such bonds, stocks, and securities as therein mentioned; (i) to sell any part of the assets and to accept the consideration in cash, shares, or other securities, and to divide any assets of the co. in specie among its shareholders; (o) to amalgamate with any persons, cos., or firms carrying on business of a like nature. The D. Co. carried on a similar business. The A. Co. agreed with the D. Co. to sell to the D. Co. all its assets (except 3325 2l. shares in the D. Co. which the A. Co. held) for 60,991l., to be satisfied as to 59,736l. by allotment of 29,868 fully paid-up shares of 2l. each in the D. Co., and the balance of 1255l. in cash or fully paid-up shares at the option of the A. Co. It was provided by the agreement that the shares so allotted and the shares in the D. Co. already held by the A. Co. were to be divided among the shareholders of the A. Co. in manner therein mentioned. It was doubtful whether the mode of division was not illegal as interfering with the rights of the shareholders under the memorandum and articles:—

Held, that the proposed sale being a sale of the assets of the A. Co. with a substantial exception was within (i), and that the transaction was also warranted by (o) as being an amalgamation.

Held, also, that the proposed division of shares, being a matter with which the D. Co. had nothing to do, did not, even if illegal, affect the validity of the agreement for sale, and that an interlocutory injunction to prevent the A. Co. from carrying the agreement into effect had been properly refused on an undertaking by the A. Co. not to divide the shares till after the trial otherwise than in accordance with the rights of the shareholders under the memorandum and articles.

At a meeting of shareholders it is not competent to the majority to come determined to vote in a particular way on any question, and to refuse to hear any arguments to the contrary; but when the views of the minority have been heard, it is competent to the chairman with the sanction of a vote of the meeting to declare the discussion closed and to put the question to the vote.

At a meeting held to confirm a resolution passed by the requisite majority at a former meeting so as to make it a special resolution, it is irregular to propose an amendment to that resolution.

The articles of association provided that thirty days' notice should be given to the members before every general meeting; to save time and expense, the notice of both meetings was contained in one document: this notice was dated Feb. 19, 1900, and, so far as material, was as follows: "Notice is hereby given that an extraordinary general meeting of the co. will be held at the offices of the co. on March 23, when the subjoined resolution will be proposed."

"Notice is hereby also given that an extraordinary general meeting of the co. will be held at the offices of the co. on April 7, when a report will be presented of the proceedings at the extraordinary general meeting of the co. to be held on March 23, and the subjoined resolution will, if passed by the requisite majority at that

"Should the said resolution not be passed by the requisite majority at the meeting to be held on March 23, due notice will be given to the shareholders that the meeting on April 7, of which notice is now given, will not be held."

Then followed the resolution for reduction of capital of the above-named co. The meetings were held on the days named, and the resolution was passed and confirmed.

162. — Notice of meeting of directors—Notice of business to be transacted—Authority to use name of company.

Directors of a co., being the select managing body, can at any meeting of the board deal with all affairs of the co. then requiring attention, whether ordinary or not, and previous notice of the special business is not a necessary condition of the proceedings being valid.

S., T., and W. were the directors of a newly-formed co., no shares in which had been allotted, two directors being a quorum. T. and W., without notice to S., held a meeting on Feb. 14, at which they appointed X. a director, appointed solicitors and bankers, and accepted an offer for the use of offices. On the 22nd, S., who had heard of these resolutions, obtained a memorandum, signed by five of the seven signatories to the memorandum of association, authorizing him to use the name of the co. in an action to prevent the directors from carrying out the resolutions of the 14th, and on the same day he issued a writ against T. and W., in which he and the co. were co-pts. On the same day, before the writ had been served, S. received a notice that a board meeting would be held on the 24th, not stating the nature of the business to be done, and a letter from W. stating that the business done on the 14th would be brought up again. On the 24th, S. did not attend, and T. and W. appointed X. and Y. directors, and allotted to each of themselves the number of shares which was the qualification of a director, and affirmed the resolutions of the 14th. The writ was then amended by adding X. and Y. as defts., and asking a declaration that the resolutions of the 24th were void, and an injunction to restrain the defts. from acting upon them, and to restrain X. and Y. from acting as directors. The co., pursuant to a resolution passed on the 24th, moved, by the solicitors appointed by the above resolutions, to have the name of the co. struck out as used without authority:—

Held, reversing the decision of North J., that the resolutions of Feb. 24 were valid, and X. and Y. duly elected directors:—

Held, further, that S. had used the name of the co. without authority; that, as the resolutions of Feb. 24 were valid, the motion to strike the name out was authorized; and that it must be struck out with costs to be paid by S. LA COMPAGNIE DE MAXVILLE v. WHITLEY C. A. [1896] 1 Ch. 788

At a meeting of the shareholders of a co. the articles of which allow voting by proxy, the chairman, in ascertaining the number of votes given on a show of hands, must count the vote of each person who holds proxies as a single vote, and not count a vote for each of the members whose proxies he holds.

In re Bidwell Brothers, [1893] 1 Ch. 603, overruled.

A notice convening an extraordinary general meeting to confirm a special resolution was accompanied by a circular from the secretary and directors with a proxy attached, asking for the return of the proxy in support of the resolution; by a printer's error the date of the meeting was left blank in the proxy. The articles of a limited co. whose capital was divided into different classes of shares provided (art. 13) that any agreement modifying the rights attached to each class must be confirmed by an extraordinary resolution passed at a separate general meeting of the holders of shares of that class, and "all the provisions hereinafter contained as to general meetings shall, mutatis mutandis, apply to every such meeting, but so that the quorum thereof shall be members holding or representing three-fourths of the nominal amount of the issued shares of the class." The subsequent provisions as to general meetings provided (inter alia) (art. 66) that the quorum thereat should be members personally present, not being less than three in number, holding or representing one-tenth of the issued capital of the co.; and (art. 68) that if at an adjourned meeting a quorum was not present those members who were present should be a quorum. These articles were said to be in the common form:—

Held (affirming the decision of Kekewich J.), that although the provisions as to general meetings were to apply, mutatis mutandis, to class meetings, they must be so applied subject to the provision above quoted, which was inserted in art. 13 for the purpose of protecting the rights of the privileged class of shareholders; and accordingly at all class meetings, whether adjourned or not, the quorum must be three-fourths of the members of the class required by art. 13. *HEMANS v. Apart from fraud, the declaration of the chairman of a meeting that a special resolution has been passed is conclusive.

At a meeting of a co. duly convened to pass an extraordinary resolution to wind up voluntarily, the chairman declared the resolution carried on a show of hands; a poll was not demanded by five members. On a petition by a holder of paid-up shares to wind the co. up compulsorily, the Court refused to entertain the question whether the resolution was carried by the requisite majority.

Where all the shares had been issued and were fully paid up, and after payment of debts and costs there would be no surplus available for distribution amongst the shareholders, the Court, without calling a meeting of the shareholders, sanctioned a scheme under which a new co. was to be formed to which the assets of the old co. were to be transferred, creditors on the old co. in respect of loans, and such trade and other creditors as should be willing to accept the same taking fully paid shares in the new co. in satisfaction of their debts, and the new co. paying to the liquidator a sum sufficient to pay creditors who should not accept shares a dividend of 6s. in the pound on their debts, and also to pay the expenses of the winding-up, including the scheme—charges, liens, and securities being left unaffected by the

The declaration of the chairman at a special general meeting of shareholders under s. 51 of the Companies Act, 1862, that the special resolution has, on a show of hands, been carried, is not "conclusive evidence" of the fact so as to preclude a shareholder from disputing the validity of the resolution by legal proceedings on the ground, for instance, that it has not been carried by the statutory majority.

Although a notice under s. 51 of the Companies Act, 1862, of a special general meeting of a co. regulated by Table A sufficiently complies with art. 35 if it states the "general nature" of the business, it is nevertheless desirable, where the business is of great importance, such as the proposed substitution of new articles of association for Table A, to supplement the notice with an explanatory circular.

Quære, whether, in the case of a co. regulated by Table A to the Companies Act, 1862, any distinction is to be drawn between "members" who may constitute a quorum under art. 37, and "members entitled to vote" under s. 51 of the Act. *YOUNG v. 184. — Jurisdiction of Court—Alteration of memorandum of association—Company under Joint Stock Companies Act, 1856 (19 & 20 Vict. c. 47).

On a petition under the Companies (Memorandum) Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 62), for the alteration of the memorandum of association of a co. registered under the Joint Stock Companies Act, 1856, the question arose whether the Court had jurisdiction to make the order. In support of the jurisdiction reference was made to In re Nitro-phosphate and Odams Chemical Manure Co., [1893] W. N. 141, where Kekewich J. held that in such a case the Court had jurisdiction, on the ground that registration under the Act of 1856 is, by virtue of s. 176 of the Companies Act, 1862, equivalent for this purpose to registration under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1890. It was, however, mentioned that in a previous case of In re General Credit Co., [1891] W. N. 153, a contrary view had been intimated by Romer J. It was stated that it did not appear that the decision of Romer J. had been called to the attention of Kekewich J. in 1893, nor that the attention of Romer J., in 1891, had been called to s. 176 of the Act of 1862. Under these circumstances, Kekewich J. now adhered to his former decision, and held that the Court had jurisdiction to make the order. In re HONG KONG AND CHINA GAS CO.

During the hearing of a motion to rectify the register of shareholders of a co. some documents were tendered in evidence on behalf of the co. The objection was taken that they were unstamped, and counsel for the co., on instructions, gave the usual undertaking that the documents should be stamped. They were then put in and read.

On motion ex parte, on behalf of the solicitor of the co., that the solicitor might be relieved from his undertaking as he never intended to give his own personal undertaking to stamp the documents, but intended the undertaking to apply to his client, the co. The stamps amounted to 500l.

A prospectus which merely specifies the dates of and names of the parties to contracts in compliance with the Companies Act, 1867, s. 38, does not give notice of circumstances contained in the contracts which are material to be known and the omission of which causes the prospectus to give a false impression.

Where an action is brought by a shareholder against the co. and its directors for relief in respect of an improperly issued prospectus, the fact that the relief claimed against the several defts. may differ in detail is no ground for objection that the action is bad as joining separate causes of action against separate defts., for in substance there is only one cause of action, namely, the improper issue of the prospectus. Neither is it improper to join in such an action the legal personal representatives of a deceased director alleged to have been a party to the issue of the prospectus.

209. — Misrepresentation—Misleading statement—“Untrue statement”—Director—Promoter—Shareholder—Contract—Rescission—Damages—Compensation—Directors’ Liability Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 64), s. 3, sub-s. 1.—Contract by company, directors, or promoters—Omission from prospectus—Concealment—“Fraudulent” prospectus—Waiver clause in prospectus or application form—Catching conditions—Notice—Companies Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 131), s. 38.

A misleading statement in a prospectus is an “untrue statement” within s. 3, sub-s. 1, of the Directors’ Liability Act, 1890. The liability imposed by that section for any untrue statement in a prospectus is absolute and is in no way affected by the consideration whether the statement was untrue in the sense in which it was used by those who issued the prospectus. Persons issuing a prospectus containing an untrue statement can only escape liability under the statute by proving that they had “reasonable ground” for believing the statement to be true in fact.

Sect. 38 of the Companies Act, 1867—which enacts that every prospectus shall specify the dates and names of the parties to any contract entered into by the co. or the promoters, directors or trustees thereof, and that any prospectus not specifying the same shall be deemed “fraudulent” on the part of the promoters, directors and officers of the co. knowingly issuing the same—cannot be evaded by a general waiver clause in the prospectus, or in the form of application for shares, to the effect that a subscriber for shares shall waive all claim for non-compliance with the section. A waiver clause, to be effectual as against a subscriber, must fairly disclose the circumstances which confer the rights which by the clause he agrees not to enforce.

The Court will refuse to give effect, as against a shareholder, to a “tricky” waiver clause in a prospectus or application form, upon the same principles as are applicable to catching conditions of sale as between vendor and purchaser or to general words in releases.

210. — Misrepresentation by agent—Shares—Rescission of contract.

A person suing a company to obtain rescission of an agreement to take shares in it must, generally speaking, bring his case under one of the following heads: (1) Where the misrepresentations are made by the directors or other the general agents of the co. entitled to act and acting on its behalf. (2) Where the misrepresentations are made by a special agent of the co. while acting within the scope of his authority, including the case of a person constituted agent by subsequent adoption of his acts. (3) Where the co. can be held affected, before the contract is complete, with the knowledge that it is induced by misrepresentation. (4) Where the contract is made on the basis of certain representations, whether the particulars thereof were known to the co. or not, and it turns out that some of them were material and untrue. *LYNDE v. 211. — Shares—Contract—Rescission—Non-disclosure of material facts.

Where a person applies for shares in a co. on the faith of statements contained in a prospectus issued by the co. and inviting applications for shares, and the prospectus contains no actual misrepresentation, and the shares are allotted, the applicant is not entitled to rescission of his contract merely because the prospectus did not state all the material facts pro and con, which might induce a person to apply for shares, or prevent him from applying. The applicant is only entitled to rescission on the ground of non-disclosure of facts where the facts not disclosed are such that the omission to disclose them renders the prospectus as it stands misleading. *McKEOWN v. By a reconstruction or amalgamation agreement the C. Co. and its liquidators agreed to transfer its goodwill and assets to the M. Co. should, in respect of each share therein held by him, "be entitled as of right to claim an allotment" of either a debenture bond, or two ordinary shares of 5*l.* each in the M. Co. credited with 1*l.* per share paid up, and the agreement provided that the M. Co. should, within a month from the date of the agreement, allot and issue the bonds and shares claimed, subject to this, that it should not be bound to allot shares to any one to whom under its articles it could have objected as a transferee of shares. The agreement further provided that a claim must be made within twenty-one days from the date thereof by sending in to the M. Co. or to the liquidators of the C. Co. a signed claim in writing, and that the liquidators should within seven days from that date give notice in writing to each member of the C. Co. stating the number of bonds or shares which he was entitled to claim as of right, with proper forms of claim. The liquidators duly gave notice to W., a shareholder in the C. Co., who within the twenty-one days signed a document, addressed to the directors of the M. Co., claiming an allotment of ten ordinary shares with 1*l.* per share paid up, and agreeing to accept the same and to pay the further moneys payable thereon when called upon. Before any acceptance of the offer or the allotment of the shares subsequently made, W. wrote to the M. Co. withdrawing his application. In the subsequent winding-up of the M. Co. the liquidator of that co. sought to have W. retained on the list of contributories in respect of the ten shares:—

Held, that the document sent to W. was an application which could be withdrawn by him before acceptance, and not an acceptance of a prior offer by the M. Co., and that he was not liable as a contributory. In re METROPOLITAN FIRE INSURANCE CO. WALLACE'S CASE

A co. by its articles gave the liquidator, in the case of a voluntary winding-up, power (irrespective of the powers conferred upon him by the Companies Acts, and as an additional power), with the authority of a special resolution, to sell the undertaking and assets of the co. for shares fully or partly paid up, or the obligations of or other interest in any other co., and to make an agreement for the allotment to the shareholders direct of the proceeds of sale in proportion to

This co. was in course of voluntary liquidation for the purposes of reconstruction under s. 161 of the Companies Act, 1862. The assets had been transferred to a new co. in consideration of shares in the new co. equal in number to the shares in the old co. In pursuance of the reconstruction agreement the voluntary liquidator offered a number of shares in the new co. to each shareholder in the old co. equal to the number of shares held by him in the old co.; and sold the shares in the new co. that were not accepted by shareholders in the old co. A co. having passed special resolutions for a voluntary winding-up and the adoption of a scheme of arrangement with their debenture-holders, the scheme was assented to by the statutory majority of the debenture-holders, as provided by the Joint Stock Companies Arrangement Act, 1870.

The scheme provided (inter alia) that a new co. should be formed, and that the liquidator should enter into an agreement with that co. for the transfer to it of the undertaking and assets of the old co.; that the new co. should issue debenture stock to the debenture-holders of the old co. in satisfaction of their debentures; that every shareholder in the old co. should be entitled to claim a share in the new co. in respect of each share held by him in the old co.; that the new co. should not be bound to allot any share unless the member entitled thereto should, within three weeks from the sanction of the scheme by the Court, claim his allotment and make a specified payment on account of the liability thereon; and that as regarded unclaimed shares the liquidator should use his best endeavours to sell the same, and should divide the net proceeds of sale rateably among the non-claiming members of the old co. Subject to the provisions of the scheme, the new co. was to take over and discharge all the liabilities of the old co. and to indemnify the old co.

Among the special resolutions passed by the shareholders of the old co. was one which authorized the directors and the liquidator or either of them "to procure underwriting for all or any of the capital of the new co., on such terms and conditions as they or he may approve, and to pay for the same out of the assets of the co."

In pursuance of this resolution the liquidator entered into two agreements with persons who agreed to apply for and take up all the shares in the new co. which should not be taken up by the shareholders in the old co., in consideration of a commission of 8d. per share on all the shares of the new co., 250,000 in number.

No shareholder of the old co. had given a notice under s. 161 of the Companies Act, 1862, requiring the liquidator to purchase his shares.

Upon a petition under the Joint Stock Companies Arrangement Act, 1870, for the sanction of the Court to the scheme:—

Held, by Cozens-Hardy J., that the underwriting agreements were illegal, and that the Court ought not to sanction the scheme.

This agreement was filed with the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies; the plt. co. having applied for 6500 of these 200,000 shares under the option so conferred upon them, the question was raised whether the filing of the above agreement was a sufficient compliance with s. 25 of the Companies Act, 1867:—

An investment co., whose capital was divided into founders', preference, and ordinary shares, had by depreciation in the value of its investments suffered a considerable loss of capital, and there appeared to be no reasonable prospect of anything ever coming to the holders of the founders' shares, either in respect of capital or dividend. By the constitution of the co. the founders' shares were, in the event of liquidation, to bear in the first instance losses of capital. The memorandum of association provided that preference shares might be issued on such terms as the co. should by special resolution determine. Shares preferred both as to capital and dividend were issued by the directors without any special resolution having been passed; but at meetings subsequently held and attended by all classes of shareholders resolutions were unanimously passed adopting the terms under which the preference shares were issued. The co. presented a petition for the confirmation by the Court of resolutions for reduction which involved the total extinction of the founders' shares and threw the remainder of the loss upon the ordinary shares:—

The Court has power, under the Companies Acts, 1867 and 1877, to sanction a resolution by a limited co. for a partial reduction of one class of shares, e.g., original shares already issued and fully paid up, leaving the unissued shares unreduced. But if the articles give a voting power proportionate to the holding of original shares, the Court will require an alteration in them so as to make the voting power proportionate to the reduced capital. The Court will not at once dispense with the words "and reduced," that addition being requisite to give for such period as the Court thinks reasonable warning to the public of the financial position of the co.

238. — Petition to confirm—Reduction of capital.

The co. was incorporated in 1887 with a capital of 40,000*l.*, divided into 40,000 shares of 1*l.* each. Of these shares 30,000 were issued to the vendors as fully paid up, and 10,000 were subscribed for and paid up in full.

In 1892 the capital of the co. was increased to 100,000*l.* by the issue of 60,000 shares of 1*l.* each, the whole of which was duly issued.

The share capital having been found to be largely in excess of the requirements of the co., in March, 1899, a special resolution was passed, which was afterwards duly confirmed, whereby it was resolved that the capital of the co. should be reduced to 70,000*l.* divided into 40,000 shares of 1*l.* each fully paid up, and 60,000 shares of 10*s.* each, on which varying amounts had been paid. The resolutions in favour of the reduction were passed unanimously, and there was no opposition to the petition.

The B. Co had power under its articles to reduce capital by paying off capital. The shares were divided into ordinary shares, partly paid up, and founders' shares fully paid up. The co. carried on business in England and in the U. S. This was disadvantageous, and it was determined that the co. should make over the investments in the U. S. to the shareholders there, their shares being cancelled, and that the English shareholders should take the English assets and an agreed sum by way of adjustment. A special resolution was duly passed to carry out this agreement:—

Held, reversing C. A., that the reduction of capital was within the powers given by the Acts of 1867 and 1877, and that as the arrangement was fair and equitable it should be confirmed. BRITISH AND AMERICAN TRUSTEE AND FINANCE CORPORATION v. COUPER

It was agreed that the letter was irrevocable, provided that 40,000 shares were underwritten or applied for prior to the public issue of the prospectus of the Consort Co., and allotment made on or before Sept. 30. No notice of the acceptance of this offer was sent to Stark, but a form of acceptance at the foot of it was signed by the secretary of the Mines Co. the Consort Co., and 9000 shares were accordingly allotted to him and registered in his name. Upon a motion by Stark to rectify the register by omitting his name :—

Held, by the C. A., that the underwriting letter did not constitute a contract binding Stark to take shares until it had been accepted by the Mines Co. and notice of acceptance had been given to him; that the authority to the Mines Co. to apply for shares in his name did not arise until he had been informed by that co. of the number of shares for which they accepted his offer, and he had failed to apply himself for that number; that he was not estopped as against the Consort Co. from denying the authority of the Mines Co. to apply for shares in his name; and that he was entitled to have his name removed from the register of members of the Consort Co.

"Member" in art. 27 of Table A to the Companies Act, 1862—which provides that on the increase of the capital of a co. the new shares shall be offered to the "members" in proportion to their existing shares—includes a deceased member so long as his name is on the register.

Thus, where, in the case of a co. regulated by Table A, new shares had been created by special resolution in the lifetime of a member, but were not actually offered to the members of the company until after his death:—

Held, that the legal personal representative of the deceased member, whose name still remained on the register, could require an allotment of the shares which the latter would, if living, have been entitled to have offered him, these shares not yet having been disposed of by the co.; but, quære, as to the title of the legal personal representative to the shares, if, as was not the case, the co. had sent by post a letter containing the offer directed to him at the registered address of the deceased member, or directed to the place of abode or business of the representative or his solicitor, and, not having received an answer applying for the shares within the time limited by the letter, had proceeded to dispose of them otherwise.

Where one of the articles of association of a limited co. prescribes a particular mode of allotment of new shares, quære, whether it is competent for the co. by special resolution to sanction a different mode of allotment without having first passed a special resolution duly altering that article. *JAMES v. A co. under its articles had power to forfeit shares for non-payment of calls, and to sell, re-allot, or dispose of, the same as they thought fit. On its ordinary 10l. shares, calls varying from 3l. to 7l. had been paid, and a large number of these had been forfeited. In the course of proceedings for the reduction of the capital of the co., the directors proposed to change the forfeited 10l. shares into 5l. 5s. shares credited with 2l. 5s. as paid thereon, and to offer these to the holders of ordinary shares at the price of 30s. per each reduced forfeited share.

Held, affirming the decision of Romer J., that the co. were not bound to treat the forfeited shares as if nothing had been paid upon them; that this was not in effect an issue of shares at a discount; and that the article empowering the company to sell its forfeited shares was valid, and authorized the directors to deal with them in the way they proposed to do. *MORRISON v. The facts of this case were substantially, with slight distinctions, identical with those in In re F. W. Jarvis & Co., [1899] 1 Ch. 193. The question accordingly arose whether the decision of Romer J. in the case last cited applied, or whether the case fell within the more recent decision of Cozens-Hardy J. in In re Whitehead & Brothers, Ltd., [1900] 1 Ch. 804.

Held, that the decision in In re Jarvis & Co. ought to have been followed. It did not appear from the report of In re Whitehead & Brothers, Ltd., that Cozens-Hardy J. had any better evidence of identity than was before Romer J. in the former case. The distinctions relied upon in argument between this case and that before Romer J. were not sufficient standing alone to justify a departure from his decision. *In re ARCHIBALD D. The issue by a co. of nominally paid-up shares at a discount is ultra vires, and the shares are held subject to the liability to pay to the co. in cash so much of the nominal value of the shares as has not been paid, and the register will be ordered to be rectified accordingly. Held, on the authority of In re Kharaskhoma Exploring and Prospecting Syndicate, [1897] 2 Ch. 451, that the consideration for the issue of the shares was insufficiently stated, and that an order ought to be made for the rectification of the register of shareholders.

It also recited the incorporation of the co., and that, by an agreement made between the vendor, the trustee, and the co., it was provided that the purchase-money should be paid or satisfied by the allotment to the vendor of a specified number of fully paid-up shares, and payment of a specified amount in cash. The contract then witnessed that it was agreed that the co. should file "this agreement" and should allot to the vendor a specified number of fully paid-up shares, and that the same should be accepted by the vendor in satisfaction of that portion of the purchase-money which under the prior agreement was to be satisfied by the allotment of fully paid-up shares. Neither of the recited agreements was filed. On a motion, by holders of some of the fully paid-up shares issued to the vendor, to rectify the register by striking out their names:—

Held, that the contract which had been filed determined, within the meaning of s. 25 of the Companies Act, 1867, that payment for the shares allotted to the vendor was to be otherwise than in cash, and sufficiently stated the nature of the consideration for the issue of the shares.

By a contract in writing dated October 18, 1897, the owner of a business agreed to sell it to a co. for a specified sum of money to be paid wholly or partly in cash, shares, or debentures as the directors should determine. Subsequently the directors allotted specified shares to the vendor as fully paid up in respect of a part of the purchase-money, but no written contract to that effect was entered into. The original contract was not filed as required by s. 25 of the Companies Act, 1867, the omission to file it being due to the fact that the parties were ignorant of the provisions of the Act. Upon an application by the vendor for an order for the filing of the original contract with the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies under the provisions of s. 1 of the Companies Act, 1898:—

Held, that the omission to file the contract was due to “inadvertence” within the meaning of the Act:

Held, however, that the contract was not sufficient within the meaning of the Act, inasmuch as the determination by the directors as to the mode in which payment was to be made was supplemental to the original contract, and without this determination there was no complete contract:

Held, therefore, that there must be an order that a supplemental contract be entered into, that the supplemental contract be filed with the original contract, and that the entire contract when so filed should operate as if it had been filed at the time of the issuing of the shares. *In re JACKSON & Co. The 6500 shares were duly allotted to J. under the contract. No other shares other than those were ever applied for by or allotted to J., and there was evidence to shew that the 6500 shares for which J. signed the memorandum of association were considered by all parties to be the same 6500 shares issuable to him under the contract, and that J. did not intend by so signing the memorandum of association to render himself liable to take any shares other than the 6500 mentioned in the contract:—

Held, on motion made under s. 1, sub-ss. 1 and 4, of the Companies Act, 1898, for an order for filing a fresh contract in writing, or in the alternative for filing a memorandum specifying the consideration for which the shares were issued, that the case was not within the Act, that the contract filed under s. 25 of the Act, of 1867 was a proper and sufficient contract, and that the object of the application was not to get rid of any liability under that contract, but to obtain indirectly the decision of the Court whether or not J. was under some liability in respect of the shares for which he signed the memorandum of association, and that it was not contemplated by the Act of 1898 that it should be used for the decision of such a question, and the motion was refused. *In re F. 299. — Transfer—Refusal to register—Concealment of grounds of refusal—Companies Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 89), s. 35.

The rule that directors who have power to refuse to register a transfer of shares are not bound to disclose their reasons for refusing, if they have considered the question and have acted bonâ fide, applies to cases where their power is limited to particular grounds for refusal as well as to cases where their power is absolute. In re COALPORT CHINA CO. — C. A. [1895] 2 Ch. 404

300. — Transfer—Registration of—Interlocutory injunction restraining proceedings in winding-up—Companies Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 89), ss. 35, 131.

Application for an order that certain transfers of shares should be registered. It appeared that in an action of Tiessen v. Henderson, [1899] W. N. 45; [1899] 1 Ch. 861, see No. 15, above, an interlocutory injunction had been granted restraining the directors and proposed liquidator of the co. from carrying out certain resolutions for a voluntary winding-up of the co. with a view to reconstruction. There was no appeal from this interlocutory order. Under these circumstances the directors had refused to register the transfers.

Kekewich J. said that, though he was extremely reluctant to perpetuate a deadlock, he could not hold that the Court ought, if it had the power, to direct registration of these transfers, knowing that it was possible that within a reasonable time the registration might be bad by force of the statute. It could not be said that the directors were refusing to register without sufficient cause. The case, therefore, was not brought within s. 35. He accordingly refused the application, but granted leave to appeal, and directed that the applicants, if they appealed, but not otherwise, should pay the costs of the application. In re VIOLET CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING CO. — Kekewich J. 301. — Transfer—Rescission—Agent.

A transference of shares cannot obtain rescission of a contract to take shares and rectification of the register on account of misrepresentation in the prospectus, even though the transfer be but nominal, the transferor being his agent and the calls paid by him, unless the co. was informed that the applicant was only an agent. *HYSLOP v. event of bankruptcy—Perpetuity—Fraud on bankruptcy law—Validity of articles.

Action for a declaration that the debts were not entitled to require the transfer of the bankrupt's shares at a fixed price, and that the transfer articles of the co. were void; and for an injunction to restrain the co. from enforcing a transfer of the bankrupt's shares at any price, or alternatively at any price less than the fair and actual value of the shares.

Farwell J. said that to hold that a provision in articles which compelled a man to sell his shares for all time at a particular price and to particular persons was bad because it was repugnant to absolute ownership and tended to perpetuity would be to apply to modern co. law principles which were wholly inapplicable. The contract contained in the articles was an incident of the share, and the rule against perpetuity did not apply to personal contract. In the absence of mala fides, and the contract being a fair one equally binding on all who entered into it, there was nothing obnoxious to the bankruptcy law in such provisions as these. Action dismissed. BORELAND'S TRUSTEE v. STEEL BROTHERS & CO.

When a co. declares a dividend on its shares, a debt immediately becomes payable to each shareholder in respect of his dividend for which he can sue at law, and the Statute of Limitations immediately begins to run. The declaration does not make the co. a trustee of the dividend for the shareholder, and an entry of the liability in the co.'s books—at any rate when no special part of its assets is set aside as representing the dividend and no notice of the entry is given to the shareholder—does not take the case out of the statute.

307. — Underwriting—Notice.

The plt. agreed with A., one of the promoters of a co., to underwrite a certain number of shares. By the terms of the agreement, if the plt. did not himself apply for shares by a certain date, A. was to apply in his name and receive the allotment as his agent. The plt. did not apply himself. A. accordingly applied, and a proportionate number of shares was allotted to the plt. :—

C. further agreed that the agreement and application should be irrevocable, and, notwithstanding any repudiation by him, should be sufficient to authorize P. to apply for shares on behalf of C. and the co. to allot them. P. by letter accepted these terms. The co. was incorporated on March 24, and the subscription list was advertised to open on March 27, and close on the 30th. On March 27, C., who had applied for 1000 shares, stopped the cheque he had given for the deposit, and on the 30th wrote to P. and to the secretary of the co. repudiating the agreement. P., however, on April 2, applied on behalf C. for 980 shares, which, in the events which had happened, was the number he was bound to take, according to the terms of the letter, and the co. allotted these shares to C. and put him on the register in respect of them :—

Held (affirming the decision of Stirling J.), that C. was rightly placed on the register and was not entitled to have his name removed, for that the authority given to P. by the underwriting letter to apply for shares on behalf of P. was an authority coupled with an interest, and therefore not revocable. In re HANNAN'S EMPRESS GOLD MINING AND DEVELOPMENT CO. I. (c).

The articles of association of a co. provided that, “If at any time a sale or arrangement shall be made or proposed in pursuance of s. 161 of the Companies Act, 1862, the purchase-money to be paid for the interest of any dissentient member shall be such sum of money as the liquidator can obtain by selling the shares, stock or other property to which such dissentient member would have been entitled upon the completion of the sale or arrangement had he not expressed his dissent.”

The co. resolved upon a voluntary winding-up, and authorized the liquidator to enter into an arrangement for the sale of the business and assets of the co. to a new co. :—

Held, that the above clause of the articles did not amount to an “agreement” within the meaning of s. 162 of the Companies Act, 1862, so as to deprive a member of the co. who dissented from the arrangements of his right under that section to have the value of his interest in the co. determined by arbitration.

Held, that the amount credited by the liquidator to revenue as "appreciation" must be treated as income, and not as capital, it being merely a restitution to profits of what had been previously taken from profits.

6. — Surplus assets—Articles of association.

The articles of association of a co. with a nominal capital divided into 1l. shares provided that if on the winding-up of the co. the surplus assets should be insufficient to repay the whole of the paid-up capital, such surplus assets should be distributed so that as nearly as might be the losses should be borne by the members in proportion to the capital paid, or which ought to have been paid, on the shares held by them respectively at the commencement of the winding-up, other than amounts paid in advance of calls. Shortly after incorporation 100,000 shares were issued on each of which the sum of 5s. was paid up, and 25,000 further shares each of which was at once fully paid up. No calls were ever made. In the winding-up of the co., after paying debts and expenses there remained assets sufficient to repay the holders of the 25,000 shares 15s. per share, but insufficient to repay all the paid-up capital on the 125,000 shares:—

Held, that a call (actual or in account) of 3s. per share must be made on the holders of the 100,000 shares, so as to make these shares paid up to the extent of 8s. per share; that the amount so called must be applied in repayment of 12s. per share to the holders of the 25,000 shares, making their shares also paid up to the extent of 8s. per share, and that the assets in hand would then be divisible among the holders of the whole of the 125,000 shares pro rata.

The capital of a co. was 25,075l. in 25,000 shares of 1l. each, and 1500 shares of 1s. each, with power in the memorandum of association to attach any preferential rights. By clause 3 of the articles of association, the 1l. shares were to be ordinary shares, and the 1s. shares were to be founders' shares, and as between the two classes the profits of the co. distributable as dividend were to be applied as to one-fourth in paying dividends on the ordinary shares, and as to the residue in paying dividends on the founders' shares. By clause 15 every founders' share conferred fifty votes, and every ordinary share one vote. Clause 39 was as follows: "In the event of a winding-up of the co., the surplus assets available for distribution among the holders of the shares in the original capital shall belong as to one-fourth to the holders of the ordinary shares in the original capital in proportion to the ordinary shares aforesaid held by them respectively, and as to the other three-fourths to the holders of the founders' shares in the original capital in proportion to the founders' shares held by them respectively." The liquidators in the winding-up raised the question whether the true construction of the expression "the surplus assets available for distribution amongst the holders of the shares" was, (a) the surplus after discharging debts, liabilities, and costs of winding-up, and making good to the shareholders the amounts paid on their shares, or (b) the surplus after discharging debts, liabilities, and costs only:—

Held, that the case was governed by In re New Transvaal Co., [1896] 2 Ch. 750, notwithstanding the addition of the words in italics (which were omitted from the articles in that case), and that construction (a) was the proper one. In re PEABODY GOLD MINING CORPORATION

8. — "Surplus assets," Meaning of—Construction of articles of association.

The term "surplus assets," when used in articles of association providing for distribution among the shareholders on a winding-up taking place, has no such recognised technical meaning that the Court is bound to construe it as referring to the assets after providing only for debts, liabilities, and costs, without recouping paid-up capital.

The capital of a co. was 100,200l. in 100,000 ordinary shares and 200 founders' shares respectively of 1l. each, all of which (except one founders' share) were issued and fully paid up.

One of the articles of association was as follows: "If the co. shall be wound up, one-fifth of the surplus assets (if any) shall belong to and be divided among the holders of founders' shares, and the remaining four-fifths of such surplus assets shall belong to and be divided among the holders of ordinary shares in proportion to the amount of capital paid up on the shares held by them."

Another article had provided that the profits in each year should be applicable in or towards payment of a dividend of 8 per cent. on the amount paid up on the ordinary shares, and that the surplus (if any) should be divided, as to one-fifth among the holders of founders' shares, and as to the other four-fifths among the holders of ordinary shares in proportion to the amounts for the time being paid up thereon.

The co. went into voluntary liquidation, and, after providing for all debts, costs, and liabilities, a sum of about 90,000*l.* remained for distribution among the shareholders:—

Held, that, having regard to both articles, "surplus assets" meant the assets remaining after providing for debts, costs, and liabilities, and also recouping the paid-up capital subscribed by all the shareholders. In re NEW TRANSVAAL CO.

9. — Surplus assets.

By the memorandum of association of the B. Co., one of its objects was to sell its undertaking and all or any part of its property with power to accept as the consideration any shares, stocks or obligations of any other co.; and the capital was divided into 6 per cent. preference shares (having a preferential right both as to capital and income) and ordinary shares. By the articles (64) the profits of each year were to be first applied in paying the preferential dividend and any arrears thereof unpaid in any previous year; (72) the holders of any class of shares might, by extraordinary resolution at a meeting of that class of holders, consent to the abandonment of any preference or priority; (134) on winding-up, if the surplus assets should be more than sufficient to repay paid-up capital, the excess should be distributed in proportion to the capital paid, or which ought to have been paid, but without prejudice to the rights of holders of shares issued on special conditions; (136) the liquidator might with the sanction of an extraordinary resolution divide assets in specie. By an agreement in writing the B. Co. agreed to sell its undertaking and property (except a sum sufficient to pay a 10 per cent. dividend to the ordinary shareholders, and a 6 per cent. dividend to the preference shareholders) to the X. Co., the consideration being a sum, payable to the B. Co., equal to 4*l.* per ordinary share and 1*l.* 4*s.* per preference share, to be satisfied in debenture stock and shares of a new co. to be called the A. Co. This agreement did not point out how the consideration was to be divided amongst the preference and ordinary shareholders, but the proposed mode of distribution was explained in a circular sent with the notices of an extraordinary meeting of the B. Co., at which, when held, it was resolved that the agreement should be approved and the directors should be authorized to carry the same into effect. The proposed mode of distribution was different from that pointed out by the articles. The debenture stock and shares in the A. Co. which formed the consideration were allotted to the B. Co., which afterwards went into voluntary liquidation, and the liquidator, who had not enough in hand to pay the dividends under the agreement without

Held, that—in the circumstances, and without laying down any general rule—Somes v. Currie, (1855) 1 K. & J. 605, was an authority warranting the Court in inferring an arrival by the shareholders at an unwritten agreement for a mode of distribution different from that prescribed by the articles.

The regulations of a co. with a nominal capital in 1*l.* shares provided that if upon the winding-up the surplus assets should be more than sufficient to repay the whole paid-up capital, the excess should be distributed among the members in proportion to the capital paid or which ought to have been paid on the shares held by them respectively at the commencement of the winding-up. Some of the shares issued were fully paid up; on others only 10*s.* per share had been paid. There was an excess in the winding-up after paying debts and expenses and repaying all the paid-up capital:—

Held, that the excess was distributable in proportion to the capital actually paid up.

11. — Surplus assets—Distribution not according to legal rights—Implied term in resolution—Shareholders—Powers of majority.

The A. Co., with a capital of 550,000*l.* divided into shares of 10*l.* each, of which 35,000 were preference shares and 20,000 were ordinary shares, and with articles of association which were silent as to how the surplus assets were to be divided between the two classes of shareholders in the event of winding up, entered into an agreement, under a power in its memorandum of association, to sell its undertaking and assets to the C. Co.

Part of the consideration for the sale was a sum of 310,000*l.* stock of the C. Co., which was to be distributed among the holders of the preferred and deferred shares of the A. Co., and accepted by them in satisfaction of their interests in the property sold; and the agreement was expressed to be conditional on all necessary resolutions of the shareholders of the A. Co. being passed.

The agreement was silent as to the proportions in which the stock was to be divided between the two classes of shareholders, and so was the notice convening a meeting of the shareholders to pass a resolution approving the agreement and authorizing the directors of the A. Co. to carry the same into effect. A circular sent by the secretary of the A. Co. with the notice stated that the purchase consideration to the shareholders of 310,000*l.* stock was to be distributed among them in the proportion of 210,000*l.* to the preferred shareholders, and 100,000*l.* to the deferred shareholders. This suggested mode of distribution was referred to at the meeting, where it was also pointed out that the suggested mode was not in accordance with the legal rights of the two classes of shareholders in a winding-up. There were absentees from the meeting, and only a majority of the shareholders present voted for the resolution:—

Held, that the Court could not (as it had done in Somes v. Currie, (1855) 1 K. & J. 605, and In re Beeston Pneumatic Tyre Co., [1898] W. N. 34; 14 Times L. R. 338) draw an inference from the facts that all the parties concerned had agreed upon a mode of distribution not in accordance with the legal rights of the two classes of shareholders, and that, unless successful proceedings could be taken against the A. Co. or its directors, or to set aside the resolution, or all individual consents of shareholders could be obtained, the liquidators must distribute the 310,000*l.* stock in accordance with the legal rights of the shareholders. *In re NORTH WEST ARGENTINE RLY. Summons by liquidator to ascertain the principles upon which the surplus assets of the co. available for distribution among the shareholders ought to be distributed. The assets, after paying debts and costs of liquidation, were not sufficient to return to the shareholders in full the paid-up capital. Some of the ordinary shares were fully paid up. Some had only 1*l.* 15*s.* paid on them:—

Held, upon the construction of the clauses of the memorandum of association, that the assets in hand plus the amount of unpaid calls must be divided between all the shareholders in the proportion of 5*l.* to the holder of an ordinary share and 1*l.* to the holder of a founders' share, the holders of unpaid shares being debited with the amount of the calls which they had not in fact paid. 16. — Surplus assets—Preference shares—Revenue representing dividends never declared.

A co. was incorporated in 1872 having a capital of 850,000*l.* in preferred and deferred shares of 20*l.* each, the preferential rights of the former being only in respect of dividend. Art. 101 was as follows: "The directors may, with the sanction of the co. at the ordinary general meeting, declare a dividend to be paid to the members in proportion to their shares, subject, however, to" arts. 105 and 102. By art. 102 no dividend was to be declared to be paid on deferred shares unless and until the net profits for the current year should have enabled the directors to declare and pay on the preferred shares a preferential dividend of 6 per cent. for that year; and after payment on deferred shares of a dividend of 6 per cent. for the current year, the residue, if any, was, subject to art. 105, to be equally divided between both classes of shareholders pari passu in proportion to the amounts paid up on the shares. Art. 103 enabled interim dividends to be paid, and art. 104 prohibited the declaration or payment of any dividend except out of profits. Art. 105 provided that the directors might set aside out of the profits or receipts of the co. such sum as they might think proper to form a "sinking fund" for the redemption of capital, or to a "contingency fund" to meet any unforeseen or prospective liabilities, and might further out of the profits set aside such sum as they might think proper as a reserve fund for equalising dividends, or for any other purposes of the co. The 30,000 preferred and 12,472 deferred shares which were issued were fully paid up. A large outlay being required for the construction of works, no dividend was ever paid on the deferred shares, but in each of the years 1875, 1887, 1889, 1893, and 1894 a dividend of 1 or  $1\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. on the preferred shares was paid. In Sept., 1895, the co. went into voluntary liquidation, and shortly afterwards the undertaking was sold. After paying creditors, a sum of about 220,000*l.* remained for division amongst the shareholders. The articles did not state how the surplus assets in case of winding-up were to be distributed. The preference shareholders claimed to have certain sums paid to them in respect of dividend before any of the balance of assets, after paying debts, was paid on account of capital:—

Held, that as the sums claimed in priority had not actually been declared as dividend, it was not sufficient for the preference shareholders to shew that, had the co. been a going concern, the amounts claimed in priority might have been declared as dividend, and that on the articles their claim to priority failed.

In some years prior to 1895 there were balances of revenue over expenditure—not representing cash in hand, but being a fund out of which if made good a dividend might lawfully have been declared and paid—enough to pay part of the preferential dividend of 6 per cent., and when one of the yearly dividends was declared at an ordinary meeting of the co., the following words were added to the resolution then passed: “It being understood that” a sum named “shall remain to the credit of the revenue account.” The preference shareholders claimed that out of the balance divisible a sum equal to part of the amount standing to the credit of revenue account ought to be distributed amongst them in priority as preferential dividend, either as a debt due from capital to revenue, or as a debt due from the co. to the preference shareholders:—

Held, that this claim failed also, as there was no agreement, but only the keeping up of a credit in the accounts in favour of revenue so as to earmark that which, when represented by cash, might be considered as available for future dividend or for any of the purposes mentioned in art. 105.

Held, therefore, that the balance was divisible among all the shareholders as return of capital.

Sects. 109 and 133 of the Companies Act, 1862, do not supply a rule for the mode of adjusting loss of capital or of distributing surplus assets, but only supply the necessary powers for giving effect to the rights and interests of the parties. In ascertaining those rights in the case of co.'s constituted under the Companies Acts, in the absence of any provision in the memorandum or articles of association, the capital account must first be equalized, and the balance must be appropriated according to the nominal amount of the shares, and a clause in the memorandum or articles regulating the distribution of dividends will not of itself govern the distribution of surplus.

In the case of co.'s not constituted under the Acts effect must be given to any clause, in the deed under which the co. was constituted, with regard to surplus assets, but a provision as to distribution of dividends does not of itself govern the distribution of surplus.

Somes v. Currie, (1855) 1 K. & J. 605, and Sheppard v. Seinde, Punjab and Delhi Ry. Co., (1887) 36 W. R. 1, distinguished and commented on.

By the deed of settlement under which a company was originally constituted losses were to be made good by the shareholders “in proportion to their respective shares,” profits were to be divided amongst them “according to the amount of their respective shares,” and upon a winding-up the residue, after paying debts, was to be “divided between the several proprietors”—namely, shareholders—“for the time being in proportion to their respective shares.” The shares were of 10*l.* each. Some were fully paid, others were only paid up to the extent of 6*l.* 10*s.* per share, and some of both classes had been issued at a premium. The co. was afterwards registered under Part VII. of the Companies Act, 1862, as an unlimited co. It sold its undertaking and went into voluntary liquidation, and after

COMPANY—WINDING-UP (Assets)—continued. payment of its debts and the costs of liquidation had a surplus more than sufficient to return all the paid-up capital:—

Held, that the surplus must first be applied in returning the paid-up capital, and that the balance must be distributed amongst all the shareholders in proportion to the nominal amounts of their shares, and without regard to the premiums paid by any shareholders, or the manner in which dividends were payable or had in fact been paid. In re DRIFFIELD GAS LIGHT CO.

26. — Bonus Shares—Companies Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 131) s. 25.

By a contract with a trustee for a co. about to be formed it was agreed that seventy-five out of the hundred shares of the co. should be allotted as fully paid up to the vendors as the consideration for the property thereby agreed to be sold, and this agreement was filed with the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies. Shortly after the incorporation of the co. some friends of the vendors were willing to subscribe in cash for the rest of the shares; and it was suggested that the vendors were receiving too many shares and too great a voting power, and that they should give up twenty-five of their shares to these cash subscribers. Subsequent resolutions of the board of directors, and another agreement with the co., recognised that 5000*l.* in cash had by mistake been omitted from the former agreement although it was part of the consideration, and confirmed the payment of that sum to the vendors, and subject to this alteration and to twenty-five of the seventy-five shares being distributed by the vendors among the cash subscribers, and to the approval of an extraordinary general meeting of the co., the old agreement was adopted. The new agreement was also filed with the registrar. An extraordinary meeting approved the transaction, and the co. then allotted twenty-five of the vendors' shares to the cash subscribers direct, under certificates stating that the shares were fully paid up. No invitation was given to the public to apply for shares, although it was contemplated that the public should be appealed to later on. In the winding-up of the co. certain creditors proved their debts, and the liquidator applied to have the cash subscribers (some of whom were directors at the time of the above transaction) placed on the list of contributories:—

Held, that if the vendors had been entitled to the twenty-five distributed shares the effect of allotting the shares to the cash subscribers direct would not have placed the latter in a worse position than if the shares had been allotted to the vendors and then transferred, but that as the vendors were never entitled to the twenty-five shares as part of the consideration, and the agreement was really between the co. and the cash subscribers for a gift of shares from the co. to the cash subscribers, the filing of the contracts did not help the subscribers, and they were liable to contribute the full nominal amount of the bonus shares in cash. In re ALKALINE REDUCTION SYNDICATE, AMES'S CASE

A co., while a going concern, sued Y. for calls on shares alleged to be held by him. Before the action was ripe for trial the co. resolved on voluntary winding-up, and the liquidator settled Y. on the list of contributories in respect of the amount of the calls. The liquidator then by notice discontinued the action, and took out an originating summons against Y. under ss. 101 and 138 of the Companies Act, 1862, for a balance order in respect of the calls. Y.'s costs of the action having been taxed, and the liquidator having refused to pay them, Y. applied for a stay of the originating summons until payment:—

Held, that Y. was not entitled to the stay, but that the amount of the costs must be deducted from any sum recovered by the liquidator on the originating summons.

Before a co. was incorporated P. gave W. 500l. on W. promising to procure an allotment to P. of one hundred fully paid 5l. shares in the co. when incorporated. W. was entitled under an agreement with the co. (which was not filed with the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies) to fully paid shares in the co., and after the co. was incorporated W. had one hundred of these shares allotted to P. as his nominee. The certificate stated untruly that the shares were fully paid. No part of the 500l. was ever paid to the co. P. sold twenty of the shares, and never repudiated any of them:—

Held, in the winding-up of the co., that it was estopped from denying that the shares were fully paid, and that P. was not liable as a contributory. In re BUILDING ESTATES BRICKFIELD CO. PARBURY'S CASE - - - V. Williams J.

The liquidator put the trustee in respect of the shares. Where an objection was taken that relief under the Companies Act, 1898, could not be given where it was sought to have placed on the file a memorandum of a verbal contract different in its terms from the insufficient written contract already filed, and that the Court by ordering the filing of a contract could only relieve where there was in existence a contract in writing which could be filed, it was held that the Act applied where there was no written contract at all, and also where a contract had been filed which was different in its terms from the one which the applicant for relief wished to have filed, the Act being intended to deal with every kind of slip resulting in non-compliance with the Act of 1867, and that the applicant must therefore be relieved (except in respect of the shares which had been allotted for his own benefit for having subscribed in cash for certain shares) on the terms of paying the liquidator's costs. Relief under the Companies Act, 1898, may be refused on the ground of matter of prejudice although it does not amount to bad faith, or gross negligence, or illegal conduct on the part of the applicant for relief.

R. sold his business to a co. of which he was to be governing director. There was a written agreement for the sale of the business which provided that the consideration for the sale should be satisfied by the allotment to R.—nothing being said about his nominees—of certain fully paid shares in the co., and this agreement was filed with the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies before the shares were issued.

S. & B. agreed with R. to help him to dispose of the shares by circulating the co.'s prospectus amongst their customers, with personal letters recommending the shares, on the terms of receiving, as nominees of R., 200 of his fully paid shares, and a sum of 6d. on each share applied for on their recommendation. Shortly before Nov., 1895, B. took steps with a view to becoming a Fellow of an old-established society called "The Auctioneers' Institute of the United Kingdom." In Nov., 1895, X., an officer of a recently incorporated society (with unlimited liability) named "The Institute of Auctioneers and Valuers," called on B. and asked him to become a member of it. B. believed the new society to be the old one, and in this belief, which was known to and fostered by X., B. applied for membership in the new society, and received a certificate of membership. In answer to his subsequent inquiries of the new society, untruthful statements were made to B. which resulted in his remaining in his error as to the identity of the society.—

Held, that the principle of *Cundy v. If in a voluntary winding-up the liquidator believes a shareholder is liable to be put on the list of contributories (e.g., in respect of qualifying shares), the proper course is to put the shareholder on the list as a contributory, leaving him to his remedies under s. 133, sub-s. 8, of the Act of 1862; the liquidators should not apply under s. 138 for a declaration of liability and an order to direct payment of the amount found due. *In re CORNWALL BRICK, TILE, AND TERRA COTTA CO. — — V. Although a limited co. cannot release a shareholder from the obligation to pay for his shares either in money or money's worth, and cannot therefore issue its shares at a discount, it can, provided the contract is duly registered under the 25th section of the Companies Act, 1867, buy property at any price it thinks fit, and can pay for such property in fully paid-up shares; and the transaction will be valid and binding upon its creditors if the co. has acted in it honestly and not colourably, and has not been so imposed upon by the vendor as to be entitled to be relieved from its bargain.

The value received by the co. is measured by the price at which the co. agreed to buy the property it sought to acquire; and whilst the transaction is unimpeached that is the only value which this Court can take into consideration.

48. — Return of cash subscription—Reduction of capital.

A co. limited by shares was incorporated in Nov. 1897, with a nominal capital divided into 11. shares. By its articles of association (80) the qualification of a director was the holding of 100 shares, and (30, 31) a transfer of shares was required to be signed by the transferor and transferee and to be in a prescribed form. And the directors had power to accept a surrender of shares. Lord W. was asked by his solicitor, and consented, to become one of the directors in Dec., 1897, and applied in writing for 100 shares on the understanding that he was to be a director. On Jan. 11, 1898, the 100 shares were allotted to him. He acted as a director and paid 50l. on the shares, and was placed on the register of members for 100 shares, which were numbered. He was, however, of opinion that the co. had gone to allotment on an insufficient capital, and "determined to have nothing further to do with the co." if he could get back what he had paid. McAndrew and McAllister had applied for shares in the co., and the co. had more than enough shares to satisfy an allotment to them over and above the shares taken by Lord W.; but by arrangement with the co. the 50l. paid by Lord W. was returned to him, the shares allotted to him were cancelled, a note as to the cancellation being placed in the register under the entry as to his name and shares, and 100 shares bearing the same numbers were allotted to McAndrew and McAllister, who paid for them in full in cash.

In April, 1899, a winding-up order was made against the co., and, the liquidator having placed Lord W.'s name on the list of contributories for 100 shares on which nothing was paid, Lord W. applied to have his name removed therefrom.

Wright J. said that, although the articles

empowered the directors to accept a surrender of shares, what had happened was not intended as a surrender, and he agreed with the liquidator's counsel that a surrender would not operate so as to enable the directors to repay the applicant what he had paid on his shares. What was the effect of the purported cancellation and re-allotment? Was it a transfer or a revesting of the shares in the co.—a return of his money to the applicant, and a distinct re-allotment to McAndrew and McAllister? It was for the applicant to shew that the transaction was a transfer, and he had failed to do it. His counsel had pointed out that if the applicant was held liable, the shares would be fully paid up twice over; but that would not have been the case if to McAllister and McAndrew there had been allotted some of the other shares which the co. had at their disposal. If there had been no other unissued shares at the co.'s disposal, and the liquidator had attempted to obtain payment twice over on the same shares, the result would have been different. In re COMPANIES GUARDIAN SOCIETY. O. by an underwriting letter agreed with the promoter of a co. in consideration of a commission "at any time within three months if and as called upon by you to subscribe or find responsible subscribers" for certain shares, and in default authorized the promoter "to subscribe for the said shares in my name." O. was never requested to subscribe or find subscribers, but on the authority of his letter an application was made in his name and shares allotted to him:—

55. — Underwriting letter.

On June 17, 1892, H. signed and delivered to the promoters of a co. a letter agreeing that upon the public issue of its shares he would, in consideration of a percentage, subscribe for 400 shares. If the whole issue was bona fide subscribed for by the public, no allotment was to be made to H. The letter also contained an authority to the promoters, in the event of H. not applying for shares, to apply for them in his name, and an authority to the directors to allot them to him—"This engagement is binding on me for two months from this date." The shares were offered to the public on June 20, 21, and 22, but very few applications were made. On July 1, when the public subscription list was closed, the promoters signed a memorandum at the foot of the letter dated July 1, 1892, and accepting H.'s offer. The letter with the memorandum thereon and an application by the promoters in H.'s name were on the same day sent to the co., and the shares were thereupon allotted to H. His name was put on the register of shareholders. He knew of this, and he paid the co. the allotment money in respect of the shares, received his certificates, and on two occasions voted by proxy; but it was not shewn that he knew when the offer was accepted. The name was still on the register when the co. went into liquidation nearly two years afterwards:—

Held, by V. Williams J., that the promoters could not wait to see the result of the invitation to the public, and after it had failed, accept H.'s offer, and that he was not liable as a contributory:

Held, by Lopes and Kay L.JJ., (Lindley L.J. doubting), that the expression "This engagement is binding on me for two months" meant that the offer made by the letter was to be open for acceptance for two months; that the shares, therefore, were properly applied for in H.'s name, and that the allotment to him was valid:—

Held, that, whether the application for shares was authorized or not, H., having accepted them without inquiry, and having acted as a shareholder for nearly two years up to the time of the winding-up, could not now be heard to contend that he was not a shareholder. *In re HEMP, YARN AND CORDAGE CO. A shareholder commenced an action against the co. for rescission of a contract to take shares. The co. went into voluntary liquidation, and the plt., on summons in the winding-up, obtained a declaration in his favour:—

58. — Creditor's petition—Right of creditor to winding-up order—Indemnity for costs.

An unpaid creditor of a co. is not entitled to a winding-up order unless he can shew that the general body of the creditors will derive benefit from the order being made; it is not enough for him to shew that he himself will be benefited by it.

A co., which had not sufficient assets to satisfy the claims of its debenture-holders, took legal proceedings for the recovery of a debt and failed, and was ordered to pay costs to the successful party. The debt in question purported to form part of the security for the payment of the debentures, and had it been recovered the debenture-holders alone would have been benefited thereby. The successful party, failing to get payment of his costs from the co., applied to the Court for a winding-up order with a view to compelling the co. to enforce its right of indemnity for the costs against the debenture-holders for whose benefit the legal proceedings had been taken:—

Held, that, as the enforcement of the right of indemnity would confer no benefit upon the general body of the creditors, the winding-up order ought not to be granted. In re GREENWOOD & CO. — Div. Ct. [1900] 2 Q. B. 306

60. — Instructions for brief—Trial of issue of fact before judge—Originating summons—R. S. C., 1883, Order LXXI., r. 1a; Appendix N, Items 81, 82, 82a.

A petition was presented for the compulsory winding-up of a co. which was already in voluntary winding-up; but at the hearing the judge made no order except that the question was to be tried as on a summons under s. 138 of the Companies Act, 1862, "costs reserved"; he also fixed a certain date for the trial. On that date witnesses were examined, and the judge decided substantially in favour of the applicant with costs. No summons had so far been taken out, and on drawing up the order the registrar required a summons to be taken out in the voluntary winding-up. As an originating summons had previously been taken out by the liquidator for a private examination under s. 115 of the Act of 1862, on which an order had been made for an examination and reserving "liberty to apply," the registrar directed that the summons to be taken out and mentioned in the order was to be an ordinary and not an originating summons. On taxation the registrar disallowed the costs of instructions for brief:—

Held, that as the direction for trial treated the summons as issued in a "pending cause or matter," within the meaning of R. S. C., 1883, Order LXXI., r. 1a, the summons was not an originating summons; that although, if Appendix N to the Rules, Item 81, was construed strictly, it referred to an issue of fact directed to be tried as such, yet on taxation substance was to be regarded, and in substance the trial was of an issue of fact before a judge; and that the costs of instructions for the brief of the applicant's counsel must be allowed. In re CONSOLIDATED EXPLORATION AND FINANCE CO.

64. — Official receiver—Public examination.

Official receivers, although they are officers of the Court and under the obligation to perform duties imposed on them by statute, are (with some exceptions) subject to the rules of the Court as to costs which apply to ordinary litigants. An official receiver made a report to the Court which was in accordance with s. 8, sub-s. 2, of the Companies (Winding-up) Act, 1890, so far as the meaning of that clause could be gathered from the decisions of the Courts which had then been pronounced. The Court, after considering the report, ordered a public examination of the persons named in the report, but before the examination could take place, the House of Lords, in another case (Ex parte Barnes, [1896] A. C. 146), decided that s. 8, sub-s. 2, required the official receiver's report to contain certain allegations which had not been made in the report in this case:—

Held, on a successful application to discharge the order for public examination, that the official receiver, being a litigant and in fault, must be ordered to pay the costs of the application, and that the words "out of the assets of the co." must be omitted from the order. *In re HOUNSLOW BREWERY CO. The onus is on the liquidator to shew that immediate payment from the assets cannot be made, and if he shews that other persons have a prior right or are entitled pari passu with the successful litigant, no order for payment will be made without providing for the other claims. In Dec., 1897, in the winding-up of a co., D., one of its directors, was examined under s. 115 of the Companies Act, 1862. In March, 1898, the liquidator in the name of the co. commenced an action against the directors, including D., for alleged misfeasances, and in this action interrogatories were administered for the examination of D. Before answering, D. applied in the winding-up for liberty to inspect and take an office copy of the deposition taken at his private examination. He had already put in a full defence to the statement of claim, and offered to give an undertaking to use his best endeavours to prevent the communication of the deposition to the other depts., or their solicitors or counsel:—

Held, that leave to inspect and take a copy of the deposition ought to be granted. In re MERCHANTS' FIRE OFFICE — — — Wright J.

84. — Promoters, directors and officers—Companies (Winding-up) Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 63), s. 8.

The Court has no jurisdiction to direct any person to be publicly examined under s. 8, sub-s. 3, of the Companies (Winding-up) Act, 1890, unless the official receiver has made a "further report" under sub-s. 2 from which it appears that in his opinion, a fraud has been committed by a person in the promotion or formation of the co., or by a director or other officer of the co. in relation to the co. since its formation.

And the power to direct a public examination of the persons mentioned in sub-s. 3 does not apply to any one of them against whom a prima facie case of fraud has not been disclosed by the "further report" of the official receiver. Ex parte BARNES — H. L. (E.) [1896] A. C. 146

85. — Public examination—Official receiver's report — Companies (Winding-up) Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 63), s. 8, sub-s. 2, 3.

The official receiver's further report under s. 8, sub-s. 2, of the Companies (Winding-up) Act, 1890, should include matters of information and belief, and whether an actual expression of his opinion that fraud has been committed by some person within the description in the section (not defining the person) is or is not a condition precedent to an order for public examination, it is a convenient practice which the Court will require the official receiver to follow, that he should state that facts, of which he has information and which he believes to be true, and which are set out in his report, constitute a prima facie case of fraud. The Court has no jurisdiction to direct such an examination unless the official receiver states expressly in his further report that in his opinion some fraud had been committed, or the facts stated in the report shew clearly that in his opinion such a fraud has been committed; and a mere suggestion of suspicion is not enough.

Officers of a co. and others having been examined under s. 115 of the Act of 1862, subsequent to action brought by the liquidator to rescind a contract, one of them, in cross-examination on behalf of the liquidator under commission, was asked whether certain questions had been put to him in the examination under s. 115; he said, "Yes." He was then asked if he made certain answers, when he declined to answer till his deposition was read to him. This was done. He was also told what others said in their depositions and asked whether he contradicted them:—

Held, that the depts. were not entitled to inspect the depositions.

The liquidator, without any further authority from the Court or the committee of inspection, employed solicitors, and instead of

proceeding in the ordinary mode (by balance order) brought actions to recover the calls. The committee sanctioned some subsequent steps in the litigation. The taxing master allowed all the costs notwithstanding objections by the official receiver (a) that the sanction of the Court or committee had not been obtained before the commencement of the actions; (b) that the like sanction had not been obtained to the employment of the solicitors; (c) that if the order was sufficient authority the costs authorized to be incurred were limited to 100%. —

Held, that the order was only meant as a performance of the function thrown on the Court by sub-s. 1 of s. 12 as to sanctioning the bringing of legal proceedings, and only authorized proceedings generally, leaving it to the Court to say what they should be; that the sanction of the committee, though not obtained prior to the initiatory steps in the proceedings, justified future steps to which the sanction had been previously obtained; that sanction, under sub-s. 1, to taking proceedings did not dispense with the necessity for obtaining sanction, under sub-s. 4, to the employment of a particular solicitor; and that although the Court had power to give subsequent sanction to proceedings taken without this sanction to employ a solicitor, it would not as a rule exercise the power except in cases of urgency. Some only of the costs were therefore allowed.

In Dec., 1895, a limited co., being unable to pay the interest on its debentures, went into voluntary liquidation. On April 15, 1896, the Court sanctioned a scheme under the Joint Stock Companies Arrangement Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 104), which provided that the uncalled capital of the co. should be called up by the voluntary liquidators, and that they should thereout, by Sept. 1897, pay sums amounting to a dividend of 12s. 6d. in the pound to the debenture-holders, the balance being payable in 1902, and the interest being kept down in the meantime. Any surplus from calls, after payment of the first dividend, might be applied, according to the liquidators' discretion, for management and other expenses. The scheme also gave the liquidators power to borrow for the purpose of protecting and developing the assets. On the debenture-holders being paid off, the winding-up was to be stayed, and the co. was to resume business. By a trust deed executed in pursuance of the scheme the liquidators covenanted to apply the proceeds of the call in accordance with the scheme. In May and Sept., 1897, the liquidators filed with the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies the statements of account required by s. 15 of the Companies (Winding-up) Act, 1890; but they refused to pay into the Companies Liquidation Account the surplus of calls shewn by the accounts to be still in their hands or under their control, although directed to do so by the Bd. of Trade. On a motion by the Board for an order to comply with its direction:—

Fraud is a ground, but not the only ground, on which this jurisdiction is exercisable.

After a committee of investigation had reported in favour of proceedings against the directors of a co. to make them liable for misfeasance, an extraordinary resolution was passed to wind up the co., and steps were taken to dissolve the co. and destroy the books. The co. was ordered to be wound up on the petition of a holder of a paid-up share.

A winding-up petition was presented by a creditor whose debt was payable at a future date under a scheme of arrangement under which the co. was formed. It was not alleged that the co. was at present insolvent, but that insolvency must inevitably result at an early date if the co. was continued under the conditions imposed by the scheme. The co. was registered, and carrying on business, and had its head office in New South Wales, but it had a branch office in London, and proceedings had been commenced in the Colony, in which an order had been made to summon meetings to sanction a new scheme of arrangement under a Colonial statute. It was

A co. called the “Kronand Metal Co., Ltd.,” was formed to take over the business of a partnership trading as the Kronand Metal Co.; but the memorandum referred slightly to business in manufacturing metals generally as being amongst the objects of the co. A prospectus was issued (inviting subscriptions for shares) which was entirely devoted to descriptions and commendations of “Kronand Metal” and the prospects of the co. with reference to the manufacture thereof. The objects of the memorandum of association were not stated in or indorsed on the prospectus. On the faith of this prospectus R. and others took shares in the co. The co. after many months’ trading had never manufactured “Kronand Metal” in large quantities, had never made a profit on that business, had principally devoted itself to carrying on business by manufacturing articles made of brass, and, even on its entire business, had so far made a considerable loss. R. petitioned for a winding-up order on the ground that “Kronand Metal” manufacturing, the principal object and substratum of the co., was gone :—

Held, that as the manufacturing of goods in other metals was not entirely ancillary to the principal object, and the “Kronand Metal” business had, with “nursing”—namely, by continuing the other metal business—a chance, although a small one, of life, the substratum could not be said to be entirely gone, and that, having regard to the fact that a large majority of the shareholders opposed the petition, a winding-up order must be refused. In re KRONAND METAL Co.

Whilst a ship, owned by the plts., an English co., was loading at Bombay for a voyage to Hamburg, her master was induced by fraud to sign bills of lading for goods which were never put on board. The bills of lading were indorsed for value without notice of the fraud to the defts., an English banking co. By the law of Germany non-delivery of the goods specified in a bill of lading entitles the holder of the bill to a lien upon the vessel. The ship sailed, and whilst she was at sea a petition was presented for the winding-up of the plt. co., and on the day on which the ship arrived at Hamburg a winding-up order was made. On the same day the defts., who had in the meantime discovered the fraud, took proceedings in the German Court at Hamburg to arrest the ship and to enforce their lien. The German Court ordered the ship to be sold, declared the defts. to be entitled to the lien claimed, and ordered that lien to be satisfied out of the proceeds of the sale. In the case of a banking co., where the auditors are appointed under s. 7 of the Companies Act, 1879, and spoken of as officers of the co. in the articles. Although it is not the duty of the auditors of a company, appointed under the Act of 1879, to consider whether its business is prudently or imprudently conducted, it is their duty to consider and report to the shareholders whether the balance-sheet exhibits a correct view of the state of the co.'s affairs, and its true financial position at the audit. They must ascertain this by examining the books of the co., and must take reasonable care that what they certify as to the co.'s financial position is true. And except in very special cases it is their duty to place before the shareholders the necessary information as to the true financial position of the co., and not merely to indicate the means of acquiring it.

An auditor presented a confidential report to the directors calling their attention to the insufficiency of the securities on which the capital of the co. was invested, and the difficulty of realizing them, but in his report to the shareholders merely stated that the value of the assets was dependent on realization, and in the result the shareholders were deceived as to the condition of the co., and a dividend was declared out of capital and not out of income:—

An auditor may or may not be an "officer" of a co., and prima facie he is not; but if he is appointed to the office of auditor to the co., and acts in that office, he will be an "officer" within s. 10 of the Companies (Winding-up) Act, 1890; and in case the co. is wound up he will be liable to a misfeasance summons under that section in respect of dividends declared upon the faith of his audit; and no irregularity in his appointment would avail him as a defence. But, seeing that the word "auditor" does not occur in s. 10, the performance of auditor's work upon a given occasion by a person who has never been appointed to the office of auditor of the co. does not make that person an "officer" of the co. so as to render him liable under the section.

An auditor of a limited co. was appointed under articles of association which, so far as they related to the audit of accounts, were in substantially the same terms as the audit clauses of Table A and as the articles of association in In re London and General Bank, [1895] 2 Ch. 166, although it was not a joint stock banking co.:—

Held, on the authority of that case, that he was an officer of the co. within s. 10 of the Companies (Winding-up) Act, 1890.

Per V. Williams J.: In every case where an auditor of a co. is appointed under articles of association which impose upon him the duty of examining the balance-sheet and reporting to the members whether, in his opinion, it is a full and fair balance-sheet, containing the particulars required by the articles, and properly drawn up so as to exhibit a true and correct view of the co.'s affairs, he is an officer of the co. within s. 10 of the Companies (Winding-up) Act, 1890. In re KINGSTON COTTON MILL CO.

200. — Duties as to stocktaking—Auditors—Companies (Winding-up) Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 63), s. 10.

Held (affirming the judgment of V. Williams J.), that where an officer of a co. has committed a breach of his duty to the co., the direct consequence of which has been a misapplication of its assets, for which he could be made responsible in an action, such breach of duty is a "misfeasance" for which he may be summarily proceeded against under the Companies (Winding-up) Act, 1890, s. 10, and it is not necessary that an action should be brought.

For some years before a co. was wound up, balance-sheets signed by the auditors were published by the directors to the shareholders in which the value of the co.'s stock-in-trade at the end of each year was grossly overstated. The auditors relied on certificates, wilfully false, given by J., one of the directors who was also manager, as to the value of the stock-in-trade. Dividends were paid for some years on the footing that the balance-sheets were correct; but if the stock-in-trade had been stated at its true value it would have appeared that there were no profits out of which a dividend could be declared. If the auditors had compared the different books and added to the stock-in-trade at the beginning of the year the amounts purchased during the year, and deducted the amounts sold, they would have seen that the statement of the stock-in-trade at the end of the year was so large as to call for explanation; but they did not do so:—

Held, that, it being no part of the duty of the auditors to take stock, they were justified in relying on the certificates of the manager, a person of acknowledged competence and high reputation, and were not bound to check his certificates in the absence of anything to raise suspicion, and that they were not liable for the dividends wrongfully paid.

An auditor is not bound to be suspicious where there are no circumstances to arouse suspicion; he is only bound to exercise a reasonable amount of care and skill.

In an action to realize debentures granted by a co., which was afterwards ordered to be wound up, a summons was taken out by the official receiver and liquidator asking for the leave of the Court to take misfeasance proceedings against the directors and auditors of the co., and that the costs might be provided by the receiver in the action. A majority of the debenture-holders was opposed to misfeasance proceedings being taken at the expense of the assets covered by the debentures, and also to abandoning the claims of the debenture-holders to any sums recovered in the proceedings. A suggestion was, however, made by a debenture-holder that if there were people who believed they could make a good thing out of a misfeasance summons they would be prepared, for the right to step into the debenture-holders' shoes, to pay a substantial sum, but that the right should not be given up without anything in return:—

Held, that an order must be made directing the receiver to sell by auction the claim against the directors and auditors. WOOD v. WOODHOUSE AND RAWSON UNITED

A shareholder in a limited co. having applied, before its winding-up, for rectification of the register under s. 35 of the Companies Act, 1862, and repayment of the sum paid for his shares, obtained, after the winding-up, an order for rectification and repayment, and was admitted by the official receiver, who was also the liquidator, to prove for the sum ordered to be repaid, but not for the costs of the application:—

Held, by C. A. (affirming the decision of Wright J. on appeal from the official receiver), that the application not being a claim for unliquidated damages, and the register having been rectified, the sum sought to be repaid was clearly a provable debt, and accordingly that, under s. 37 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, made applicable to companies in liquidation by s. 10 of the Judicature Act, 1875, the costs should be added to the provable debt.

In the voluntary winding-up of the co. the directors (all of whom had acted and were duly qualified) claimed to prove for their remuneration. The assets were insufficient to pay them and the other creditors in full, and the liquidators applied under s. 138 of the Companies Act, 1862, to have it determined whether the directors were entitled to prove for the remuneration claimed in competition with the other creditors, having regard to s. 38 of the Act:—

Held, that if the case were one of a gratuity given to the directors which depended merely on their being members of the co., Ex parte Cannon, (1885) 30 Ch. D. 629, would be followed. But this case does not depend on membership, but, as in another case, on whether they continued in office on the terms of the articles as to remuneration. They were continued in office by the co. according to a contract made with reference to the articles, and their remuneration does not depend on membership. They are, therefore, entitled to prove in competition with the other creditors. In re AL BISCOTT CO.

The K. Co. held coal mines, &c., under a lease, which provided that at the determination of the term the lessors should have an option to purchase certain plant, &c., at a valuation. In Feb., 1891, the co. went into voluntary liquidation which was continued under supervision. In Dec., 1892, the lessors obtained an order allowing them to distrain for rent accrued since the liquidation, and to re-enter. They distrained and re-entered, but an order was made by consent that the distress should be withdrawn and a valuation should be made of such plant as the lessors were entitled to buy, any question as to set-off to be determined by the Court. The lessors claimed to set off damages for breaches of covenant as to working the coal:—

Held, that the lessors had no right to the plant at the date of winding-up; their right arose when they exercised their option; so that the rules as to mutual dealings and set-off did not apply. That the landlord's right to preference only included what could be distrained for, and not damages for breach of covenant; therefore the lessors could only set off rent accrued since the liquidation. In re KINGSBOVE STEEL AND IRON CO. — Chitty J. A scheme for the reconstruction of a co., which was in voluntary liquidation under the supervision of the Court, provided that the undertaking should be sold to a new co., and that the shareholders should have the option of taking shares in the new co. in proportion to their holding in the old. In accordance with the terms of a circular issued by the liquidator, B., a shareholder in the old co., signed an application for shares in the new co. and sent it, with a cheque for the required deposit, to the bankers of the co., who sent him a receipt therefor. The bank subsequently sent to the liquidator, at his request, a list of persons who had applied for shares, but did not include therein the name of B. The liquidator afterwards sold the whole of the shares unapplied for, together with those which should have been allotted to B. He had no assets undistributed in his hands except the proceeds of sale of the shares unapplied for, and he had no shares which he could allot to B. Upon a summons by B. in the winding-up:—

In a contract between persons living in different countries under different systems of law, it is a question in each case by what law the parties intended that their rights either under the whole or any part of the contract was to be interpreted. A contract between A., a Scotch distiller, and B., a merchant in London, was made in E., but was to be performed in S. It contained an arbitration clause for reference to two members of the London Corn Exchange or their umpire:—

Held, that the law of E., and not that of S., applied to the arbitration clause, and made it obligatory. HAMLIN & Co. v. TALISKER DISTILLERY — H. L. (Sc.) [1894] A. C. 202

By an agreement in writing, executed at Johannesburg, in the South African Republic, and made between a co. having its registered office in London, but carrying on business in South Africa, and a British subject resident at Johannesburg, the latter agreed to serve the co. as brewer or otherwise in its business carried on at Johannesburg and in the Colony of Natal and elsewhere in South Africa, and provision was made for his residence in Johannesburg. The agreement was framed in the English language and was in English form:—

Held, that the rights of the parties under the agreement ought to be governed by the law of the South African Republic.

A Queensland co. issued debentures charged on uncalled capital, but did not, as was necessary to give priority in Scottish law, communicate the charge to the shareholders. Subsequently a Scottish co., in an action against the Queensland co., obtained an "arrestment" of all unpaid calls due from Scottish shareholders:—

Held, that, with regard to the Scottish property, the Scottish law prevailed, and that the Scottish co.'s arrestment gave them priority over the debenture-holders.

4. — Divorce—Foreign judgment—Procedure—Irregularity—Recognition by English Court.

A judgment or decree pronounced by the Court of a foreign country will be treated and acted upon here as final, notwithstanding any irregularity of procedure under the local law, provided the foreign Court had jurisdiction over the subject-matter and over the persons brought before it, and the proceedings do not offend against English views of substantial justice.

Thus, where a decree for divorce had been pronounced by the proper court in Florida in an undefended action by the husband against the wife on the ground of her violent and ungovernable temper, both the parties being domiciled and resident in Florida, an alleged irregularity in service of process was held not to be a ground for questioning the validity of that decree in an action brought by the wife in the English courts to enforce a claim arising out of her alleged second marriage to a British subject.

6. — Infant—Marriage settlement—Female infant—Ratification—Repudiation—Marriage with foreigner—Change of domicile by marriage—Operation of English law.

Prior to the marriage in 1864 of an Irish lady under twenty-one with an Austrian, marriage articles in English form were executed by her and her intended husband, by which it was declared and agreed by and between the parties thereto that, in case the marriage should take place, the then personal property and certain after-acquired personal property of the lady should be vested in trustees upon the usual trusts of an English marriage settlement. After the marriage the husband retained his Austrian domicile. In 1880 a settlement in English form, which purported to be made in pursuance of the articles, was executed by the husband and wife in Paris. The wife afterwards executed appointments of new trustees of the settlement, and in 1889 she exercised in favour of one of her daughters a power of appointment reserved to her by the settlement. In 1893 the husband and wife executed in Austria, in accordance with Austrian law, a notarial act, by which they purported to revoke and annul the marriage articles and the settlement of 1880, and to vest in the wife the unrestricted administration of all her property. In 1896 the husband and wife and their four children (all of whom had attained twenty-one) brought an action against the trustees in the Ch. Div., claiming a declaration that, by virtue of the notarial act of 1893, the marriage articles and the settlement were wholly cancelled and annulled and were void by Austrian law.

By Austrian law a husband and wife have a right to revoke their marriage contract, notwithstanding the birth of issue and acts of ratification, and this right of revocation cannot be waived, and is not lost by lapse of time:—

Held, that, inasmuch as upon her marriage the wife acquired the Austrian domicile of her husband and became subject to Austrian law, she never could ratify the settlement or deprive herself of the right to repudiate it, the result being that she never had the power, either before or after her marriage, of making an irrevocable contract.

Consequently the English doctrine, that the voidable contract of an infant will bind him if he does not repudiate it within a reasonable time after he attains twenty-one, had no application:—

Held, therefore, that the wife was not bound by the marriage articles or by the settlement, and that the revocation by the notarial act of 1893 was effectual.

An action brought in a proper case in the name of a lunatic not so found by his next friend, for the recovery of his property may, in the absence of any lunacy proceedings, be maintained without the sanction of the Court in Lunacy.

The Court in Lunacy, having property of a lunatic under its control, will, as between the lunatic and his creditors, see that proper provision is made out of the property for his maintenance, as the first and paramount consideration; but, subject to that, the Court will not withhold a creditor from exercising his legal rights.

A foreign curator or administrateur provisoire of a lunatic, not so found judicially, domiciled and resident abroad, is not necessarily an improper person to sue in this country as next friend for the recovery of the lunatic's personal property here, though, if such next friend is resident abroad, he may be required to give security for costs.

The Court in Lunacy has no jurisdiction under s. 134 of the Lunacy Act, 1890, to order the transfer of securities in this country standing in the name of or vested in a person of unsound mind, not so found, residing out of the jurisdiction of the High Court, unless his status has been altered by his being judicially declared lunatic according to the law of the place where he is residing.

G., domiciled and resident in Belgium, deposited with an English bank for safe custody, in his name, certificates and scrip for securities of great value. On his death in 1892 his widow, then also domiciled and resident in Belgium, took out administration in England to his estate, and had the securities then standing to his account, and also a sum of cash representing dividends thereon collected by the bank on his account, transferred to a new account opened by her at the bank in her own name.

In 1897 she became lunatic, though she was not so declared judicially, and was placed in a foreign lunatic asylum. D., a Belgian, was appointed by the Belgian Court her "administrateur provisoire," with power to collect and get in her personal estate, and subsequently D. obtained in England letters of administration de bonis non to G.'s estate, whereupon he brought an action in England against the bank in the names of himself and of Madame G. (the writ not stating that she was of unsound mind or that he was suing as her next friend) claiming, in his double capacity of legal personal representative of G. and of administrateur provisoire of Madame G., to have the certificates, scrip and cash standing in her name delivered up to him. North J., upon the action coming on before him for trial, took the preliminary objection that it was improperly constituted in that Madame G., being of unsound mind, could not sue without a next friend, whereupon D. was appointed next friend, and the title of the action was amended accordingly. The trial having then proceeded on that footing, North J. held that the debts, the bank, could not safely deliver the property to the plt. D. without the authority of an order of the Court in Lunacy; and also that as the action was not one for the protection of the lunatic's person or property, but in the nature of detinue, it was not a form of action in which the lunatic could sue by her next friend. The plt. D. appealed, having first obtained from the Belgian Court an order giving him leave to appeal with a view to recovering the property:—

Held, by C. A., (1.) that as D. and Madame G. had together a clear legal title to the property sought to be recovered, D. was entitled, suing in his own name and as next friend of Madame G., to demand the delivery of her property to him and could give the bank a good discharge; and (2.) that, in the absence of lunacy proceedings in this country, the Court was bound, on general principles of private international law, to recognise the order of the Belgian Court giving D. leave to prosecute the appeal and to obtain and give a good discharge for the property.

9. — Marriage—Domicil—Change of domicil—Immovable goods—French law—Lex rei sitæ—Community of goods—Statute of Frauds, 1676 (29 Car. 2, c. 3), ss. 4, 7.

A Frenchman and Frenchwoman married in France without any express marriage contract, so that according to the French law their rights as to property were subject to the law of community of goods. Subsequently they came to England and acquired an English domicil, and the husband amassed a large fortune, part of which he invested in real and leasehold property here. He died in the lifetime of the wife, having purported to dispose of all his property by an English will. It having been held that as to movables the wife was entitled notwithstanding the change of domicil to a one-half share under the law of community of goods, the question arose whether she was entitled on the same footing to a share of the real and leasehold property:—

Held, (1.) that there being here a special marriage contract defined by reference to the French Code, it had the same binding effect as an express contract, and was enforceable against the real and leasehold property in this country, subject to the question whether the Statute of Frauds required the contract to be in writing, as creating an interest in land; (2.) on the authority of Forster v. Hale, (1800) 5 Ves. 308; 4 R. R. 128, and Dale v. Hamilton, (1846) 5 Hare, 369, that the Statute of Frauds did not apply, inasmuch as this was in substance a contract for a partnership, and the property required for the purposes of the partnership was by operation of law held for those purposes:

Held, therefore, that the real and leasehold property was subject to the community of goods. In re DE NICOLS. DE NICOLS v. CURLIER

The defence was that the rights of the parties were governed by the law of Spain, under which the firm's creditors were not entitled to proceed against the separate estate of a deceased partner until after they had exhausted the property of the firm:—

An unmarried Frenchwoman resident in England executed a holograph will in French and valid according to French law. Subsequently she set up a business in England and married there, according to English law, but without any settlement, a French refugee who had come over to escape a sentence of imprisonment passed on him by the French Court. After the marriage the business was continued by the husband and wife jointly, the husband taking in his own name leases of the business premises. About two years after the expiration of the period of prescription under the French law, the husband sold his interest in the business to his wife, assigned the leases to her, and returned to France and took up his permanent abode there. The wife remained in England and continued carrying on the business until her death:—

Held, by Rigby and V. Williams L.J.J. (Lindley M.R. dissenting) that the domicil of the husband, and consequently of the wife, at the time of the marriage was English, and, therefore, that the question of validity of the ante-nuptial will was governed by English and not by French law, so that the will was revoked by the marriage.

CONSPIRACY—Combination of traders to engross trade.

It is not unlawful for traders to combine for the purpose of keeping trade in their own hands, or extending their trade and increasing their profits, so long as they are not actuated by personal malice or by an intention to ruin their rivals, and do not use any unlawful means.

to break contracts made with the plt. and not to enter into further contracts with him, although only with the object of compelling the plt. to adhere to the rules of the trade union, there would be malice in point of law, for which the defts. would be liable in damages, and that a malicious conspiracy to prevent persons from entering into contracts with another, made to injure him in the exercise of his lawful business, if followed by damage, was actionable:—

Held, that the directions were right. The right of action for maliciously procuring a breach of contract is not confined to contracts in the nature of personal service. TEMPERTON v. RUSSELL (No. 2) — C. A. [1893] 1 Q. B. 715

1. — Attachment—Disobedience of order of Irish Court—Power of English Court—41 Geo. 3, c. 90, s. 6.

Motion by the plt. in an action brought in the High Court of Justice in Ireland, Ch. Div., that the plt. might be at liberty to issue a writ of attachment against the deft., J. S. Newell, for his contempt in not having obeyed an order made by that Court on May 7, 1896. By an order of the Lord Chancellor, dated Aug. 10, it was ordered that the order of the Irish Court (which had been exemplified to the English Court) should be enrolled in the English High Court, and this was done on Aug. 28. The deft. was in England :—

Held, on the authority of Hazleton v. Bright, [1873] W. N. 3, and Pennefather v. Short, [1866] W. N. 102, 126, subject to the accuracy of those reports being verified by the registrar, that the Court had, under the Act 41 Geo. 3, c. 90, s. 6, power to make the order asked for.

Time was given to the deft., who appeared in person, to apply to the Irish Court to discharge the order of May 7, which he alleged to have been irregularly obtained. NEWELL v. NEWELL

2. — Breach of injunction—Person not enjoined or party to action—Aiding and abetting—Committal.

There is a clear distinction between a motion to commit a man for breach of an injunction on the ground that he was bound by the injunction, and a motion to commit a man on the ground that he has aided and abetted a deft. in a breach of an injunction. In the first case the order is made to enable the plt. to get his rights; in the second, because it is not for the public benefit that the course of justice should be obstructed.

The Court has undoubted jurisdiction to commit for contempt a person not included in an injunction or a party to the action who, knowing of the injunction, aids and abets a deft. in committing a breach of it.

Decision of North J. affirmed. SEAWARD v. PATERSON - - C. A. [1897] 1 Ch. 545

3. — Camera, Proceedings in.

It is contempt of Court to publish in a newspaper an account of proceedings which a judge had decided should not be disclosed by determining to hear the case in private. In re MARTINDALE - - North J. [1894] 3 Ch. 193

4. — Circular—Libel—Interlocutory injunction.

Interference with the course of justice by a party publishing ex parte statements is not less contempt of Court because the statements are libellous, or because the party is prepared to justify the libel, or because the libel deals with the merits of the action. Therefore the issuing by a party of a libellous circular commenting on the merits of an action will be restrained by interlocutory injunction. But the issue of a circular containing a warning merely and no comment on a pending action is not a contempt. COATS (J. & P.) v. CHADWICK - Chitty J. [1894] 1 Ch. 347

6. — Newspaper—Innocent loan of paper containing scandalous matter respecting a Court—Committing judge ordered to pay costs.

Contempt of Court may be committed by publication of scandalous matter respecting the Court after adjudication as well as pending a case before it. In England committals for such contempts have become obsolete: in small colonies consisting principally of coloured populations they may still be necessary in proper cases :—

But held, that where the appellant was neither printer nor publisher nor writer of such scandalous matter, but had innocently lent the paper containing it to a friend without knowledge of its contents, he was neither constructively nor necessarily guilty of contempt of Court, and that the judge who committed him must pay the costs of appeal to Her Majesty in Council. McLEOD v. ST. AUBYN - - P. C. [1899] A. C. 549

7. — Newspaper comments—Publication tending to influence result of proceedings.

An application was made for an attachment against the respondents, for contempt of Court in publishing certain articles in a newspaper. It appeared that the applicant, who had been sub-editor and manager of the paper, was charged with attempted arson, and remanded. An article was then published in the paper, alluding to the facts that the property of the newspaper company was for sale, and that the applicant had been arrested, and the charge of arson was pending. That charge was dismissed, but others were preferred, on two of which the applicant was committed for trial. While he was awaiting trial an article was published, announcing that one of the respondents had purchased the paper, and appealing for support, and alluding to the charges pending against the applicant, and shortly afterwards a report was published of a meeting of a committee of a county council, at which a resolution was carried that the action of the chief constable in obtaining legal assistance for the police in the case of the prosecution pending against the applicant should be confirmed :—

Held, that the publications in question did not appear to be intended, and were not calculated, to prejudice the fair trial of the charges pending against the applicant, and therefore no attachment ought to issue. REG. v. PAYNE AND COOPER — Div. Ct. [1896] 1 Q. B. 577

Appeal against a decision of North J., whereby he declared that a breach by the defts. of one clause in an agreement between themselves and the plts. entitled the plts. to determine and put an end to the whole agreement, and that it must be treated as determined. The agreement was dated June 4, 1864, and was scheduled to and confirmed by the Rhymney Railway (Northern Lines) Act, 1864 (27 & 28 Vict. c. cclxxv.). Clause 17 provided that “Except as herein mentioned neither co. shall either directly or indirectly seek any new line from one side of the [Rhymney] Valley to the other to take away the traffic of either co.” North J. held that the defts. had in 1898 committed a breach of this clause, and that the plts. were entitled to repudiate the agreement entirely.

The Court allowed the appeal, holding that, though there had been a breach of clause 17, the plts. were not entitled to repudiate the contract, but their remedy was in damages.

If there is a distinct refusal by one party to a contract to be bound by its terms in the future, the other party may treat the contract as at an end: see Withers v. Reynolds, (1831) 2 B. & Ad. 882; 36 R. R. 782, Preface, v.; Hochster v. De la Tour, (1853) 2 E. & B. 678; Mersey Steel and Iron Co. v. Naylor, Benzon & Co., (1884) 9 App. Cas. 434, 442. Short of such a refusal, the true principle to be deduced from all the cases was that you must ascertain whether the action of the party who was breaking the contract was such that the other party was entitled to conclude that the former no longer intended to be bound by its provisions: see 9 App. Cas. 443. A breach not going to the root of the contract did not entitle the other party to repudiate: see 9 App. Cas. 444, and Johnstone v. Milling, (1886) 16 Q. B. D. 460, 471. In the present case there was no express refusal by the defts. to be bound by the provisions of the agreement, and it could not be said that any breach of clause 17 went to the root of the whole agreement, and defeated the substantial consideration for it. *RHYMNEY RY. Held, that, it appearing that the agent's authority to their knowledge was limited to the said specified repairs, they could not recover on the contract, which was an entire one, and in its entirety had never been performed:

Held, further, that the shipowner having taken the ship as repaired and sold, it did not thereby ratify the contract.

12. — Implied terms—Necessary implication—Agreement for sale of products of a business.

The defts. agreed to sell to the plts. all brewers' grains made by the defts., at the average of the rates charged each year by certain specified firms, from July 10, 1885, until Sept. 30, 1895. In 1890 the defts. sold their business, and in consequence ceased to supply grains to the plts.:—

Held, that a term could not be applied in the contract to the effect that the defts. would not by any voluntary act of their own prevent themselves from continuing the sale of grains to the plts. for the period mentioned. HAMLTON & CO. v. The proprietors of a medical preparation advertised that they would pay 100*l.* to any person who caught influenza after using the preparation in and for a certain manner and period. A person who complied with these conditions caught the influenza:—

The plt., a spinster, having signed an agreement for the lease of a house to her by the deft., the deft. subsequently signed it, and handed it to his solicitor with instructions not to part with it except on condition that the plt. obtained some responsible person to join in the lease—a condition which the plt. declined to fulfil:—

Held, that evidence was admissible to shew that no agreement was come to between the parties, and that the true effect of the transaction was that the deft. declined to enter into an agreement on the terms of the written document, but at the same time made a counter offer which was rejected, and that there was no agreement. *PATTLE v. Letters accepting an open offer and withdrawing the offer were posted on the same day. The letter of withdrawal was received before the letter of acceptance:—

Held, nevertheless, that the withdrawal was too late. An offer which is likely to be accepted by letter is accepted when the letter is posted; but a withdrawal of such an offer dates only from the time when the fact of the withdrawal is known to the other party. HENTHORN v. FRASER

Held, that there was no contract. The final telegram was not the acceptance of an offer to sell, as there was no offer to sell, only an offer to buy, the acceptance to which must be express. HARVEY v. FACEY - P. C. [1893] A. C. 552

19. — Telegraphic code—Cablegrams—Mistake—Action on contract—Onus probandi.

Where parties have corresponded by means of a telegraphic code, it is for the plt., in an action for breach of contract, to shew that the proposal made by him and accepted by the deft. is so clear and unambiguous that the deft. cannot be heard to say that he misunderstood it. Illegality.

20. — Fraud—Loan of money—Concealment of identity of lender—Right of borrower to repudiate.

The plt., a money-lender, advertised under a fictitious name, and the deft. borrowed money and gave a promissory note to secure the sum borrowed and interest. In an action on the promissory note the jury found that the plt. intentionally concealed his identity to induce the deft. to borrow money of him as if from another, and that the deft. was so induced; that the plt. did so fraudulently; that the deft. entered into the contract believing that he was doing so with a person of the fictitious name given by the plt., and that the deft. repudiated the contract within a reasonable time after he discovered that the plt. was the person with whom he had contracted:—

Held, that the fraudulent concealment by the plt. of his identity with a person whose reputation in business was such that the deft. would not have dealt with him was material to the inducement which brought about the contract, which the deft. was therefore entitled to repudiate within a reasonable time after the discovery of the fraud. *GORDON v. An agreement between two or more to purchase shares in order to induce would-be buyers of shares in a company to believe, contrary to the fact, that there was a bona fide market for its shares, and that the shares were at a real premium, is an illegal transaction and may be made the subject of an indictment for conspiracy, and no action can be maintained in respect of such agreement or purchase of shares. A racecourse co. agreed with a canal co. that if it should be at any time proposed to use their racecourse for dock purposes the racecourse co. should give the canal co. the first refusal thereof:—

purchaser (including the canal co.) entitled the canal co. to a first refusal.

(2.) The racecourse co. could not sell the racecourse without informing the canal co. of the actual cash price the intending purchaser was offering, and offering it to them at that price.

(3.) The right of first refusal could be enforced against an intending purchaser with notice thereof on two grounds—namely:

(a) It was an interest in the land: London and South Western Ry. Co. v. Gomm, (1882) 20 Ch. D. 562.

(b) While the matter rested in fieri, the Court, by an inverse application of the principle of Willmott v. Barber, (1880) 15 Ch. D. 96, could restrain the intending purchaser from accepting a conveyance of the legal estate in breach of his vendor's prior contract. MANCHESTER SHIP CANAL Co. v. MANCHESTER RACECOURSE Co.

This he had put it out of his power to perform, and must therefore perform the other alternative by paying the 1000*l.* Affirm. by C. CONTRACT (Performance)—continued.*28. — Impossibility of performance—Implied condition—Measure of damages.

By a contract made in Oct., 1899, the defts. sold to the plts. a cargo of cotton-seed, to be shipped at certain Egyptian ports during the month of Jan., 1900, per steamship Orlando, and to be delivered to the plts. in the United Kingdom. The contract provided that, "In case of prohibition of export, blockade, or hostilities, preventing shipment, this contract or any unfulfilled part thereof is to be cancelled." In Dec., 1899, the Orlando was, without default on the part of the defts., stranded, and was so much damaged as to render it impossible for her to arrive at the ports of loading before the end of Jan.; and on Dec. 20 notice of that fact was given to the plts. Upon receipt of that notice the plts. might have bought in the market another cargo of cotton-seed in substitution for that sold to them by the defts., but they declined to do so. The market was rising, and by the end of Jan. the market price had risen considerably above the point at which it stood at the time when the plts. had notice of the stranding. The plts. sued the defts. for breach of their contract, claiming as damages the difference between the contract price and the market price at the end of Jan. :—

Held, that the contract must be read as subject to an implied condition that, in the event of the ship not arriving at the ports of loading within the stipulated time in a fit state to receive the cargo, the contract should be treated as at an end; that the implication of that condition was not excluded by the clause expressly providing for the cancellation of the contract in the specified events; and that the defts. were not liable.

Seemle, that if the plts. had been entitled to recover, inasmuch as they were under the circumstances bound to endeavour to mitigate the loss, the measure of their damages would have been the difference between the contract price and the market price at the date when they had notice of the stranding, and no more. *NICKOLL & KNIGHT v. The traveller having left the plts.' employ and entered that of another firm, the plts. moved for an injunction to restrain him from engaging in any other business, and from acting as a traveller for any other firm of wine merchants during the term of ten years :—

A bank had bought debentures in the M. Co. from the T. Co. and claimed rescission on the ground of misrepresentation; after discovery of the misrepresentation the bank attended and took an active part in a debenture action :—

Held, that the bank were entitled to rescission unless (a) their conduct had so injured the debentures as to make it unjust for the T. Co. to take them back, or (b) the bank had elected to keep the debentures. Until judgment the bank was entitled to keep the debentures and to protect them :—

32. — Innocent misrepresentation—Indemnity.

Action by lessees against their lessor claiming rescission of a lease on the ground of alleged misrepresentation, and an indemnity against all costs and charges incurred.

The plts., who were exhibitors of prize poultry, alleged that, relying on a representation by the defts.' agents that the sanitary condition of the premises was perfect, they took the lease, and placed valuable stock there. The defts. admitted that the premises were insanitary.

In order to avoid calling unnecessary evidence as to the alleged losses and expenses, it was arranged that the nature and extent of the plts.' right to indemnity, if established, should be first decided.

Held, that the indemnity would only extend to rights and obligations created by the contract sought to be rescinded, such as rent, rates, and repairs paid or executed under the covenants of the lease. It would not cover the losses and expenses claimed which came under the head of damages pure and simple, and could not be recovered in an action based on innocent misrepresentation.

A testator directed that the rents and profits of his residuary real and personal estate should be paid to his wife for life; and after her death he gave his residuary estate to others in succession, subject to certain annuities, and conferred on the annuitants a power of distress. The residuary estate included both freeholds and leaseholds:—

Held, that neither the direction to pay rents nor the power of distress afforded any sufficient indication of an intention that the leaseholds should be enjoyed in specie, and that they ought to be treated as converted at the expiration of a year from the testator's death, in accordance with the rule in Howe v. Earl of Dartmouth, (1802)

Testator by his will specifically devised certain freeholds, and bequeathed his residuary real and personal estate to other persons. Subsequently he made a codicil which expressly confirmed the will, but did not refer in terms to the property specifically devised. On the same day he granted a lease of the specifically devised property with an option of purchase, which was exercised after the testator's death:—

Held, that the confirmation of the will indicated a sufficient intention to pass to the devisee whatever interest the testator had in the property, and that the proceeds of the sale did not fall into residue. In re PYLE. PYLE v. PYLE

The testatrix of the debts was admitted tenant for life of certain copyhold tenements of a manor. By the custom of the manor the tenants were bound to repair their tenements, and the only mode in which that obligation had been enforced had been by presentment, fine and forfeiture. Upon the death of the testatrix the premises were found to be out of repair. More than six months after the debts, as her executors, had taken upon themselves the administration of her effects, the lord brought an action against them for dilapidations:—

Held, that the testatrix, by accepting the tenancy according to the custom of the manor, impliedly contracted to discharge the customary obligation to repair; that for the breach of her implied contract the lord was not confined to his customary remedy by presentment, fine and forfeiture, but had a remedy by action; and that that remedy by action, sounding in contract and not in tort, survived against her executors. *BLACKMORE v. There was no written agreement with or licence to L. as to the use of the blocks. Deft. with permission of L. used the blocks to print drawings which they published:—

The joint effect of s. 2, sub-s. 3, of the International Copyright Act, 1886, and art. 2 of the Bern Convention, is that an author suing in England in respect of an infringement of foreign copyright must prove that he is entitled to protection in the country of origin of the work, but that right once established, his remedy depends entirely on the English law.

An author whose copyright is infringed in any manner mentioned in s. 6 of the Fine Arts Copyright Act, 1862, is entitled to recover separate penalties against every infringer, whether principal or agent, master or servant, the minimum penalty in every case being a farthing for each copy by him pirated.

Ex parte Beal, (1868) L. R. 3 Q. B. 387, and Ellis v. Marshall & Son, (1895) 64 L. J. (Q.B.) 757, followed.

Where an action in respect of infringement of copyright fails on the ground of the indecency of the work, and the indecency has been repeated in the infringements, the action will be dismissed without costs. *BASCHET v. 17. — Penalty—"Every such offence"—Known coin of the Realm—Fine Arts Copyright Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 68), s. 6.

The main question between the parties was whether the penalty should be fixed at a farthing for each copy put in circulation, which would amount to 1054l. 15s. 10d. in all, or whether it should be fixed at a fraction of a farthing for each copy:—

Held, that "every such offence" in s. 6 referred to a repetition, copy, or other imitation, and, according to the decision in Ex parte Beal, (1868) L. R. 3 Q. B. 387, the plt. was entitled to a penalty for each copy circulated; the sum forfeited must be some recognised sum, not merely a sum which could be expressed in figures, but a sum which existed in reality, and which could be recovered, and, having regard to the difficulty there would be in recovering the fraction of a farthing, the Court felt obliged to fix the penalty at a farthing for each copy, though it would have been glad to have been able to avoid coming to a conclusion which would give an extravagant amount for pictures of an ephemeral character. On the defts. paying 200l. to the plt., and paying the rest of the money into court, the Court stayed execution pending an appeal.

Registration of copyright under the Copyright Act, 1842, or the Fine Arts Copyright Act, 1862, in the name of a person who is a mere agent or nominee of the proprietor of the copyright, and not a trustee of the copyright for him, is bad; and joinder of the unregistered proprietor as co-plt. with the person so improperly registered will not render an action for infringement of the copyright maintainable.

London Printing and Publishing Alliance v. Cox, [1891] 3 Ch. 291, followed.

Accordingly, where copyright which belonged to a limited co. was registered in the sole name of their managing director, and it was not shewn that he was a trustee of the copyright for them, an action for infringement of the copyright by the director and co. as co-plts. was held not to be maintainable.

Registration of a book under the Copyright Act, 1842, in the name of the author of the letter-press, does not confer any protection in respect of drawings which are introduced into the book as illustrations and the art copyright in which is vested in other persons.

Under the Fine Arts Copyright Act, 1862, it is not necessary that any agreement in writing should be made or entered on the register where registration is in the name of the person for or on behalf of whom a drawing is made or executed for a good or valuable consideration. *PERRY v. The debts, sold for use in a mechanical organ called an "Æolian" perforated rolls of paper representing the musical score of certain songs in the music of which the plts. had the copyright. The rolls were inserted in the organ, and were unrolled by its mechanism when actuated by the performer, so that the passage of air through the perforations in the rolls into the pipes of the organ produced corresponding musical notes the pitch and duration of which were determined by the position and length of the perforations. To bring a musical composition within the provisions of the Dramatic Copyright Act, 1833, it must have the characteristics of a dramatic piece, and whether it has such characteristics must be determined in each case by the nature of the composition itself.

A song that does not require for its representation either dramatic effect or scenery is not a dramatic piece, although it is intended to be sung in appropriate costume on the stage of music-halls.

When a musical composition is published, in order to entitle the owner of the right of public representation or performance thereof to sue for penalties for the unlicensed performance of such composition, the right of representation or performance must have been reserved by notice printed on every published copy, as provided by the Copyright (Musical Compositions) Act, 1882; and this is equally the case where the musical composition is also a dramatic piece within the Dramatic Copyright Act, 1833. *FULLER v. The defts. were the owners of a periodical in which was a woodcut which almost exactly reproduced the whole of the plt.'s engraving with the exception of the child, whose position was replaced by a tortoise and two cats: the woodcut was given as an illustration of a story entitled "A Strange Visitor." On a motion for an injunction to restrain the defts. from selling any copies of this periodical and woodcut:—

The Middlesborough Improvement Act, 1877, s. 25, empowers the corporation to make “such by-laws as they may think fit for the prevention of betting . . . in the public streets . . . and other places of public resort within the borough.”

The corporation made a by-law that “any person who shall frequent and use any street . . . or other place of public resort within the borough . . . for the purpose of bookmaking or betting . . . shall be liable to a penalty.”

The appellant used for the purpose of book-making an uninclosed piece of private ground within the borough, bounded by streets. Book-makers and other persons habitually used the ground for betting, but without permission from the owner. The appellant and the other book-makers conducted their business in an orderly manner, and caused no nuisance, annoyance, or obstruction. The appellant was convicted under the by-law.

Held, that the by-law was within the power given by the Act, and was valid; that, as the ground was in fact habitually used by the public, it was a “place of public resort,” within the meaning of the by-law; and that the appellant was rightly convicted. KITSON v. ASHE

A by-law made under this section prohibited, under a penalty, any person from frequenting and using any street or other public place within the borough for the purpose of bookmaking or betting:—

Held, that the corporation could not pay any moneys out of the borough fund nor make any borough rate or general improvement rate under either Act for the purpose of such payments; but that the agreement was void, and that the annual payment might be made out of any surplus left of the borough fund or rates after satisfying the provisions of the Acts.

By contracts the Commrs. of Sewers of the City of London contracted with an Electrical Engineering Co. for lighting the City by electricity. In Aug., 1891, the contracts were transferred to the plts., and from that date the City had been lighted by electricity under the contracts. At the date of the contracts the sole power of lighting the streets of the City was vested in the defts. acting by the commrs. under the provisions of the City of London Sewers Acts, 1848 and 1851. By the City of London Sewers Act, 1897, the commrs. ceased to exist, and their powers, duties, and liabilities became vested in the defts. In 1898 certain facts came to the knowledge of the defts. which caused them to repudiate the contracts; and thereupon the plts. brought this action, claiming a declaration that the contracts were valid and subsisting, and binding on the defts.

It appeared that at the date of the contracts some of the members of the Common Council of the defts. were shareholders of the Electrical Engineering Co., and also of the plt. co., and it was contended by the defts. that this fact rendered the contracts null and void by virtue of s. 42 of the City of London Sewers Act, 1848. That section enacts that “no person, being a commr., or a member of the Court of Aldermen, or of the Common Council of this City, shall be directly or indirectly interested or concerned in any contract which shall be made or entered into by or on behalf of the commrs. for the execution of any works by this Act directed or authorized to be done or executed . . . or for any other matter or thing whatever, upon pain that every such contract shall be null and void":—

Held, that s. 42 did not apply, and that the p<sup>ts</sup>. were therefore entitled to judgment with costs. CITY OF LONDON ELECTRIC LIGHTING CO. v. LONDON CORPORATION

Resignation of his office by a borough alderman in the manner provided by s. 36, sub-s. 1, of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, will not render the office vacant until it is declared to be vacant by the borough council with the formalities prescribed by sub-s. 2; and, consequently, an alderman, who in the course of rotation is about to go out of office under s. 14, sub-ss. 6 and 7, cannot by merely resigning his office before the ordinary day of election of aldermen, and in the absence of a declaration by the council that the office is vacant, get rid of his disqualification to vote at the election of aldermen under s. 60, sub-s. 3. PEASE v. By a Provisional Order under the sections above referred to, confirmed by Act of Parliament, and coming into operation on Nov. 9, 1898, an area forming part of the district of the Plympton District Council was taken from that district and added to the borough of D. The order contained the following clause:—

"XV. (1.) If at the time of the commencement of this order any action or proceeding or any cause of action or proceeding is pending or existing by or against the rural district council in relation exclusively to any part of the added areas the same shall not be in anywise prejudicially affected by reason of the making of this order, but may be continued, prosecuted, and enforced by or against the corporation of the borough."

An action had been commenced in March, 1898, by Jackson against the council for an injunction to restrain a sewage nuisance. The houses, the sewer, and the cesspool were all within the added area, but the p<sup>lt</sup>'s land was just outside it. In May, 1899, the D. Corporation was added as deft., and in July, 1899, an undertaking was given by both defts. to the p<sup>lt</sup>., who admittedly had a good cause of action and was entitled to his costs:—

Held, that the action was an action pending on Nov. 9, 1898, in relation exclusively to part of the added area within Clause XV. of the order, with the result that all liability attached to the council in relation to the action was transferred to and attached to the corporation. It was unnecessary to consider whether the whole cause of action arose within the added area; it was sufficient that the houses, the sewers, and the cesspool were all within it. It was also unnecessary to consider whether, but for the order, the costs would or would not have been "general expenses" within s. 229 of the Public Health Act, 1875, chargeable upon the whole district, and not "special expenses" of the added area unless and until so determined by the Loc. Govt. Bd. The corporation must pay the costs of the p<sup>lt</sup>., the council, and the application. JACKSON v. PLYMPTON ST. MARY RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL

The petitioner and respondent were nominated in proper form for election to the office of councillor for a ward in a borough. The petitioner at the time of his nomination was interested in a contract with the corporation of the borough. The respondent objected to the petitioner's nomination on the ground that he was, by reason of his interest in the contract, disqualified for election. The mayor allowed the objection, and the respondent, being the only other person nominated, was declared elected. It was conceded by the respondent, upon the authority of Pritchard v. Mayor of Bangor, (1888) 13 App. Cas. 241, that the mayor had no jurisdiction to entertain the objection to the petitioner's nomination, but it was contended that the petitioner had no right to present a petition:—

Held, (1.) that the petitioner was disqualified for nomination, none the less because he might by assigning his interest in the contract have got rid of his disqualification before the date of the poll; but

The respondent was charged under a by-law made by a county council under s. 16 of the Local Government Act, 1888, which was as follows: "No person shall, in any house, building, garden, land, or other place, abutting on, or near to, a street or public place, make use of any violent, abusive, profane, indecent, or obscene, language, gesture, or conduct, to the annoyance of any person in such street or public place."

The facts were sufficient to justify a conviction if the by-law was valid, but the justices declined to convict.

Held, that the by-law was made for "good rule and government," and "for prevention and suppression of nuisances," within the meaning of s. 23 of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, and therefore was valid under s. 16 of the Local Government Act, 1888, and the respondent ought to be convicted. MANTLE v. In a probate action judgment was given for the plt. establishing the will (which contained specific devises of real estate, but no residuary devise), and the def't's costs were ordered to be paid out of the estate, but no order was made as to the costs of the plts. propounding the will. Held, that the order of the Probate Div. could only refer to the estate over which it had jurisdiction (viz., personalty), and that the Ch. —Summons by executors—Land Transfer Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 65).

Summons by the executors of a testator, who died after the Land Transfer Act, 1897, came into operation, for the determination of the question whether, under the terms of the testator's will, a certain piece of freehold land was included in a specific devise, or belonged to the heir-at-law as undisposed of, the will containing no general devise of real estate. The devisees and the heir-at-law were made respondents to the summons.

Per Kekewich J. I am not prepared to lay down any general rule by way of guidance to myself or other judges in subsequent cases, as the matter has not been very fully argued. There is a good deal to be said in favour of the view that since the Land Transfer Act, 1897, an executor occupies the position of a trustee of real estate. But even if that be so, I am not prepared to hold that there has been any alteration of the ordinary rule as to costs in the case of a conflict between devisees and an heir-at-law. The devisees had to make out their title against the heir-at-law. They have made their claim, and failed. They are in the same position as to costs as if they had brought an action under the old law. They merely have the advantage of being saddled with lighter costs owing to the less expensive form of proceeding. The executors' costs will be taxed as between solicitor and client and charged on the property, with liberty to apply as to the same. I do not now suggest that I can make any order as to raising these costs. The costs of the heir-at-law will be taxed as between party and party and paid by the devisees. *In re PEEL. WOODCOCK v. Jurisdiction—Extravagant litigation—Disallowance of costs.

Though the Court has no jurisdiction to alter or vary an order after it has been passed and entered, yet it may make a supplemental order; such as an order directing that the party benefited by the previous order shall not be entitled to receive any benefit under it except on certain conditions.

In an administration action an order was made in 1887 directing the trustees to raise a sum of taxed costs which they had incurred to their solicitor and to pay into court the amount when raised. The trustees raised the amount but, instead of paying it into court, allowed their solicitor to retain it in payment of his costs, although no order for actual payment had been made. In 1892 the trustees obtained orders directing certain further costs to be taxed and paid to them, and those orders were duly passed and entered; but before they had been acted upon Kekewich J. was informed of the default of the trustees under the order of 1887, and moreover that the taxed costs directed to be raised by that order amounted to about one-third of the value of the whole estate, and had mostly been incurred in fruitless and unnecessary proceedings carried out under the advice of the trustees' solicitor. He accordingly made an order supplemental to the orders of 1892, directing that, although the taxation of costs under those orders should be proceeded with, none of those costs should be paid to the trustees until they had first complied with the order of 1887. On appeal that supplemental order was affirmed.

The plt. having obtained judgment and being unable to obtain payment of his debt, obtained, under Order XLII., r. 32, an order to have the debtor examined as to his means. The debtor on his examination admitted having a retiring pension and a balance at his bankers. The plt. then obtained a garnishee order against the bankers, and by that means recovered part of his debt. He then applied for his costs of the examination proceedings and of the garnishee proceedings. The master refused to make any order, on the ground, as was stated by affidavit, that the practice in the Q. B. Div. was to treat such proceedings as a luxury, the costs of which the plt. could not throw on the deft. The plt. appealed; the judge in chambers dismissed the appeal, as was stated; on the same ground, and refused leave to appeal. The plt. applied to the C. A., who gave leave, and he then appealed against the order in chambers:—

Held, that as by the express terms of the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 49, no appeal will lie from any order as to costs which are left to the discretion of the Court except by leave of the judge making such order, and the costs in question were, by the terms of Order XLII., r. 34, and Order XLV., r. 9, in the discretion of the judge, the appeal must be dismissed, though the Court stated their inability to understand the practice alleged to exist in the Q. B. Div. that examination of a debtor as to his means, and proceedings to attach debts due to him, were luxuries the costs of which the debtor ought not to be called on to pay. *ADLINGTON v. The C. A. reversed the decision, and ordered that the plts. should pay the defts.' costs in both courts. The defts. had paid 1105*l.* to the plts.' solicitors, this being the amount of the plts.' taxed costs. In drawing up the order of the C. A landowner denying that a road over his land was a public highway, and threatening proceedings against any person using it, two officials of the county council were directed by the council, acting under the provisions of the Local Government Act, 1894, s. 26, to use the road for the purpose of formally testing the right, which they accordingly did. The landowner thereupon brought an action of trespass against them, but at the trial it was found that the road was a public highway, and judgment was given for the defts.:—

Held, that, the acts in respect of which the action was brought having been done by the defts. in pursuance or execution or intended execution of the Local Government Act, 1894, s. 26, the case came within the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893, s. 1, and therefore the defts. were entitled to costs to be taxed as between solicitor and client under that section. *GREENWELL v. —“Action”—Injunction—Costs as between solicitor and client—Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 61), s. 1, sub-ss. (b), (c).

The word “action” as used in s. 1 of the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893, includes all actions in the Ch. Div., whether actions for an injunction or actions partly for an injunction and partly for damages. Therefore in any such action against a public authority judgment for the defts. carries the right to an order for costs to be taxed as between solicitor and client, and the Court has no discretion in the matter. *HARROP v. An action was brought against an urban district council claiming an injunction to restrain the defts. from using certain portions of land purchased by them for a cemetery on the ground that the plt. was entitled to the benefit of s. 9 of the Burial Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 128), prohibiting interments within 100 yards of a dwelling-house without the consent of the occupier. The action having been tried and dismissed, the defts. asked for costs as between solicitor and client under s. 1, sub-s. (b), of the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893, citing Harrop v. Ossett Corporation, [1898] 1 Ch. 525:—

Held, that the action was brought against the defts. for an “act done in pursuance of a public duty,” and that the Act consequently applied, and the defts. were entitled to costs as between solicitor and client. TOMS v. CLACTON URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL

By the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893, s. 1, judgment for the deft. in an action brought in respect of acts or alleged defaults in execution of an Act of Parliament, or of any public duty or authority, carries costs as between solicitor and client. Where a deft., a public authority, in an action falling within the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893, succeeds, so that substantially the deft. obtains judgment, the deft. is entitled under the Act to costs to be taxed as between solicitor and client, notwithstanding that the judgment as drawn up merely directs the plt. to pay the deft.’s costs without directing how such costs are to be taxed. The omission of such a direction will not deprive the deft. of the benefit of the statute, the Court having no discretion in the matter when once it is clear that in substance judgment has been obtained by the deft. It is not necessary that the judgment itself should shew on its face that the action was one falling within the Act.

Accordingly, an application by a deft. for security to be given by the plt. is not too late merely because it is made after the delivery of the defence. The rule laid down in Martano v. Mann, (1880) 14 Ch. D. 419, and Lydney and Wiggool Iron Ore Co. v. Bird, (1883) 23 Ch. D. 358, applied.

A trustee ought not to be deprived of his costs out of the trust estate merely on the ground that he has severed from his co-trustee in his defence to an action to administer the estate.

He ought to have an opportunity of explaining the reasons for his severance, so that the Court may be able to decide judicially whether the severance was improper.

The allowance of the costs of a trustee out of the trust estate is not a matter "left to the discretion of the Court" within the meaning of s. 49 of the Judicature Act, 1873; and consequently a trustee has a right to appeal against an order depriving him of costs out of the estate, and giving the whole of the costs to his co-trustee.

Proceedings having been taken under ss. 94–96 of the Public Health Act, 1875, by the respondents, a local authority, against the appellant in respect of a nuisance, an order to abate the nuisance was made against the appellant by the justices. He appealed against the order to quarter sessions, who dismissed the appeal, subject to a case. On the hearing of the case a Div. Ct. ordered that the order of quarter sessions should be quashed with costs, and that the respondents should pay to the appellant his costs of the appeal to the High Court to be taxed. The costs of the two appeals were taxed and paid to the appellant. In prosecuting the appeals the appellant reasonably incurred costs to a greater amount than the taxed costs which he received, and he claimed from the respondents the difference between the taxed costs and the amount so expended by him, as compensation under s. 308 of the Public Health Act, 1875:—

Held, that he was not entitled to recover the amount so claimed by him.

Appeal from an order of a judge at chambers refusing a review of taxation of costs. The writ of summons was specially indorsed with a claim for 410*l.* and three guineas costs. An order was obtained for substituted service. The amount indorsed on the writ was paid, within four days of service, to the plt.'s solicitors, who demanded in addition 2*l.* 10*s.* for the cost attending the substituted service, and that sum was paid under protest. The deft. obtained an order to tax under Order III., r. 7. The plt.'s solicitors carried in a bill for 6*l.* 4*s.* 8*d.*, the extra amount over the sum received being for costs subsequently incurred. The master indorsed the order "Costs allowed at 4*l.* 3*s.*," that is, three guineas the amount indorsed on the writ and 1*l.* for fixed costs of substituted service under the Central Office Practice Rule 18, and he directed that the plt. should pay the costs of the order and taxation. The plt. put in objections to which the master answered that he had taxed according to the invariable rule of practice, after consulting

In an action brought in the High Court to recover 20*l.* 2*s.* as the price of goods sold and delivered, an order was made under Order XIV. by which leave was given to the plt. to sign judgment for 8*l.* 14*s.* if that amount was not paid within seven days, and leave was given to the deft. to defend as to the residue of the claim, and it was ordered, under s. 65 of the County Courts Act, 1888, that the action should be tried in the county court. The deft. paid the sum of 8*l.* 14*s.* under the order, and at the trial in the county court judgment was given for him, no order being made as to costs:—

In an action brought in the High Court to recover 73*l.* 8*s.* 3*d.* as the price of goods sold and delivered an order was made under Order XIV. by which leave was given to the plt. to sign judgment for 53*l.* 8*s.* 3*d.*, and leave was given to the defts. to defend as to the residue of the claim, and it was ordered under s. 65 of the County Courts Act, 1888, that the action should be tried in the county court. The plt. signed judgment for 53*l.* 8*s.* 3*d.* under the order, and at the trial in the county court he recovered judgment for 20*l.* the residue of his claim, and costs:—

Held, that the plt. was entitled to have his costs in the county court taxed upon the scale applicable where the amount recovered exceeds 50*l.*

31. — Remitted action—Practice—Taxation—County Courts Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 43), ss. 65, 118.

The provision of s. 118 of the County Courts Act, 1888, which prevents the recovery by a solicitor from his client of costs incurred in a county court, unless they have been allowed on taxation, only relates to cases in which there is an application for taxation. Therefore the solicitor may recover such costs without taxation, where there has been no application for it, and the client is no longer entitled to taxation.

By Lord Esher M.R. and Lopes L.J.: Where an action in the High Court has been remitted to the county court, the above-mentioned provision of the County Courts Act, 1888, does not affect a solicitor's right to recover the costs incurred in the High Court before the order remitting the action. *CUBISON v. The plts., trustees of a charity, sued in the county court to recover arrears of a rent-charge of 10*l.* a year issuing out of the defts.' land.

The summons referred to the Charitable Trusts Act, 1853, and leave to proceed had been obtained under that Act.

On an application for a prohibition:—

Held, that the action was not "proceedings under this Act," within the meaning of s. 41 of the Charitable Trusts Act, 1853, and therefore the jurisdiction of the county court was not excluded by that section:

Held, also, that the title which came in question, within the meaning of s. 60 of the County Courts Act, 1888, was the title to the rent-charge, not the title to the land, and therefore the value of the hereditaments in dispute did not exceed 50*l.* by the year, and the county court had jurisdiction. *BASSANO v. Held (affirming the decision of Stirling J.), that the deposit with the lessors of a sum of money which, if the lessee performed the building contract, would revert to him, was not payment of a “fine or sum of money in the nature of a fine” within the meaning of the Conveyancing Act, 1892, s. 3, and that the lessors might lawfully require such a deposit as a condition for granting the licence. In re Cosh’s Contract

The deft., a lessee of an assign of Drummond with notice of the covenants, having sold beer, wine, and spirits in a house on a certain plot A, the plts. brought this action to restrain him.

Held, that there was a building scheme as to the whole of the property, and the sales though at different times all formed part of one transaction. But the question, as stated in Nottingham Patent Brick and Tile Co. v. Butler, (1886) 15 Q. B. D. 261; 15 ib. 778, was whether the stipulations were meant by the vendor and understood by the buyers to be for the common advantage of the several purchasers. Now, Drummond bought before the auction, and, although the plan shewed that the vendor intended to include Drummond’s property in the scheme, there was nothing to shew that Drummond had any intention to take the benefit or subject himself to the burden of the scheme as regards the other purchasers. His conveyance was inconsistent with any such intention. He could, therefore, not have enforced the scheme, and he was consequently not bound by it for want of reciprocity. So far, therefore, as they relied on the scheme, the plts.’ claim failed. But they also claimed as assigns of the benefit of Drummond’s covenants. This was not expressly assigned, but it was sufficient if the vendor represented or contracted that the purchasers should have the benefit: Benals v. Cowlishaw, (1878) 9 Ch. D. 125; (1879) 11 ib. 866.

Now, the particulars, plan, and stipulations in the present case, coupled with the fact that lot 7 was expressly described as a site for an hotel or tavern, raised an irresistible inference that the vendor intended and contracted that the purchasers of lot 7 should have the benefit of Drummond’s covenant not to use the land as a site for licensed premises. The plts. were, therefore, entitled to enforce the covenant, as assigns of the vendor, and the injunction must go.

5. — Restrictive covenant—Benefit—Covenant running with the land—Covenant enforceable in equity—"One message"—"House"—"Private residence"—"Residential flat."

When the benefit of a restrictive covenant has been once clearly annexed to one piece of land, there is a presumption that it passes by an assignment of that land, and it may be said to run with the land in equity as well as at law, without proof of special bargain or representation on the assignment of the land. The covenant in such a case runs with the land because the assignee has purchased something which inhered in or was annexed to the land which he bought. The purchaser's ignorance of the existence of the covenant does not defeat the presumption, though it may be rebutted by proof of facts inconsistent with it.

The owners of building land and their mortgagees conveyed a plot of the land in fee to a purchaser, who entered into a covenant with the mortgagors (but not with the mortgagees) that no more than one message or dwelling-house should at any one time be erected or be standing on the plot, and that such message should be adapted for and used as and for a private residence only. The conveyance stated that the covenant was entered into with intent that it might so far as possible bind the premises thereby conveyed and every part thereof, into whosever hands the same might come, and might enure to the benefit of the mortgagees, their heirs and assigns, and others claiming under them to all or any of their lands adjoining or near to the premises.

The mortgagors afterwards conveyed another plot of land near to the first in fee to a purchaser who had no knowledge of the covenant entered into by the purchaser of the first plot:—

Held, that assigns of the second plot could enforce the restrictive covenant against an assign of the first plot.

Decision of Farwell J., [1899] W. N. 223, affirmed.

Held also, that the erection on the first plot of a large block of buildings, which were to be occupied as residential flats, would be a breach of the covenant.

The covenant having been released by the mortgagors (so far as they lawfully could) as regarded the number of houses to be erected, the purchaser's devisee covenanted with the mortgagors that every message to be erected on the land should be adapted for and used as and for a private residence only:—

Held, that the erection of the proposed building would be a breach of the covenant also.

6. — Restrictive covenant—Occupier—Injunction.

A person was in joint or sole occupation of a house, and managing the business in it, with notice of the covenants restricting its user, and was using the house in a way forbidden by the restrictive covenants:—

7. — Restrictive covenant—Tied public-house—Mortgagor and mortgagee—Assigns—Underlessee—Notice.

The owner of a leasehold public-house, subject to a first mortgage, made a second mortgage to the partners in "John Brothers," brewers, in consideration of an advance by them out of their partnership account, the partners being first described separately and afterwards referred to as John Brothers.

By a separate deed of the same date, made between the same parties described as in the second mortgage, the mortgagor in further consideration of the advance covenanted with "John Brothers, their executors, administrators, and assigns," to bind the house to "John Brothers" for the entire supply of beer, wines, and spirits so long as he, his executors, administrators or assigns, should be in possession or occupation.

Both mortgages were subsequent to the Conveyancing Act, 1881.

The transferee of the first mortgage and the assign of the equity of redemption, then in possession, having together made an underlease to the deft., a publican, with notice of the covenant, the plts., who had purchased the business of John Brothers together with their right of supply to the public-house, and had taken a transfer of the second mortgage and an assignment of the benefit of the deed of covenant, sought to enforce the tie against the deft. :—

Held, on the construction and intention of the deeds, that—

1. The benefit of the covenant was not limited to the original firm of John Brothers, but ran with their business.

2. The covenant bound any one deriving title under the original mortgagor, including an underlessee with notice, who, though not an assign, could be bound in equity by a restrictive covenant.

3. The deft., though apparently deriving title to his underlease under the first mortgagee as well as under the mortgagor in possession, must, according to the rule in Roach v. Wadham, (1805) 6 East, 289, be considered to hold under the better title, which, having regard to s. 18, sub-s. 1, of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, was that derived from the mortgagor in possession. He could not, therefore, set up the paramount title of the first mortgagee against the plts.

4. On the above grounds the plts. were entitled to enforce the tie against the defts. JOHN BROTHERS ABERGAW BREWERY CO. v. HOLMES

The respondents were charged, under the Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849, s. 2, with cruelly ill-treating a tame seagull. The bird had been the property of its owner for three years, and was used by her in her business as a photographer. It was tame, and was kept in a field. One wing having been pinioned, it could not fly, but could get out of the field by going down a river. It would go to its owner when called, and feed from the hand:—

Held, that the seagull was not a "domestic animal," within the meaning of the Cruelty to Animals Acts, 1849, s. 29, and 1854, s. 3, and therefore the respondents could not be convicted. YATES v. HIGGINS — Div. Ct. [1896] 1 Q. B. 166

He belonged to a sect who objected on religious grounds to calling in medical aid, and to the use of medicine, and he had wilfully and deliberately abstained from providing medical aid and medicine, which were necessary for the child, though he knew it to be dangerously ill, but in other respects he had done all he could

in the best interests of the child. Medical aid would have prolonged, and probably saved, the child's life, and the prisoner had the means to procure medical aid:—

Held, that there was evidence that the prisoner had wilfully neglected the child in a manner likely to cause injury to its health, within the meaning of the Act, and having thereby caused or accelerated its death, he was rightly convicted of manslaughter. *REG. v. On the trial of an indictment for unlawfully and wilfully neglecting children under the age of sixteen, contrary to the Prevention of Cruelty to Children Act, 1894, the children were not produced before the Court, and the only evidence as to their ages was that of two persons who said that they had seen the children and stated what they believed were their respective ages, all of them being under sixteen, and that of the mistress of a school who said that the elder children attended a public elementary school, and she believed they were within the statutory age limit:—

Held, that there was evidence proper to be left to the jury that the children were under sixteen. REG. v. COX C. C. R. [1898] 1 Q. D. 179

15. — Admissibility — Evidence of criminal acts other than those charged—Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1883 (46 Vict. No. 17), s. 423.

Evidence tending to shew guilt of criminal acts other than those charged is not admissible except upon the issue whether the acts charged were designed or accidental, or unless to rebut a defence otherwise open. M. and his wife were convicted of the murder of an infant, received from its mother on representations as to their willingness to adopt it on payment of a sum inadequate to its support beyond a very limited time, and whose body was found buried in the garden of a house occupied by them:

Held, that evidence of other infants having been received from their mothers on like representations and terms, and that bodies of infants had been found buried in the gardens of several houses occupied by the prisoners, was relevant to the issue. *MAKIN v. 16. — Admissibility—Public examination of bankrupt—Parol evidence of bankrupt's admissions—The Bankruptcy Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 52), s. 17, sub-s. 8.

By s. 17, sub-s. 8, of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, on the public examination of a debtor he "shall be examined upon oath, and it shall be his duty to answer all such questions as the Court may put or allow to be put to him. Such notes of the examination as the Court thinks proper shall be taken down in writing, and shall be read over to and signed by the debtor, and may thereafter be used in evidence against him":—

Held, that sub-s. 8 did not exclude any other mode of proving the debtor's admissions made at his public examination; so that, on the trial of an indictment against a bankrupt for misdemeanours under the Debtors Act, 1869, where notes of his public examination had been taken but not read over by or to or signed by him, parol evidence of the person who took the notes was admissible to prove such admissions. *REG. v. held out by any person in authority to make a statement. In this case the inducement was held out by the employer of the prisoner to his relatives, and it was inferred, but not proved, that it was communicated to the prisoner. No sufficient proof was given that the confession was free and voluntary:—

Held, that it was inadmissible in evidence. REG. v. THOMPSON C. C. R. [1893] 2 Q. B. 12

18. — Examination of defendant—Previous conviction—Prevention of Cruelty to Children Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 41)—Criminal Evidence Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 36), ss. 1, 6.

The appellant was charged before a court of summary jurisdiction with an offence under the Prevention of Cruelty to Children Act, 1894, and gave evidence on his own behalf as that Act permits. He was asked in cross-examination whether he had not been previously convicted of a similar offence, and answered that he had. The Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, s. 1, enables "every person charged with an offence" to give evidence on his own behalf; but (f) "a person charged and called as a witness in pursuance of this Act" shall not be asked or required to answer any question tending to shew that he has been convicted of any other offence than that with which he is charged. By s. 6 "this Act shall apply to all criminal proceedings, notwithstanding any enactment in force at the commencement of this Act."

The court of summary jurisdiction convicted the appellant:—

Held, that s. 1 of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, applied; that the evidence of the appellant's previous conviction was wrongly admitted, and, therefore, that the conviction was bad. CHARNOCK v. MERCHANT Div. Ct. [1900] W. N. 10; [1900] 1 Q. B. 474

27. — Athletic sports—Competitor in handicap—False statements as to name and performances—Attempt to obtain prize.

On the trial of an indictment for attempting to obtain property by false pretences the following facts were proved.

Entries for two handicaps were sent to the secretary of an athletic meeting, in the name of Sims, containing statements as to the recent performances of Sims, which were very moderate, and in consequence Sims was given long starts. The entries were not written by either Sims or the prisoner. At the meeting the prisoner, who was a good runner, personated Sims, who was absent, and came in first in both races. After the first race the handicapper asked the prisoner whether he was really Sims, whether the performance given in the entry form was really his, and whether he had never won a race, as stated in the entry. He answered these questions, falsely, in the affirmative:—

Held, that the attempt to obtain the prizes was not too remote from the pretence, that the case was rightly left to the jury, and the prisoner was properly convicted.

The deft. was indicted for obtaining a cheque by falsely pretending that another cheque, which he then gave to the prosecutor, was a good and valid order for the payment of money. The prosecutor deposed that he gave his cheque to the deft. on the faith of the deft.'s statement that a cheque, which the deft. then gave to the prosecutor, was a good cheque. The cheque given by the deft. was dishonoured. The deft. stated that when he gave the cheque he expected a payment which would have enabled him to meet it. The deft. was acquitted. He was then tried on a second indictment, charging him with obtaining from other persons three sums of money on three cheques which were dishonoured. To prove guilty knowledge the prosecutor in the first case was called and gave the same evidence as in the first case. Deft. was convicted, and the question as to the admissibility of the evidence was reserved:—

Held, by Lord Russell of Killowen C.J., Mathew, Grantham, Wright, Darling, and Channell JJ. (Bruce and Ridley JJ. dissenting), that the evidence which had been given on the first indictment, upon which the deft. had been tried and acquitted, was legally admissible upon the trial of the second indictment, for the purpose of proving guilty knowledge, and the conviction was right. *REG. v. 29. — Evidence—Letter written by defendant—Opinion of witness as to meaning.

Upon the trial of an indictment for obtaining goods by false pretences, a letter written by the deft. to the prosecutor respecting the goods was put into the hands of the prosecutor, who was asked what opinion he formed as to the position or occupation of the deft. upon the receipt of the letter:—

Held, that, although the question of the proper inference to be drawn from the letter was for the jury, the question was admissible to shew the inference in fact drawn from it by the prosecutor.

A deft. who has been convicted upon an indictment charging him with obtaining credit for goods by false pretences cannot be afterwards convicted upon a further indictment charging him with larceny of the same goods. REG. v. KING - - - C. C. R. [1897] 1 Q. B. 214

Evidence was admitted that subsequent to the transaction in question he had obtained eggs from other persons by means of similar advertisements:—

Held, that the evidence was properly admitted. The Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, does not confer on a prisoner the right of giving evidence on his own behalf before the grand jury, nor does it deprive the Court of the right to comment on the failure of the prisoner to give evidence at the trial. *REG. v. The debt, who carried on business in the county of Durham, obtained goods on credit in that county from a traveller of the prosecutors by means of false representations made by the defendant to the prosecutors in Glasgow, in which place they carried on business:—

Held, that the offence was properly triable in the county of Durham.

Per Hawkins, Wills and Bruce JJ., on the ground that the offence consisted in obtaining the goods, and not in making the false pretences whereby they might be obtained, and that therefore an English Court has jurisdiction to try a charge of obtaining goods by false pretences where the goods have been obtained within the jurisdiction of the Court dealing with the charge, although the false representations may have been made beyond the jurisdiction of the English Courts.

Held, that he could not be convicted of the offence of obtaining goods by false pretences, but that he was liable to be convicted of obtaining credit by means of fraud within the meaning of s. 13, sub-s. 1, of the Debtors Act, 1869. *REG. v. The prisoner was indicted under s. 38 of the Forgery Act, 1861, for obtaining certain money by means "of a certain forged instrument, to wit, a forged telegram." It appeared that the prisoner, who was a clerk in a post office, sent to a bookmaker a telegram offering a bet on a certain horse for a certain race. The telegram purported to have been handed in prior to the running of the race, and the bookmaker accepted the bet and ultimately paid the amount won on that understanding. In reality the telegram was despatched by the prisoner after he had received the news that the race had been won by the horse in question:—

35. — Animus furandi—Function of jury.

Upon a trial for larceny the question whether the goods were taken animo furandi is a question of fact for the jury.

A prisoner was indicted for stealing milk; at the conclusion of the case the jury announced that they were not agreed upon their verdict. They were then asked by the chairman whether they believed the evidence for the prosecution, and answered the question in the affirmative; the chairman then directed a verdict of guilty to be entered:—

Held, that the conviction was bad, there having been no finding by the jury that the prisoner had acted animo furandi. REG. v. FARNBOROUGH - C. C. R. [1895] 2 Q. B. 484

The drawer's name was not then filled in. Subsequently the name was filled in and the bills discounted. The prisoner, in breach of a written agreement, misappropriated the money:—

A servant of carriers removed a parcel in their dépôt to a different part of the premises and redirected it to the prisoners. The carrier's superintendent being informed of this, inspected the parcel, replaced it in the place selected by the thief, and sent it to the prisoners, who received it. The conviction was quashed on the ground that the carriers, having resumed possession before the receipt by the prisoners, the parcel had ceased to be stolen property. REG. v. VILLENSKY — C. C. Two prisoners, a man and a woman, were indicted for stealing property in a dwelling-house, and, in a second count, for receiving the same property. The woman was the prosecutor's wife, and the man had lodged in their house. After he left, the woman packed up the property in question, and sent it to the man, and afterwards left the house, and joined him, and the two lived together. The property was found in their possession. The jury found the woman guilty of stealing, and the man of receiving. The question was reserved, whether the man could be indicted for receiving the property:—

Held, that, as the stealing by a wife of her husband's property did not amount to a felony either at common law or by virtue of the Larceny Act, 1861, but was made a criminal offence by the Married Women's Property Act, 1882, ss. 12, 16, the man was not liable to be convicted under the Larceny Act, 1861, s. 91, of receiving property stolen by the woman from her husband, and the conviction was wrong.

Seem, that no such order could be made if the coin had been passed into circulation as current money, although it might be possible to identify it.

A thief stole from the respondent a five-pound gold piece (which by Royal proclamation had been made current coin of the realm) and changed it with the appellant, who was a dealer in curiosities, for five sovereigns:—

Held, that under the circumstances the coin had not been received by the appellant as current coin, and that an order might be made under s. 100 of the Larceny Act, 1861, ordering the appellant to restore it to the respondent. MOSS v. HANCOCK — Div. Ct. [1899] 2 Q. B. 111

A testator, who died in 1882, by his will dated in 1879, devised freehold land to his wife for life, and appointed trustees and executors of his will, but made no further or other devise. There was no heir-at-law of the testator forthcoming. The widow, as tenant for life, sold the land under the powers of the Settled Land Act, 1882, trustees for the purposes of the Act having previously been appointed. The purchase-money was paid to the trustees, who on the death of the widow converted the securities on which the money was invested and retained the proceeds, amounting to 1900*l*. The question was whether the Crown or the trustees were entitled to the money:—

Held, that the tenant for life being dead, the money was held by the trustees for the heir, if any, and there being no heir, the Crown was entitled to the money, in its existing state, and not as insisting upon the reconversion of it into land: Taylor v. Haygarth, (1844) 14 Sim. 8, distinguished. Judgment was given in the county court for the plt. for damages and an injunction, against which the defts. appealed. The Att.-Gen. then filed an information against the plt. praying for a declaration of the rights of the Crown in the matter:—

Held, that the Crown was entitled to an order for the transfer of the county court appeal to the revenue side of the Q. B. Div. and for a stay of proceedings therein until after the hearing of the information. LORD STANLEY OF ALDERLEY v. WILD & SON - C. A. [1899] W. N. 255: [1900] 1 Q. B. 256

9. — Prerogative of Crown—Practice—Transfer—Venue—Mode of trial—Selection of Court—Surface of highway.

Action brought in the Ch. Div. by the Att.-Gen. at the relation of the corporation of Sunderland, and by the corporation as co-plt., in effect to compel the defts. to restore the surface of a highway in the district of the corporation alleged to have been deprived of lateral support by the excavations of the defts. or their predecessors.

This was an application by the defts. for the transfer of the action to the Q. B. Div. to be tried at the Durham Assizes by a special jury. The main ground for the application was that it was desirable that there should be a view of the locus in quo. The application was resisted on the ground that it was an interference with the prerogative right of the Crown to select its own Court; and also on the merits.

Kekewich J. said that if he had to decide this question simply on the ground of convenience he would be in favour of transferring the action to the Q. B. Div. to be tried at the Durham Assizes; but, with regard to the mode of trial, when an action was transferred to another Division, he thought that the better practice was to leave it to the discretion of the judge of that Division to determine whether the action should be tried with or without a jury, and whether with a special or a common jury. Without presuming to interfere with the exercise of that discretion, having regard to the fact that this case would involve the examination of plans, he could see some advantages in having it tried by a judge without a jury. There remained the important question whether the Att.-Gen., suing not strictly ex officio but at the relation of others, had at the present time a prerogative right to select the tribunal in which the action should be tried; but in the view which he took it was unnecessary to decide that question. He had always attached great weight to the discretion of the plaintiff in determining in what Division an action should be brought, but that was not conclusive because there were cases in which that discretion might be exercised so as to interfere with the administration of justice. But the discretion of the Att.-Gen. differed from the discretion of an ordinary plt., because the Att.-Gen. did not give his fiat without a full consideration of the facts of the case, and he should not feel justified in interfering with the exercise of that discretion except in a very strong case. Application refused. ATT.-GEN. v. WILSON

10. — Prescription against Crown.

The Crown, not being named in s. 3 of the Prescription Act, 1832, is not bound by it; consequently no right of light can be obtained by virtue of that section over lands in possession of the Crown, whether held directly or through trustees. The general words in s. 2, in which the Crown is named, do not apply to an easement of light, which is exclusively governed by s. 3 and subsequent ancillary sections.

The plt., a coal merchant at Cardiff, having contracted with shipowners for the supply of coal to their steamers there, entered into a contract with the defts., who were colliery proprietors also carrying on business at Cardiff, for the supply to him of coal, which was expressly stated to be for shipment in those steamers. The defts. committed a breach of their contract in not supplying coal under it with reasonable despatch, in consequence of which the supply of coal to one of the steamers by the plt. was delayed and the steamer was detained. The shipowners thereupon made a claim of 150*l.* upon the plt. in respect of her detention, and subsequently brought an action against him to enforce their claim. The

plt. gave notice of the claim and action to the defts., who repudiated all liability, and refused to take up the defence, stating however that they considered the claim preposterous, and the amount of it excessive. The plt. thereupon defended the action, paying 20*l.* into court, and at the trial he succeeded in shewing that the sum so paid in was sufficient. He then brought an action against the defts. for breach of their contract. The judge at the trial found that the course taken by the plt. in defending the action against him was reasonable:—

Held, that the plt. was entitled under the rule in Hadley v. Baxendale, (1854) 9 Ex. 341, to recover from the defts. as damages the amount of the costs reasonably incurred by him in defending the action against him over and above the amount which he had received for costs as between party and party from the plt. in that action.

Though a debt has no absolute local existence, yet it is a well-settled rule that it possesses an attribute of locality. A simple contract debt is within the area of the local jurisdiction within which the debtor for the time being resides. The locality of a specialty debt is where the specialty is found at the time of the creditor's death. COMMRS. OF STAMPS v. HOPE

Action by plts. for an injunction to restrain deft., a rival omnibus proprietor, from running omnibuses painted and lettered in imitation of plts.' omnibuses. At the trial, after hearing the evidence of plts.' secretary and panel-painter or writer, Farwell J., with the consent of the parties, inspected plts.' and deft.'s rival omnibuses, and then stated his conclusion that the painting and lettering of deft.'s omnibus was calculated to deceive the casual passenger; whereupon the plts. did not offer any evidence of actual deception, and in the result an injunction was granted:—

Held, that the evidence called by the plts. was wholly insufficient to support the conclusion arrived at by the learned judge below. In an action for deceit such as this, a view by a judge under Order L., r. 4, and an impression derived by him from that view that the deft.'s article so closely resembled the plts.' as to be calculated to deceive, could not take the place of evidence of deceit. In the present case evidence of actual deception should have been called in support of the plts.' case. Appeal allowed. LONDON GENERAL OMNIBUS CO. v. LAYELL

9. — Interlocutory injunction—Exhibition of effigy—Discretion.

Before the Court will grant an interlocutory injunction restraining publication of an alleged libel, it must be satisfied that the case is so clear that a verdict for the deft. would be set aside. M. had been tried for murder in S. and a verdict of not proven was found. T. exhibited an effigy of M. in London, and L. did the same at Birmingham, in both cases in close proximity to "the Chamber of Horrors," and connected by reference with the scene of the murder:—

Held, by Div. Ct., that the exhibitions were clearly libellous, and that M. was entitled to an injunction till trial. Some evidence of M.'s consent was produced before C. A., which held that the case was not clear enough to entitle M. to an injunction:

Held, also (Lord Halsbury diss.), that an injunction should only be granted in cases where a verdict for the deft. would be set aside as unreasonable:

Held, also, per Lord Halsbury and Davey L.J., that the jurisdiction to issue injunctions in cases of libel is not confined to trade libels. MONSON v. TUSSAIDS, LD. MONSON v. L. TUSSAUD

13. — Practice—Misdirection—New trial—“Substantial wrong or miscarriage”—Action for libel—R. S. C., Order XXXIX., r. 6.

In an action for libel the judge misdirected the jury in favour of the plt. upon a material part of the libel and the jury gave a verdict for large damages. The C. A. thought that the nature of the libel was such that the jury would have been entitled to give, and would probably have given, the same verdict, even if the direction had been the other way, and refused the deft.'s application for a new trial on the ground that in their opinion no "substantial wrong or miscarriage" had been occasioned by the misdirection, within the meaning of Order XXXIX., r. 6:—

Held, reversing the decision of the C. A., that since the assessment of damages is the peculiar province of the jury in an action for libel, and since the jury had not had the deft.'s real case submitted to them and might in assessing the damages, have been influenced by the misdirection, there had been a substantial wrong or miscarriage within Order XXXIX., r. 6, and that there must be a new trial. BRAY v. in a newspaper pleaded by way of defence, in accordance with the Libel Act, 1843, s. 2, that the libel was published without actual malice, and without gross negligence, an apology, and payment into court of 5*l*. The jury at the trial found that the libel was published without actual malice, but not without gross negligence, and that the apology was sufficient, and they assessed the damages at 5*l*. :—

Held, that the defts., having made the payment into court as part of a defence under the Libel Act, 1843, s. 2, and having failed at the trial on that defence, were not entitled to avail themselves of the payment into court as being made under Order xxii., r. 1, and therefore the plt. was entitled to judgment. OXLEY v. Held, that an action for defamation founded on such a statement could not possibly be maintainable; and should, therefore, be dismissed as vexatious. CHATTERTON v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL C. A. [1895] 2 Q. B. 189

Held, that the publication was upon a privileged occasion, and that in the absence of express malice an action for libel would not lie against the head constable for defamatory statements in the grounds of objection. ANDREWS v. NOTT BOWER — C. A. [1895] 1 Q. B. 888

20. — Privileged occasion—Excess of privilege—Defamation—Malice.

The appellant acted for some time as agent to an insurance co. at his own offices. After some correspondence as to a change of terms upon which the parties could not agree, the co.'s secretary sent to persons who insured through the appellant a circular stating that the agency of the appellant at his offices had "been closed by the directors." The appellant having brought an action for libel against the co. the judge ruled that the statement was capable of a defamatory meaning but that the occasion was privileged. The jury found a verdict for the plt., that the statement was a libel, that it was untrue, and that the defts. had exceeded the privilege, but did not find actual malice :—

Held, that judgment must be for the co., on the grounds that the statement was not capable of a defamatory meaning, that it was true, that the occasion was privileged, that the finding of the jury as to excess of privilege was insufficient, and that there was no evidence of malice for the jury.

An action will lie in this country in respect of an act committed outside the jurisdiction if the act is wrongful both in this country and in the country where it was committed; but it is not necessary that the act should be the subject of civil proceedings in the foreign country.

The rule enunciated in Phillips v. Eyre, (1870) L. R. 6 Q. B. 1, and The M. Moxham, (1876) 1 P. D. 107, applied. MACHADO v. FONTES

30. — Trade libel—Advertisement—Rival traders.

An action will not lie for a false statement disparaging a trader's goods without special damage.

An injunction will not be granted where no action lies.

Quære, whether an action will lie in any case for disparaging a trader's goods merely by saying that some other trader's goods are better either generally or in some specified respect.

Held, by H. L. (E.), reversing C. A. and restoring Romer J., that W.'s conduct did not amount to a trade libel, but was merely a puff by a rival trader. MELLIN v. WHITE

H., a manufacturer of zinc paint, by his statement of claim alleged that the deft. W. was "falsely and maliciously" publishing in China and Japan copies of a report of experiments testing the zinc paints of H. and W., in which report the experimenter certified that W.'s paint had a slight advantage over H.'s, but that for all practical purposes they could be regarded as equal. The statement of claim went on to allege that the report, and each statement in it, was untrue, that H.'s paint was not equal or inferior, but superior to W.'s, and that H. had by reason of the premises been injured in his business and credit. W. applied to strike out the statement of claim as shewing no reasonable cause of action. The master made an order for striking out the statement of claim unless within a limited time H. amended it by alleging special damage with full particulars. Kennedy J. discharged this order:—

Held, on appeal, that a statement by a trader that his own goods are superior to those of another trader, even if untrue and the cause of loss to the other trader, gives no cause of action; that the allegation that the statement was made maliciously could not convert a statement prima facie lawful into one prima facie unlawful; that the allegation and proof of special damage would not improve the plt.'s case; and that judgment in the action must be entered for the deft. under Order xxv., r. 4. HUBBUCK & SONS, LD. v. Practice.*1. — Amendment—Particulars of objections—Terms.

(A) The rule of practice in patent actions that a deft. will be allowed to amend his particulars of objections on terms that the plt. may elect to discontinue his action, and the deft. bear the costs subsequent to the delivery of his first particulars, applied by North J. in an action to restrain infringement of copyright in registered designs. MORRIS, WILSON & Co. v. COVENTRY MACHINISTS Co. — North J. [1891] 3 Ch. 418

(b) But held by C. A. (commenting on this case) that the discretion to allow amendment of particulars in an action for infringement is not affected by any practice as to the terms on which such amendment will be allowed. WOOLLEY v. BROAD (No. 2) — C. A. [1892] 2 Q. B. 317

2. — Interrogatories—Penal action—Patents, &c., Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 57), s. 58.

An action to recover the 50*l.* allowed to the registered proprietors of the registered design for a contravention of s. 58 of the Patents, &c., Act, 1883, is a penal action, and therefore the plt. cannot interrogate the deft. SAUNDERS v. WIEL (No. 1) — C. A. [1892] 2 Q. B. 321

Referred to by Div. Ct. Derby Corporation v. Derbyshire County Council, [1896] 2 Q. B. 53, 58; [1897] A. C. 550.

Registration.*4. — Infringement of design—Pattern, shape, and configuration—Infringement—Patents, &c., Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 57), s. 60—Designs Rules, 1883, r. 9.

The plts. registered a design for an upright hexagonal metal stove, the sides of which had the representation in metal work of a church window, of a particular style of architecture, with tracery above and below, the design being registered as applicable to pattern, shape, and configuration. The defts. produced a hexagonal upright stove with a design of a church window, of a different style of architecture, with different tracery, but the general appearance of the stove was very similar to that of the plts.' stove:—

Held, reversing the decision of Kekewich J., [1895] 2 Ch. 593, that the defts.' stove was an obvious imitation of the plts.' stove and an infringement of his copyright.

Hecla Foundry Co. v. Walker, Hunter & Co., (1889) 14 App. Cas. 550, applied.

Where a design is registered as applicable to pattern, shape and configuration, the registration applies to the design as a whole, and it is protected although in one of those particulars it may not be novel. The owner of a registered design is not deprived of his right to protection merely because he places on the articles which he sells, besides the registered number of his design, other numbers which ought not to be there. Where a design is registered, and before the expiration of the term of protection the same design with an unimportant variation is registered, the original design may be copied as soon as the original term of protection expires, provided the variation is not copied. JOHN HARPER & Co. v. 5. — "New and original design"—Patents, &c., Act, 1883, s. 47.

It is not necessary for registration that the design should be novel in its subject-matter. It is sufficient if the application of the design to some article of manufacture be novel. A design in metal for handles of spoons representing a view of Westminster Abbey taken from a photograph, held to be a proper subject for registration. SAUNDERS v. WIEL (No. 2)

7. — Registration—Designs—Shape—Patents, &c., Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 57), ss. 47, 60—Patents, &c., Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 50).

C. registered a design for a "Lamp for electric lighting, applicable for its shape." It was, in fact, a design for a lamp-shade, consisting of a reflecting screen which had been commonly used for gas lights, and a ventilating top not materially differing from those which had been used before for gas, except that a chimney which was required for gas lights, but not for electric lights, was omitted:—

Held (reversing the decision of North J.), that what C. had registered was substantially the old form of lamp-shade with the omission of the chimney, which was useless when the shade was to be applied to electric lights, and that there was no such originality or novelty in the design as to make it a proper subject of registration. In re CLARKE'S DESIGN — C. books under s. 7 of the Bankers' Books Evidence Act, 1879, will as a general rule be made only where they are entries in an account which is in form or substance the account of one of the parties to the litigation. If the Court has jurisdiction under that section to order inspection of the banking account of a person not concerned with the litigation, it will exercise that jurisdiction with the greatest caution.

The plt. sued to rescind a contract for purchase by him of shares in a co. from the deft., on the ground that the deft. had induced him to enter into the contract by misrepresentations, one of which was that the co. had a certain large balance at its bankers at that time. Before the action was set down for trial the plt. applied to the Court under s. 7 of the Bankers' Books Evidence Act, 1879, for liberty to inspect and take copies of any accounts of the co. in their bankers' books. Kekewich J. made an order for inspection with the qualification, "but such inspection is to be limited to shewing the balance of the said co. in the books of the said bankers on the 2nd of Dec., 1895" :—

Held, that this order must be discharged.

Held, that the co. were an "other party" to the action within the meaning of Order XXXI., r. 12, and could be called on to make discovery of documents :—

Under s. 115 of the Companies Act, 1862, the judge has a discretion as to making an order for the production of documents, and the C. A. will not readily interfere with the exercise of his discretion, though it has jurisdiction to do so in a proper case.

The liquidator of a co., in order to obtain evidence in support of a misfeasance summons which he had issued against the directors of the co. and the auditors, applied under s. 115 for an order that the surveyor of taxes should attend for examination and produce some balance-sheets of the co. which had been delivered to him for the purpose of assessment of income tax. The surveyor objected to produce these documents, and the Board of Inland Revenue supported his objection by a resolution that their production would be "prejudicial and injurious to the public interests and service" :—

Held, by Wright J., [1899] W. N. 259, that an order for production ought not to be made under s. 115 :

Held, by C. A., that the exercise by the judge of his discretion ought not to be interfered with.

Per Romer L.J. : The question for decision was not necessarily the same as that which might arise, on the hearing of the misfeasance summons, with regard to a subpoena for the production of the documents in question.

Per Wright J. : It is not in every case essential that the principal officer of a Government department should himself attend in court to take such an objection to the production of documents in the possession of the department. In many cases the Court will be satisfied of the validity of the objection by other evidence—e.g., by the affidavit of a responsible officer. In re JOSEPH HARGREAVES, LD. - - C. A. [1900] W. By information in the Q. B. Div. (Queen's Remembrancer's side) against a corporation, the Att.-Gen. on behalf of the Crown claimed a declaration that the foreshore and bed of a river within certain limits belonged to the Crown. The defts. by their answer claimed to be owners of the same foreshore and bed, within the limits of a port and including the part claimed by the Crown, and to be also conservators of the river; and they set out a list of documents relating to the part claimed by the Crown, and alleged that they had no other relevant documents. The Crown did not except to the answer within the time limited by the Rules of Easter Term, 1886:—

Held, that the Crown had the same right of discovery against the corporation as a subject had against a subject in an ordinary action, and that the omission to except to the answer was no bar to such right:

And held further, that the Crown was entitled to discovery not only of the documents relating to the parts of the river claimed by the information, but also of anything which might tend to shew that the debts were not absolute owners of the foreshore and bed of the river to the extent which they claimed to be, including all their acts of ownership as conservators or otherwise, and the documents relating thereto.

Mere records of what takes place in chambers in the course of a hostile litigation in the presence of parties on both sides are not privileged from production. There is no distinction, for this purpose, between proceedings in chambers and proceedings in open court.

Correspondence which is protected on the ground of professional privilege is not rendered liable to discovery merely because it contains statements of fact as to what has taken place in chambers in the course of hostile litigation and in the presence of parties on both sides.

Where privilege was claimed for certain entries in bills of costs relating to litigation on the ground that they were copies of or extracts from notes or memoranda made by the solicitor pending the litigation for the purpose of enabling him to conduct the litigation on his client's behalf, and there was nothing in the affidavit by which privilege was claimed inconsistent with the entries being mere notes by the solicitor or his clerk of what had taken place in chambers in the presence of both parties, the Court exercised its discretion under Order XXXI., r. 19a, to open and inspect the sealed entries. *AINSWORTH v. 40. — Sealing up—Production of books—Common order—Liberty to seal up irrelevant entries—Form of order giving liberty to cover up without sealing.

A party to an action, who has obtained against his opponent the common order for production and inspection of books and documents, giving liberty to the opponent to seal up such parts of the books as do not relate to the matters in question, is not entitled to insist upon the actual sealing up of such parts of the books where so doing would interfere with the conduct of the opponent's business or be oppressive; and the covering up upon oath of the irrelevant parts of such books is a sufficient compliance with the order. GRAHAM v. In a proceeding to remove trade-marks from the register after all the evidence was concluded except the cross-examination of two witnesses,

Held, by Kekewich J., that an order should be made, but that in trade-mark cases the common order for discovery should not be used, and directed (1) that discovery should be given by the member of the respondent firm to be examined in Court; (2) that the discovery should be limited to documents relating to certain specified questions; (3) that notwithstanding the generality of the order it should not be obligatory to set forth a schedule or otherwise to mention all the labels or other documents constituting a class, but that it should suffice as regarded each class to mention a specimen or specimens fairly representative of the whole:—

Held, by C. A. (reversing the decision of Kekewich J.), that this order was oppressive at that stage of the proceedings, and must be discharged without prejudice to any order which the judge might make at the trial as to production of documents, the respondents undertaking to state the labels on which they relied, and to produce documents in court. In re WILLS' TRADE-MARKS - C. An action was brought by the Att.-Gen. at the relation of tramcar makers against a tramway co. to restrain it from using its capital in excess of its statutory powers to make tramway rolling-stock. General inspection of documents, including all the deft. co.'s books, was asked for:—

Held, that to make such an order would be to expose all the books of the deft. co. to the inspection of rivals in trade.

Order refused, but interrogatories allowed as to capital or moneys applied in making rolling-stock. ATT.-GEN. v. NORTH METROPOLITAN TRAMWAYS Co. - North J. [1892] 3 Ch. 70

45. — Admission of facts—Particulars.

Action to set aside an agreement on the ground of fraud.

The plt. applied for leave to deliver certain interrogatories mainly directed to obtaining admissions of facts alleged in the statement of claim.

Per Kekewich J.: The modern practice of exacting particulars and admission of facts not really in dispute, added to the large means of discovery by disclosure of documents and, where occasion requires it, inspection of premises or machinery, has rendered unnecessary and inconvenient interrogatories of the ancient type which were always open to objection. My practice is to decline applications for leave to administer interrogatories where the object is to demand admissions of fact alleged by the interrogating party, and denied or not admitted by the opponent, or to obtain information which may equally well be supplied by particulars. As regards admissions of fact, it is often urged, as it was here, that a litigant will hesitate to state on oath what he will without hesitation state in pleadings, and that there is difficulty in otherwise obtaining admission of facts, even though not really in dispute; and it is further urged that an admission by an affidavit in answer to interrogatories is useful in limiting the issues to be tried, and therefore in reducing the time occupied by the trial and the costs. I recognise the importance of this in the abstract; but practically I find that the interrogated party seldom makes such clean admissions as secure the advantages aimed at, and, failing that, little if anything is gained. As regards facts not really in dispute, I believe that the power of requiring admissions is not sufficiently used. If parties insist, as they generally do, on asking their opponents to admit as facts, dates and events about which there is room for doubt or argument, of course the endeavour to obtain admissions breaks down; but if the demand is limited to facts not really in dispute, that is, which can be admitted cleanly, or subject to some simple qualification, I find that it is generally acceded to, and the power which the Court has of throwing the costs on any one who has increased them by declining reasonable admissions is not forgotten. The right to particulars, though sometimes attempted to be abused, is of the greatest value, and often gives a litigant far more information than can be obtained by an answer to interrogatories, especially when the particulars are aided, as they generally are, by discovery of documents bearing on them. If the plt. had submitted some short interrogatories directed mainly to paragraphs 11 and 12 of the defence, I should have been disposed to allow them, and even now I am not prepared to say that the plt. cannot so modify the submitted interrogatories as to obtain leave to deliver in a shortened and altered form; but, as he does not propose to do this, and my objections go to a very large proportion of lengthy interrogatories, I think it better to refuse the application altogether, making the costs those of the defts. in any event.

The C. A. dismissed the appeal without prejudice to any further application that the plt. might make as to getting some of the interrogatories allowed by the judge in chambers. Defts.' costs of the appeal to be theirs in any event. CLARKE v. CLARKE right to interrogate R. The allowance by a judge of interrogatories does not amount to a decision that a party is bound to answer them, but leaves him at liberty to take any objection to answering which he might otherwise have taken. When a man is interrogated about acts done in the presence of persons employed by him, their knowledge is his knowledge, and he is therefore bound, in order to enable him to answer, to make inquiry of those persons, whether they be servants or agents, such as bankers and solicitors. This rule does not apply to an executor interrogated as to actions done by his testator twenty years before his death in presence of his bankers, &c., as an executor has no duty to inquire into the actions of his testator so long before his death. *ALLIOTT v. There is no hard and fast rule as to the class of cases in which particulars will be ordered to be delivered before discovery, or discovery to be given before particulars; the Court will exercise its discretion upon all the circumstances in each case.

Held, that A.'s being appointed to defend the suit on behalf of W.'s estate did not affect plt.'s

A deft. may be ordered to give particulars of documents referred to in his pleading, even though he has in an affidavit of documents effectually claimed for those documents privilege from production.

The right to particulars and the right to production are distinct and independent rights.

The plt. claimed a declaration that she was entitled (subject to incumbrances) in fee simple to an estate of which the deft. was in possession, and her title to which he denied.

By his defence the deft. said (paragraph 3) that the mortgagees had, in the valid exercise of their statutory power of sale, sold and conveyed the estate to him for valuable consideration, and that he purchased the same in good faith and without notice of any claim which the plt. might have had to the estate in priority to the title of the mortgagees, and the deft. relied on his title as such bona fide purchaser, and he said (paragraph 4) that he had remortgaged the property so purchased by him to the same mortgagees, and that the action could not be maintained in their absence.

The deft. made an affidavit of documents by which he sufficiently claimed protection from production for a bundle of documents which included the deeds by which the transactions referred to in paragraphs 3 and 4 of the defence had been carried out :—

Held, that, notwithstanding this claim to protection, the deft. must give particulars of those transactions—namely, the date of the sale and conveyance to him by the mortgagees, and what was the valuable consideration for the same; the date of the remortgage by him, and for how much it was given.

H. granted a lease to X. which was purchased by a co., but no assignment of it was taken. The co., however, entered into occupation of the demised premises, and gave H. bills of exchange for rent overdue, which bills were dishonoured. After the dishonour the co. passed an extraordinary resolution for voluntary winding-up, and then the landlord distrained for the rent on the co.'s chattels. These, however, were subject to a floating security contained in debentures covering all the co.'s assets, which were insufficient in value to satisfy the debenture debt. No receiver had been appointed. The liquidators having moved to restrain the landlord from proceeding with the distress:—

Held, (1) that, but for the existence of the debentures, and notwithstanding Ex parte Clemence, (1883) 23 Ch. D. 154 (which the Court declined to follow), the landlord would have been restrained, as he had a right to prove in the winding-up; but (2) that, as the assets were covered by the debentures and were insufficient to satisfy the debenture debt, the liquidator had no right to intervene, following on this point Ex parte Purcell, (1887) 34 Ch. D. 646, and that the non-appointment of a receiver made no difference. In re HARPUR'S CYCLE FITTINGS CO. Wright J. [1900] W. N. 187; [1900] 2 Ch. 731 demise, less the last three days of the term, and covenanted to pay the rent and perform the covenants in the lease. The deft., who was the owner of the demised property subject to C.'s term, recovered judgment against her in the Q. B. Div. for two quarters' rent, and sued out a writ of elegit under which the sheriff, after inquisition, delivered the property to him. After the inquisition the plts. appointed a receiver under their mortgage. The deft. recovered nothing under his judgment and took no further steps under the elegit, but afterwards distrained on the property for a further half-year's rent. In an action to restrain the distress:—

Held, (1) that, assuming the deft. was by virtue of the elegit an assignee of C.'s term, he only took it for a limited purpose, and could not be treated (on the principle of Moule v. Garrett, (1872) L. R. 7 Ex. 101) as surety for her and bound to indemnify her against the payment of the rent; (2) that the property was delivered to the deft., not in respect of the mere reversion expectant on the determination of the sub-demise, but to the extent of C.'s interest as mortgagor in possession; that that interest was determined by the appointment of the receiver, and consequently the title of the deft. as tenant by elegit had either been extinguished or suspended:

Held, therefore, that the deft. was entitled to distrain. JOHNS v. PINK

3. — Answer of husband—Cross-examination—Registrar—Discretion—Restitution of conjugal rights—Divorce Court Rules, 1865, rr. 86, 191—Practice—Proceedings in chambers—Evidence—Note of registrar or master.

Upon a petition before the registrar for alimony pendente lite, the wife is not entitled as a matter of course, under rules 86 and 191 of the Divorce Court Rules, 1865, to an order for cross-examination of her husband upon his answer, even though there may be a great discrepancy between the amount of his income as alleged by her in the petition and the amount as stated in his answer.

Whether the husband should be ordered to attend for cross-examination is a matter entirely for the discretion of the registrar, and the Court will not interfere with the exercise of his discretion unless satisfied that he has either proceeded on a wrong principle or has exercised his discretion wrongly.

Where there is no very great discrepancy between the two figures, it is not the practice of the Court to order the attendance of the husband for cross-examination.

Where a wife in her petition for alimony pendente lite put the income of her husband, a baronet, at 70,000*l.* a year, while the husband in his answer put it at 16,600*l.* only, supporting his statement by full and detailed particulars, the registrar, on the hearing of the petition, and the judge on appeal from him, refused an application by the wife for an order on the husband to attend for cross-examination, and allotted the wife 3000*l.* a year as alimony. On appeal to the C. A. :—

Held, that 3000*l.* a year was an adequate allowance for the wife pendente lite, and that as the registrar had properly exercised his discretion in allotting that sum, the Court would not interfere by ordering the husband to attend for cross-examination as to his means.

On an appeal from an order of a registrar or master the Court will only recognise a note of the registrar or master as evidence of what took place before him, an affidavit by either party being inadmissible. SYKES v. SYKES

Where, on a petition for permanent maintenance by a wife, who had obtained a divorce from her husband on the ground of adultery and desertion, it appeared that the husband had not been heard of for several years, and that there was a sum of 320*l.* standing to his credit in an action in the Chanc. Div., the Court ordered the wife's costs to be paid out of the fund and the balance to be paid to her for her and her children's maintenance.

14. — Respondent's income—Partnership profits—Order under Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857, or the Act of 1856.

Where the husband's income under certain circumstances is liable to be greatly reduced, the inclination of the Court will be to make an order for an annual sum under the Act of 1866 rather than under that of 1867.

A wife obtained a decree nisi for dissolution. The husband was partner in a firm; by the partnership deed he was only allowed to draw a limited amount of the profits without leave of his partner:—

Held, by H. L. (E.), revers. C. A. and restoring Jeune P., that the husband must be ordered (under the Act of 1866) to secure permanent maintenance for the wife on the basis of one-third of his average profits, and not on the basis of one-third of the amount he was allowed to draw. *HANBURY v. 15. — Respondent's income—Voluntary allowance to husband—Practice.

Where in a suit for dissolution of marriage or for judicial separation there has been a full inquiry into the husband's means upon an application for alimony pendente lite, the amount of permanent alimony or permanent maintenance to be allotted to the wife will be determined upon the evidence then given, without a repetition of such inquiry upon the petition for permanent alimony or maintenance.

For the purpose of determining the amount of permanent alimony or maintenance, recourse may be had to income of which the husband has no legal power to enforce the payment.

A husband, who was largely indebted to his brother, was in receipt of a voluntary allowance from him so long as he should remain out of the country:—

Held, that the voluntary allowance was properly included in the husband's income for the purpose of fixing the amount of permanent maintenance. BONSOR v. BONSOR

They accordingly produced a ledger for the last year, but refused to allow it to be inspected:—

Held, that the registrar had power under rule 191 to require an inspection of the ledger, and a writ of attachment issued to enforce compliance with his order. CAREW v. CAREW

18. — Separation deed—Allowance for wife's maintenance—Subsequent alteration of circumstances—Dissolution of marriage—Judicial separation—Alimony—Maintenance and education of children—Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. 85), ss. 32, 35—Matrimonial Causes Act, 1859 (22 & 23 Vict. c. 61), ss. 4, 5—Matrimonial Causes Act, 1866 (29 & 30 Vict. c. 32), s. 1.

Notwithstanding that by an agreement for separation, made between a husband and wife on withdrawal of the wife's petition for divorce, the wife has agreed to accept from the husband a specified sum for maintenance, to be paid in any event whether the marriage should thereafter be dissolved or not, the Court has power under the Divorce Acts, after a decree for dissolution on a fresh petition by the wife based on misconduct of the husband since the agreement, to disregard the agreement and order permanent alimony to be paid to her at a rate exceeding the amount specified in the agreement, if the husband's means on inquiry permit: at all events, if the agreement does not contain an express covenant by the wife not to sue for increased alimony in the event of a divorce grounded on future misconduct of the husband. But whether such a covenant is valid, quære.

Again, when by a separation deed the wife has agreed to accept a specified sum for maintenance, the deed to become void if the marriage is afterwards "dissolved" for any future misconduct by either party, the Court has a similar power to order the payment of permanent alimony to the wife after a decree for judicial separation by reason of the husband's misconduct since the execution of the deed, if there has been such an alteration of circumstances as renders it unjust that the wife should be bound by the deed.

The statutory power of the Court in relation to the maintenance and education of the children after a decree for judicial separation or for dissolution of marriage is not affected by any previous agreement between the parents.

admitted, but the jury found that the petitioner had been guilty of "wilful neglect or misconduct conducing to the adultery" within the meaning of s. 31 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857.

It appeared that the parties were domestic servants. The respondent had had an illegitimate child by the petitioner before the marriage. During their married life, between 1883 and 1894, the petitioner was abroad for long periods with his master; and the respondent meanwhile kept a lodging-house, the petitioner remitting to her regularly an adequate weekly allowance. The parties lived unhappily owing to the enforced separation. In 1894 a child was born, the result, as the respondent admitted, of the adultery imputed to her in the petition.

The Court, notwithstanding the verdict of the jury, pronounced a decree nisi for the dissolution of the marriage, but directed that it should not be made absolute until the petitioner had secured to the respondent, by a proper deed, the annual sum of 20*l.*, payable in equal monthly instalments, commencing from the date of the decree nisi, during their joint lives, dum sola et casta vixerit. PARRY v. The petitioner was not aware of the adultery with B. when he condoned that with A. Jeune P. dismissed A. from the suit and gave him his costs, and granted a decree nisi on the adultery with B.:

Held, by C. A., (1) that condonation is not avoided by previous undisclosed adultery with another; (2) that condonation is a bar to a judgment for damages, and (3) that the petitioner may be ordered to pay the co-respondent's costs. BERNSTEIN v. BERNSTEIN (No. 2)

37. — Dispensing with co-respondent—Practice—Husband's petition—Confession by wife—Name of alleged adulterer.

In a petition by the husband for dissolution of marriage, it was alleged (par. 3) that about the end of 1896 the respondent committed adultery with a man whose name was unknown to the petitioner, and that in consequence thereof she, on Aug. 14, 1897, gave birth to a child of which the petitioner was not the father.

In par. 5 it was further alleged that from Sept. 1897, until the date of the petition (Oct. 25, 1900), the respondent frequently committed adultery with men unknown; and that (par. 5) between June 19, 1900, and Aug. 11, 1900, at a certain address the respondent committed adultery with men unknown.

Upon application to the Court to proceed without citing any person as co-respondent, it appeared that diligent attempts had been made to trace a man, whose name was given by the respondent at the time she was served with the citation and copy petition as "Alfred Lamb," whom she said resided at St. Michael's, in the city of Liverpool, and whom she stated to have been employed by a well-known shipping firm as a foreman cattleman on one of that firm's steamers. The respondent at the same time stated that she did not know this man's address more definitely, but that he resided, when at home, with his mother.

From the affidavits filed in support of the motion, it appeared that, upon inquiries being made of the firm named by the respondent, they stated that no cattleman were in fact employed by them, but were engaged by other persons interested in the conveyance of the cattle. Further inquiries had failed to trace any such person.

Jeune P. ordered the petition (par. 3) to be amended by alleging that at about the end of 1896 the respondent "committed adultery with a man whose name is believed to be Alfred Lamb, in consequence whereof she on Aug. 14, 1897, gave birth to a child of which your petitioner was not the father, but of which it is believed that the man whose name is believed to be Alfred Lamb is the father." The amended petition need not be re-served on the respondent under the circumstances; but the petitioner must cite "Alfred Lamb" by advertisements to be settled in the registry. *THOMPSON v. The discretion given to the judge, by s. 28 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857, to allow a petition for a divorce to proceed, on special grounds, without making any co-respondent, is to be exercised with regard to the principles laid down in or to be gathered from the Act and the Rules, and to the circumstances of each particular case, and cannot be fettered by any general rule of practice.

The rule laid down in Jones v. Jones, [1896] P. 165, at p. 170, disapproved as a rule of general application.

A husband, who had been absent from England for more than two years, ascertained, when he returned home, that his wife had recently given birth to a child, of which he was not the father. She registered the birth of the child, giving her own name as the mother, but without giving the name of any father. She took out a bastardy summons against H., whom she alleged to be the father of the child, but, at the time appointed for its hearing, she did not appear, and the summons was struck out. The husband did not believe that H. was the father of the child, and his solicitor, after making careful inquiry, was unable to obtain any evidence against H. H. was prepared to swear that he had never had intercourse with the wife. The husband presented a divorce petition, in which he alleged that the wife had committed adultery with a man whose name was unknown to him:—

Held, that the husband should be allowed to proceed with the petition without naming any co-respondent.

69. — Husband's adultery—Refusal to lead chaste life—Wife unable to continue cohabitation.

a cessation of cohabitation and an intention on the part of the accused party to desert the other.

It is not always, or necessarily, the guilty party who leaves the matrimonial home: the party who intends to bring the cohabitation to an end, and whose conduct in reality causes its termination, commits the act of desertion.

There is no substantial difference between the case of a husband who intends to put an end to a state of cohabitation and does so by leaving his wife, and that of a husband who, with the like intent, obliges his wife to separate from him.

In a case where a husband is carrying on an adulterous intercourse with another woman or other women, although he does not bring the adulteress into the matrimonial home and commit adultery with her there, the wife may express her willingness to remain with him on condition that he give up the connection complained of; and, if the husband refuse to do so, and the wife withdraw from cohabitation in consequence of the refusal, the husband is guilty of desertion, as he must be taken to intend the consequences of his action. The situation then produced is just the same as if the guilty husband left his wife. At the end of two years the statutory offence of desertion is complete, and the wife is entitled to relief on that ground. SICKERT v. SICKERT

Wife's petition for dissolution of marriage on the grounds of cruelty and adultery.

At the hearing the cruelty was proved by the petitioner and duly corroborated; but, in the absence on active service of a military doctor who was said to have attended the respondent while stationed in London in Jan. and Feb., 1899, counsel for the petitioner tendered, as the only available evidence of the adultery alleged in the petition, the evidence of a staff-sergeant who knew the respondent very well as the husband of petitioner, and who produced from the regimental headquarters an army form (No. B. 178), from which it appeared that W. G. Gleen, who was a non-commissioned officer, was admitted into the C Block Station Hospital on Jan. 20, 1899, suffering from gonorrhoea, and that he remained in hospital for twenty-nine days.

On behalf of the petitioner, it was submitted that this "medical history sheet" was evidence of the facts therein stated, and counsel referred to the Regulations for Army Medical Services, 1897, rr. 200, 208, and 443, and cited *Wallace v. By the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. 85), s. 22, "In all suits and proceedings, other than proceedings to dissolve any marriage, the said Court shall proceed and act and give relief on principles and rules which, in the opinion of the said Court, shall be as nearly as may be conformable to the principles and rules on which the Ecclesiastical Courts have hitherto acted and given relief."

In a proceeding for a divorce a mensa et thoro on the ground of cruelty, where the parties resided within its jurisdiction at the commencement of the suit, an Ecclesiastical Court would have granted relief irrespective of their domicil, and it would have made no difference that the necessity for protection arose in consequence of cruelty committed outside its jurisdiction, where the apprehension of further acts of cruelty remained.

The petitioner for a judicial separation had been, before her marriage, a domiciled Englishwoman. Her husband's domicil was in Australia, where, after her marriage, she resided with him. Owing to cruelty committed by him while they were travelling in Italy, she sought the protection of her parents in England, and established a home for herself and her children in this country. He followed her here and required her to return to him with the children, which she was afraid to do owing to her apprehension of a repetition of the cruelty. At the commencement of the suit both parties were living within the jurisdiction:—

93. — Nullity of marriage—Duress.

On the trial of a petition for a declaration of nullity of marriage, on the ground of duress, the following facts appeared. The petitioner, a girl of seventeen, went through the ceremony of marriage with the respondent in a church on June 5, 1889. He was a friend of her brother's. She had met him only a few times, and he had never spoken to her of marriage, or professed affection for her. She stated that on the day in question her mother told her they were going for a drive, and that they drove to the church, where they found the respondent: that she thought she was being betrothed to him, and would not have submitted even to that if she had not been so much under her mother's influence, that she did what she was told; that, on leaving the church, she threw away the ring; that she had never seen the respondent since; and that none of her family then knew what had happened except her mother, who died in 1890. A few days before, the respondent had obtained a marriage licence, falsely stating in his affidavit that the petitioner's father consented to the marriage. On June 5 he sailed for South Africa with the petitioner's brother, and on their arrival told him of the marriage. Her brother returned in 1889, but did not mention the matter to any member of his family except his mother, who told him to say nothing about it. In 1893 the petitioner went through the ceremony of marriage with another man. In the same year the respondent wrote to her father from South Africa, claiming her as his wife.

The Court, upon consideration of the evidence, found that the petitioner had never consented to marry the respondent, but had gone through the ceremony as one of betrothal, and in doing so had been to such an extent under the influence of her mother and the respondent that she was not a free agent, and granted a decree nisi of nullity. *FORD v. 94. — Impotence—Delay—Sincerity.

A wife, seven years after her marriage, took proceedings for nullity on the ground that (as the fact was) the marriage had not been consummated owing to the impotence of her husband. It appeared that the impossibility of sexual intercourse had caused unhappy relations between the petitioner and the respondent, in consequence of which they had separated, but that since the filing of the petition she had offered to return to him:—

Held, that the conduct of the petitioner had not been such as to constitute an estoppel by reason of want of sincerity, and that she was entitled to a decree of nullity. L. (OTHERWISE B.) v. B.

the 5th section of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1859, and extended by the 3rd section of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1878, to inquire into the existence of ante-nuptial and post-nuptial settlements, and to make orders varying the same, is not limited to any particular class of nullity cases, but includes all cases in which a decree of nullity has been pronounced, upon whatsoever ground.

“Property settled,” within the meaning of the two sections, refers only to that particular property the benefit of which is, by the marriage settlement, conferred in the ordinary way on the parties or their children, and does not extend to or include the whole estate of the respondent, out of which the “property settled” may have been carved and which may be all mentioned in the schedules appended to the marriage settlement.

The Court has no power to bring into the settlement a fund or estate which is not to come into settlement until a certain event shall happen, before that event happens in fact. DORMER v. WARD G. Barnes J. [1900] P. 130; reversed by C. A. [1901] P. 20

Upon a husband's petition for dissolution of marriage claiming damages, it appeared that the husband and wife separated after a cohabitation of only a few months on account of the wife's overbearing and insulting conduct and language towards her husband, culminating in actual violence to him on more than one occasion.

It was proved, and not denied, that, rather more than a year after the separation, the co-respondent, who had been acting as her solicitor, committed adultery with the respondent, and that this improper intimacy continued for about twelve months:—

Held, that, notwithstanding the separation and the fact that it had been caused by the violent conduct of the respondent towards the petitioner, the latter was entitled to some damages; that the fact of the co-respondent's frequent adultery having rendered reconciliation absolutely out of the question was a material element for consideration in fixing damages; and, that the jury were entitled to consider also, and to decide as a matter to be inferred from all the circumstances of the case, whether the respondent and co-respondent had not misconducted themselves together at a time anterior to the date proved by affirmative evidence and admitted and alleged by the co-respondent as the first date when adultery took place between himself and the respondent.

The discretion conferred upon judges of the Divorce Court by s. 31 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857, is not an absolute or arbitrary, but a judicial discretion, and is intended to be exercised in conformity with the former practice of the House of Lords. Cruelty on the part of a petitioner, in order to bar a claim for a divorce, must either have led to the adultery of the respondent, or be entirely wanton and unprovoked in its character.

In considering what terms should be imposed upon a petitioner who has been found guilty of cruelty towards the respondent, the Court takes into consideration all the facts of the particular case before it, and considers the interests not merely of the parties, but of the child or children (if any) of the marriage.

Where the means of the petitioner (husband) were very small and uncertain, and the respondent's parents, whose character and goodwill were unquestioned, had offered to look after the only child of the marriage, the Court, in granting a decree, assented to an arrangement which had been arrived at between the parties subsequently to the verdict, whereby the formal custody of the child was given to the respondent and no allowance was ordered against the petitioner. *PRYOR v. The circumstances to be considered by the Court in exercising its discretion under s. 31 of the Divorce and Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857, to grant a divorce to a wife who has been guilty of adultery, include the case of the husband causing or conducing to her adultery by his own wilful neglect or misconduct.

great cruelty during cohabitation, finally deserted her and went to live with another woman. More than seven years after the desertion the wife, not knowing whether her husband was alive, and without making inquiry, commenced to live with another man; the cohabitation continued long after the time when it came to the wife's knowledge that her husband was alive. Subsequently, and after the wife had ceased to live in adultery, her husband was convicted under the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885, of an aggravated offence on a young girl not amounting to rape:—

Held, that under the circumstances the wife's adultery did not disentitle her to a decree of dissolution of marriage. SYMONS v. SYMONS

Great caution ought to be observed in allowing a petition for divorce to proceed in the English Divorce Court where there is ground for supposing that the parties are domiciled out of the jurisdiction.

It is not necessary for the first reading of an Irish divorce bill that a definitive sentence of divorce à mensâ et thoro should have been pronounced in the Irish Courts.

Where in the proceedings upon an Irish divorce bill it appears that no action for criminal conversation has been brought against a co-respondent who was not domiciled and could not be served in Ireland, the House of Lords may allow the bill for divorce to be received.

Where there is no means of enforcing the warrant of the House of Lords to take evidence in parts of India, the evidence as taken and used in a previous suit in the English Court of Divorce may be allowed to be used quantum valeat.

By virtue of the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1890, which provides that from and after Oct. 20, 1890, every motion for a new trial, in any cause or matter in the High Court which has been tried with a jury, shall be heard and determined by the C. A., the practice with regard to a new trial of a divorce cause is regulated (not by the practice under the Matrimonial Causes Acts but) by the practice of the C. A., and consequently rule 7 of Order LXIV. of R. S. C. applies, and empowers the Court to grant an enlargement of the time within which to move for a new trial of the cause, and as a condition of so doing to impose terms on the party who makes the application.

In 1892 a wife petitioned for a judicial separation on the ground of her husband's adultery. The husband by his answer denied the adultery, and also alleged that, at the time of his marriage with the petitioner, she had a husband living. At the trial in Jan., 1895, the jury found on the evidence that the husband had committed adultery, and that at the time of the marriage the first husband was dead. A decree for judicial separation was made. In Sept., 1895, the first husband (who had not been heard of since 1858) returned to England. In Oct., 1895, the second husband presented a petition for declaration of nullity of marriage. The wife pleaded the verdict and decree in the former suit as an estoppel. At the trial G. Barnes J. was satisfied of the identity of the man who had returned; but held that he could not make a decree of nullity while the verdict and decree in the first suit stood unimpeached. The second husband (with the leave of the C. A.) moved in the first suit for an enlargement of the time within which to apply for a new trial:—

Held, that the application ought to be granted, but only on the terms of the applicant undertaking to secure the payment to the respondent during their joint lives of an allowance for her maintenance, the amount of which was fixed by the Court. WILKINS v. WILKINS

Held, that this letter was a sufficient notice, within rule 44 of the Divorce Court Rules, of the cause having been set down for trial.

The respondent's solicitor, in the belief that a more formal notice ought to be given, did not watch the cause list, and the cause came on for trial without his knowledge, and a decree for a divorce was made in the absence of the respondent. She applied for a new trial on the ground of surprise.

In a suit for restitution of conjugal rights brought by a second wife, it appeared that differences had arisen between her and her husband, due to her inability to agree with her stepchildren, his daughters by the former marriage, and that she had in consequence left her home, and her husband had refused to receive her back:—

Held, on consideration of the evidence, that the wife had done nothing to disentitle her to maintain a suit for desertion without reasonable cause, within the meaning of s. 5 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1884, as interpreted by the *C. Where, therefore, a petitioner dies after obtaining a decree absolute for dissolution of the marriage and after presenting a petition for variation of the marriage settlement, and there are no children of the marriage, the petition for variation abates by the death of the petitioner, and the proceedings cannot be continued by his personal representatives for the benefit of his estate.

On a decree nisi for divorce being made on the petition of the husband, terms were arranged that the petitioner should secure the respondent 120*l.* a year for life, and that she should consent to their marriage settlement being annulled:—

The principle of the decisions on the section is that, where the breaking up of the family life has been caused by the fault of the respondent, the Court ought to place the petitioner and the children in a position as nearly as circumstances will permit the same as if the family life had not been broken up.

Where, therefore, a wife, whose marriage had been dissolved on the ground of her adultery, had under her marriage settlement "power of appointment in her husband's favour, if he should survive her, over a fund, which, apart from the exercise of the power, would upon her death have vested in the children of the marriage, and this was the husband's only interest in his wife's property under the settlement, the Court held that, as it was reasonable to suppose that, if the family life had continued, she would have exercised the power in his favour, the income should, after her death, be paid to him during his lifetime.

By a post-nuptial settlement executed in 1877, and acknowledged by the wife under the Fines and Recoveries Act, property of the wife was settled upon trusts for the benefit of the husband and wife and the issue of the marriage; and the husband and wife covenanted for the settlement of the wife's after-acquired property. In Nov. 1893, the marriage was dissolved on the ground of the adultery of the wife. In Dec. 1893, the husband presented a petition for variation of the settlement, setting out the funds subject to the trusts thereof; and the wife by her answer admitted the same to be correct. On April 24, 1894, a consent order was made on the petition varying the settlement by directing payment of certain annual sums to the husband and the only child of the marriage. The wife, having married the co-respondent, brought an action for a declaration that certain property which upon the petition for variation had been assumed by all parties to be bound by the settlement was not so bound. The Court being of opinion that the property in question was not included in the settlement, and that the terms of the order for variation had been agreed to by the parties under a common mistake, granted relief to the plaintiff, but upon the terms that any application to the Divorce Court, under s. 45 of the Act 20 & 21 Vict. c. 85, for a further settlement upon the husband and child of the marriage, should be dealt with in all respects as if it had been made before April 24, 1894, and was being considered by the Court on that day.

Real estate which devolved upon the wife upon the intestacy of her father, who died in 1893, was held not to be at the date of the settlement an "estate" in land within the meaning of s. 77 of the Fines and Recoveries Act; and interests in personal estate, to which she became entitled under the will of a testator who was living at the date of the settlement, were held not to be "future interests" of which she could dispose under the provisions of Malins' Act.

The "future interests" contemplated by the Act are interests to which, at the date of the disposing deed, the married woman has some existing title at law or in equity. ALLCARD v. WALKER

By s. 101 of the West India Docks Act, 1831, a penalty is imposed on every master or person in charge of any ship, lighter, &c., who places or suffers it to remain in the river Thames within 200 yards of any of the dock entrances, unless for the purpose of coming into or going out of the docks; and every master, &c., of any ship, barge, &c., so placed within such distance who does not immediately remove it from within such distance “on being thereunto required by the dock-master or dock-masters” is made liable to a fine for every hour that “such obstruction shall remain after such requisition made.”

Notices requiring the removal of vessels from within the prohibited distance were signed beforehand in blank by the dock-master, and, upon a vessel mooring within that distance, the date and the name of the vessel were filled up by the lockman, who, if the person in charge refused to move, served him with the notice without consulting the dock-master as to the removal of that particular vessel:—

Held, that the notice, although only signed in blank by the dock-master and filled in by his subordinate, was a good requisition by the dock-master:

Held, further, that in order to constitute an offence under the section there need not be an actual or imminent obstruction to any particular ship or to the traffic generally, a vessel moored within the prohibited distance constituting (if not removed upon notice) an obstruction within the meaning of the section. *DUCKHAM v. An old lady, shortly before her death and in anticipation thereof, expressed a desire to give all her property to the deft. upon certain conditions, and directed him to record her wishes in writing, which he did. The document purported to give to the defendant all the property she might have at her death, subject to his settling up her affairs, seeing to her burial, and making certain specified payments to named charities. She then delivered to the deft. a deposit note and share certificate, saying, "Take charge of them. If I get better you will bring them back; if not, you will know what to do with them." She subsequently told him where to find some gold and notes, but gave him no further directions as to them:—

Held, that, looking at the transaction as a whole, the intention of the deceased was that the specific articles should be dealt with simply as part of the property which she meant to dispose of as from her death, and over which she meant to reserve dominion during her life; that consequently there was no valid donatio mortis causâ. *In re DASH. An easement, exercised for the benefit of the

The corporation of Godmanchester as owners of certain lands had for more than 200 years opened as of right the gates of certain sluices or locks belonging to the appellant upon the River Ouse in time of flood or likelihood of flood in order to prevent damage to those lands:—

Held, that the easement was good and was none the worse because the exercise of it also benefited lands belonging to other persons; and that the corporation could maintain their right either by s. 2 of the Prescription Act, 1832, or by the fiction of a lost grant.

5. — Tramway agreement—Personal or real right—Removal of tramway.

Where a servitude, such as a right of way for a tramway, is claimed as having been granted by an instrument in writing subscribed by the proprietor of the land burdened, the fact that the dominant tenement has not been acquired at the date of the instrument cannot, after it has been actually acquired, prevent the servitude from becoming a legal accessory to the dominant tenement, provided the servitude was so used as to give reasonable notice of the burden to any person in whom the property of the land might subsequently become vested. And although the instrument granting the privilege was in terms which might appropriately be employed in the constitution of a personal obligation only, that is not conclusive against the constitution of a proper burden upon the land, if it be matter of reasonable inference from the terms of the document, or the circumstances of the case, that the constitution of a real servitude was what the parties contemplated.

An agreement between the proprietor of the estate of W., the feuars of part of that estate, and a ry. co., provided for the use and construction by the ry. co. of a tramway through the lands of W., including the lands of the feuars:—

Held (Lord Morris dissenting), reversing Ct. of Sess., (1897) 24 R. 1148, that the privilege of working the tramway as long as it continued was intended to bind, and did bind, all singular successors of the feuars in their lands. NORTH BRITISH RY. CO. v. PARK YARD CO. -

8. — Water—Implied grant of supply of—Equitable mortgagor.

A. was the owner of two freehold and adjoining properties, Broadhaven House and Swanswell. In and prior to June, 1897, Broadhaven House was supplied with water from a well on Swanswell through a line of pipes. In Jan., 1895, A. created an equitable mortgage in favour of a bank by a deposit of the deeds of Swanswell with an agreement to execute a legal mortgage. In April, 1895, A. conveyed Broadhaven House for value to the plt., the conveyance being "with the appurtenances." In July, 1895, A. executed a legal mortgage of Swanswell to the bank. In Sept., 1897, the bank, in exercise of their power of sale, sold and conveyed Swanswell to the deft., who at the time was aware of the existence of the line of pipes.

The deft. had given the plt. notice to remove the pipes; the plt. brought this action for an injunction to restrain the deft. from disturbing them:—

Held, that the principle of Beddington v. Atlee, (1887) 35 Ch. D. 317, applied, and that, as the equitable mortgage was prior to the conveyance of Broadhaven House to the plt., there was no implied grant of the supply of water from Swanswell, and, consequently, that the action could not be maintained. *DAVIES v. 1. — Description—“Real estate in the county of L.”—Surrounding circumstances—Will—Intention.

An advowson in gross, though not aptly described as a hereditament or real estate “situate” or “in” a particular county or place, may pass under a devise of “all other my real estate in the county of L.” where the surrounding circumstances or the presumed intention of the testator admit of such a construction.

ECCELESIASTICAL LAW (Advowson)—contd.

Crompton v. Jarratt, (1885) 30 Ch. D. 298, examined and distinguished.

A testator gave one of his sons the option of acquiring a family estate, “and all other my real estate in the county of L.” at a certain price, as part of his share under the will, and, in the event of his exercising such option, devised to him the said estates absolutely. The testator owned two advowsons, both situate in the county of Lincoln, and close to the estate which he had purchased at the time of buying the said estate. The son having exercised his option to take the estate at the price named by the testator, the question was now raised whether the advowsons, being in gross, passed under the words “other real estate in the county of L.”:—

Held, under the circumstances, that these words were sufficient to pass the advowsons to the son. In re HODGSON. TAYLOR v. HODGSON

A piece of land having been in 1846, under the authority of the Church Building Acts then in force, voluntarily granted in fee to the Church Building Comrs. for ecclesiastical purposes, a church was built thereon. The whole of the land was inclosed, and in 1849 the church was consecrated. So much of the land as was not actually occupied by the church was not consecrated. In 1891 the London County Council, under their statutory powers, purchased part of the unconsecrated inclosure, and the purchase-money was paid into court under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845. The purchased land was afterwards conveyed by the vicar to the county council. Upon a summons by the vicar for payment out:—

Held, that, notwithstanding the consecration, the Ecclesiastical Commrs. (as the successors of the Church Building Commrs.) had power, under s. 19 of the Church Building Act, 1840, with the consent of the original donor of the land, to direct that the purchase-money should be applied to the vicar for payment out:—

Held, also, that the payment of part of the principal money remaining due upon a mortgage to the Governors of Queen Anne's Bounty of the glebe, profits, and emoluments of the vicarage, made by a former vicar to secure the repayment of a loan made to him by the governors for the purchase of a vicarage-house, was an ecclesiastical purpose within the meaning of s. 19. Ex parte LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL. Ex parte VICAR OF CHRIST CHURCH, EAST GREENWICH

9. — Criminal suit against churchwarden—Jurisdiction—Duty of churchwarden with respect to collections at morning and evening service—Alms dish—Usage of church—Control of churchwardens over moneys collected for church expenses.

By the accustomed practice of a parish church, when collections from the congregations were made either at the morning or the evening service on Sundays, the collecting bags were brought after the collection up to the chancel steps and placed in the alms dish there held by the minister for the purpose of receiving the same and placing them on the Communion Table. One of the churchwardens of the parish was charged in a criminal suit with having committed offences against ecclesiastical law in that during the time he held office he had at the morning service on one Sunday and the evening service on another Sunday vexatiously refused to place the bag in which he had collected money from the congregation in the alms dish in accordance with the above practice. At the hearing these charges were sufficiently proved:—

Held, that, in so deviating from the practice in use in the matter, the respondent had offended against the laws ecclesiastical, and that he ought to follow such practice for the future unless otherwise ordered by the bishop.

Where collections for ordinary church expenses are made at the morning and evening services in parish churches, the churchwardens are the proper custodians of the moneys collected, and such moneys should be placed by them at a bank to an account in their joint names.

Semble: For unreasonably refusing to sign a joint cheque on such account for the payment of proper church expenses a churchwarden is liable to be articulated in a criminal suit in the Ecclesiastical Court. HOWELL v. HOLDROYD

10. — Criminal suit against churchwardens—Jurisdiction—Duty of churchwardens to obtain faculty before removing human remains—Burial Act, 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. 81), s. 23—Faculty to carry out directions in Order in Council for preventing vaults becoming dangerous to public health.

The churchwardens of a parish church wholly closed for burials, who, purporting to act under the provisions of an Order in Council under the 23rd section of the Burials Act, 1857, directing the removal and reinterment elsewhere of human remains underneath the church, do or cause to be done the acts therein directed without obtaining a faculty from the Ordinary, are guilty of an offence against the laws ecclesiastical, in respect of which they may be cited to appear to answer articles to be administered to them in a criminal suit.

The 23rd section of the Burial Act, 1857, provides (inter alia) that it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, upon the representation of one of Her Majesty's principal secretaries of State, by and with the advice of Her Privy Council from time to time, to order such acts to be done by or under the direction of the churchwardens or such other persons as may have the care of any vaults or places of burial, for preventing them from becoming or continuing dangerous or injurious to the public health, and such churchwardens or other persons shall do or cause to be done all acts ordered as aforesaid.

Orders in Council issued under the above section and served on the churchwardens of a parish church ordered that the churchwardens or the persons having the care of the vaults under the church should adopt or cause to be adopted the following measures, namely, that the whole of the human remains lying beneath the floor of the church should be removed, and reburied in a specified cemetery or in some other legal burial ground. In consequence of the service of these Orders in Council, the churchwardens, without having obtained any faculty from the Ordinary, pulled down all the pews in the church, took up the flooring and monumental slabs in the same, and removed certain coffins and human remains buried thereunder, for the purpose of reintering them elsewhere. It appeared that burials in the parish had been by law wholly discontinued in the year 1853, and that since that year no burial was recorded to have taken place there:—

Held, that the acts of the churchwardens, not having been authorised by a faculty, were illegal, and the Orders in Council afforded no justification for what had been done by them; such Orders being either wholly ultra vires or to be construed as merely directing an application for a faculty to carry out their terms:

Held, also, that, on the petition of the rector of the parish church and the churchwardens, a faculty might issue authorising for sanitary reasons the removal of the remains and their re-interment in consecrated ground. LEE v. HAWTREY — Consist. Ct. of London [1898] P. 63

On the petition of the Ambassador of the United States of America, the Chancellor of the Diocese of London directed that the manuscript known as “The Log of the Mayflower,” and containing the history of the voyage of that vessel to America in 1620 and of the then new-founded Plymouth plantation, together with entries of the births, marriages, and deaths of many of the first settlers in New England and their immediate descendants, should—as a record of the greatest national interest and importance to the President and citizens of the United States—be delivered out of the custody of the officials of the See of London to the Ambassador for the purpose of being transmitted to America, and there deposited under the official custody of the Governor of Massachusetts for the time being, on the conditions that a photographic facsimile reproduction of the manuscript, verified by affidavit, should be deposited in the registry of the Consistory Court of London, and that all proper facilities should be afforded by the future custodians of the original to persons desiring to make searches therein or of obtaining extracts therefrom, and that a certificate of the due delivery thereof, signed by the Governor of Massachusetts, of having received it, and testifying his acceptance of its custody on the conditions imposed, be transmitted to the registrar.

The Ambassador of the United States having ceased to hold office since the decree was made, the Court did not think fit to vary the decree; for in taking charge of the manuscript he was to act not as ambassador, but as the personal delegate of the Court. In re THE LOG OF THE MAYFLOWER — Consist. On an application for a faculty to place in a niche in the wall of a church closed for burials by Order in Council a sealed urn containing the cremated ashes of a dead body:—

Held, that the provisions prohibiting "burial" did not apply to the depositing of cremated ashes, and that there was jurisdiction to grant the faculty, but that the placing of the urn in the wall might be inconvenient:

Held, also, that as there were no objections on sanitary grounds to placing the urn below the floor of the church, a faculty for that purpose might issue, subject to a proper fee to the incumbent for the interment.

A figure of Our Lord upon the Cross was in 1880 placed in a parish church above, and on the centre of the screen separating the chancel from the nave; and in 1893 there were placed on one side thereof a figure of the Virgin Mary, and on the other side thereof a figure of St. John. All the figures were carved in wood, were about 2 ft. 9 in. in height, the central figure being rather higher than the two others, and all had been placed in the church without the sanction of a faculty. There was not in the church anything of the nature of a rood-loft or rood-stairs, and no candles were round or in front of the figures. In 1896 the rector and churchwarden of the parish instituted a cause of faculty praying the Ordinary to authorize by faculty the retention of the three figures on the screen, and filed affidavits stating that the services of the church had been conducted in accordance with the directions of the Book of Common Prayer, and that there was not and had not been anything in the said services or in the attitude of those attending the services to indicate or suggest any probability of worship, adoration, or any superstitious reverence being paid to the figures on the screen. No person appeared to oppose the grant of the faculty.

The Chancellor of the Diocese of Norwich ordered the faculty to issue as prayed. RECTOR, &c., OF BARSHAM, SUFFOLK v. PARISHIONERS, &c., OF THE SAME Consist. Ct. of Norwich [1896] P. 256

16. — Chancel screen, Restoration of—Figures of Our Lord upon the Cross, St. Mary, and St. John—Architectural decorations not likely to be abused by superstitious reverence.

A crucifix with the accompanying figures of the Virgin Mary and St. John is not forbidden by law to be erected on a chancel screen, but may be placed in that position in a parish church under a faculty where the Ordinary is satisfied that it is not likely to be abused by superstitious reverence being paid to it.

A faculty authorizing the restoration in a parish church of a stone chancel screen or interior chancel arch of pre-Reformation date by placing on three existing pedestals springing from ornamental tracery in the upper parts of such screen or interior arch three stone figures without gilding or painting, each two feet three inches high—one, the central figure, representing Our Lord upon the Cross, and the other two representing respectively the Virgin Mary and St. John—was granted by the Consistory Court of St. Albans on the Ordinary being satisfied that the figures would be for the purpose of architectural decoration only, and that there was no ground for reasonable apprehension that they would be abused or made the subject of superstitious reverence. GREAT BARFIELD (VICAR OF) v. A faculty for the erection on a disused burial ground of a churchyard wall, one side of which would be so built as to form an arcade or covered way for the protection from the weather of frescoes proposed to be painted on the panels of that side of the wall which would be inside the churchyard, was granted, the Ordinary being of opinion that the wall or structure in question was not a "building" prohibited to be erected on a disused burial ground by the Disused Burial Grounds Act, 1884, and the Open Spaces Act, 1887.

Where the vestry of a parish and the petitioners are unanimous, or substantially so, in favour of accepting a presentation picture of merit for the decoration of their parish church, the introduction of the picture into the church may be properly sanctioned by a faculty, unless the picture appears to be likely to be abused by superstitious reverence, or be otherwise inappropriate in a church, or be such as might reasonably give offence to present or future parishioners; but where it was proposed that such a picture should be introduced into the church of an admirably worked parish, and conscientious objections which might be entertained by members of the congregation, without disparagement to the views of others in favour of it, were taken to it as a church decoration by a substantial minority of resident parishioners who were members of the Church of England, and it appeared that its introduction into the church would offend the religious feelings of that minority and introduce discord into the parish where it had never existed before, it was held to be the duty of the Court to refuse to grant a faculty for its introduction.

A crucifix is neither a lawful church ornament nor an architectural decoration the retention of which in a church can be authorized by faculty, and where a crucifix has been introduced into a parish church the Ordinary has jurisdiction to direct its removal by the churchwardens without proof that it is likely to have superstitious reverence paid to it.

A parishioner of a parish in the City of London whose name is on the rate-book as occupier of a room in the parish taken solely to enable him to bring a civil suit in the court, has a sufficient interest to promote a cause of faculty to obtain the removal of unlawful church ornaments out of the parish church of the parish of which he is a parishioner.

The curate in charge of a parish in which the incumbent was non-resident introduced into the parish without lawful authority two crucifixes, one a movable crucifix of brass about eighteen inches high placed on a Tabernacle for the Reserved Sacrament standing on the Retable in the chancel of the church, and the other a crucifix three feet in height affixed to the north wall of the church by the side of and slightly above the level of the pulpit; and during his tenure of office, from about 1880 to 1894, there were in the church, besides these crucifixes and Tabernacle, a censer and the Stations of the Cross; incense was used in the church, and during the Communion Service the wine was mixed with water. Between 1894 and 1898 a succeeding curate, the crucifixes and Tabernacle still remaining in the church, introduced there a picture of the Virgin Mary, and the next year a shrine to the Virgin Mary called an "Altar of Repose," and a statue of the Madonna and Child; and services were conducted in the church in which the crucifixes were used by the minister and members of the congregation for superstitious purposes. Afterwards an application was made by three parishioners for a faculty to authorize the removal of the crucifixes out of the church, and the incumbent and churchwardens appeared as opponents, and prayed for a confirmatory faculty for the retention of the crucifixes.

It appeared that several past churchwardens and many of the parishioners had disapproved of and protested against the introduction and retention of the crucifixes, and that in 1898 another curate in charge had been appointed, whilst there was no evidence that during the time he had been the officiating minister the crucifixes had been used superstitiously.

It further appeared that before the hearing of the suit the Tabernacle for the Reserved Sacrament had been removed out of the church:—

Held, that the Court must refuse the prayer for a confirmatory faculty, and issue a faculty directing and authorizing the churchwardens as officers of the Ordinary to remove the crucifixes out of the church, because—first, they were either in themselves illegal church ornaments or illegal architectural decorations; and, secondly, if not in themselves illegal as church ornaments or architectural decorations, they were—having regard to the facts that they were introduced into the church for superstitious purposes, and were so used for nearly twenty years, and might be so used again, and had been a cause of offence to several churchwardens and parishioners, some of whom, though supporting a resolution of vestry against the petitioners, did not thereby express any opinion for their retention—articles and things the retention of which in the church it would be an unwise exercise of the discretion of the Court to authorize.

Semble: A Tabernacle for the reception of the Reserved Sacrament is not a lawful church ornament. KENSIT v. RECTOR OF ST. ETHELBURGA, BISHOPSGATE WITHIN Consist. Ct. of London [1900] P. 80

The 3rd section of the Disused Burial Grounds Act, 1884, provides that after the passing of that Act it shall not be lawful to erect any buildings upon any disused burial ground (defined by that Act to mean a burial ground in respect of which an Order in Council has been made for the discontinuance of burials therein in pursuance of the Burials Acts, 1852 and 1853), except for the purpose of enlarging a church, chapel, meeting-house, or other places of worship:—

Held, that the Ordinary had, without infringing the above section, jurisdiction to authorize by faculty the rebuilding and extension by way of enlargement of schools and a parish hall erected on a disused burial ground within the Act, and which were used for mission services for adults and children, and which it was intended to use when rebuilt for the same purposes supplemental to the services in the parish church, and to meet the growing wants of the parish. VICAR OF ST. 31. — Jurisdiction—Grant of faculty for use as public street of portion of consecrated cemetery or churchyard closed for burials, and setting back of cemetery or churchyard wall—Retention of cause.

The Ordinary has jurisdiction to grant a faculty authorizing a portion of a consecrated cemetery or churchyard, closed for burials by Order in Council to be used for widening a public street. Any faculty granted for this purpose should contain exact particulars of the measurements of the portion of the cemetery or churchyard proposed to be used for the widening.

The rector and churchwardens of a parish church in the diocese of Exeter, and the corporation of a borough in which a consecrated cemetery forming an addition to the parish churchyard was situate, petitioned the Ordinary for a faculty to authorize a strip of the cemetery being used for widening an adjoining public street, and the boundary wall of the cemetery being set back so as to form the boundary wall between the remaining portion of the cemetery and the widened street. It appeared that the street proposed to be widened was only 16 feet wide, and too narrow for the traffic along it, and that the proposed widening would be not only for the general convenience and safety of the public, but particularly of the rector and his parishioners, to the former of whom and the churchwardens moreover, by way of consideration, a sum of money was intended to be paid by the corporation. It also appeared that the strip of the cemetery proposed to be thrown into the street had been closed for interments under an Order in Council, and that the proposed alteration of the width of the street had been unanimously approved by the parish vestry. The Chancellor of the Diocese of Exeter refused to issue citation, being of opinion that he had no jurisdiction to grant the faculty prayed for. The petitioners appealed to the Arches Court of Canterbury.

The Dean of Arches allowed the appeal, retained the cause, and, the allegations in the petition having been verified by affidavit, decreed a faculty to issue in accordance with the prayer of the petitioners. In re BIDEFORD PARISH. Ex parte RECTOR, &C., OF BIDEFORD

The Ordinary has jurisdiction to authorize by faculty the affixing of military colours as church ornaments to the walls of the chancel of a parish church where it appears that a former rector of the church has approved of their being placed in the chancel.

The rector of a parish church has no legal right without the sanction of a faculty to remove out of the chancel church ornaments, such as military colours, placed there without a faculty in a permanent position with the concurrence of a former rector and former churchwardens.

In 1891 a faculty issued from the registry of the Consist. Ct. of London authorizing the rector and churchwardens of a parish in the City of London, in conjunction with a co. owning premises abutting on the churchyard of the parish—a churchyard closed for burials under Order in Council—to make a pathway inclosed on the sides by railings, across the churchyard from the co.'s premises to a public thoroughfare on the opposite side of the churchyard, provided a specified rent was paid to the rector and his successors during a term of years. The faculty recited an agreement between the rector and churchwardens and the co. whereby the former agreed to concur in granting to the co. a right of way over the pathway afterwards authorized by the faculty for the term, and on payment of the rent there mentioned; all the works to be done at the co.'s costs, and "such right of footway to be for themselves their tenants and any others authorized by them in common with the rector and churchwardens and any others authorized by the rector and churchwardens." In 1892, after the co. had done and paid for the works and whilst the term of years was still unexpired, the rector and churchwardens agreed with other owners of premises abutting on the churchyard adjacent to the co.'s premises to concur in granting to such owners a right of footway over the pathway made under the faculty of 1891, subject to the rights of the co., and also over a new footpath to be made over a piece of the churchyard to join the footpath so already made, and petitioned the Consist. Ct. of London for a faculty to make a new footpath and to remove a portion of the above-mentioned railings; the owners of the premises desiring the right of way over the two footpaths intervening in support of the petition:—

Held, by the Consist. Ct. of London, that the faculty asked for must be refused, as the faculty of 1891 had granted to the co. and their assigns the enjoyment for a term of years not yet expired of the pathway made under that faculty to the exclusion of the other occupiers of premises abutting on the churchyard, and the Ordinary ought not to sanction by faculty anything being done in derogation of the exclusive right so granted:

Held, further, by the same Court, that the operation of the Ecclesiastical Leasing Acts of 1842 and 1858 is confined to glebe lands and property of that description, and does not extend to enable the incumbent of a parish, with the consent of the patron of the living and the Ecclesiastical Commrs., to grant leases of or rights over all or any portion of the churchyard of the parish:

Held, on appeal by the Arches Court of Canterbury, that the construction put on that faculty by the Court below was correct, and, the grant or refusal of the faculty prayed being in the discretion of the Ordinary, by whom that discretion had been properly exercised, the Appellate Court ought not to interfere, and the appeal must be dismissed.

The incumbent of a parish church having without a faculty, and contrary to the vote of the vestry and the wishes of the parishioners, introduced into the church pictures representing the “Stations of the Cross” proved to have been used superstitiously and four crucifixes, placed curtains over the Ten Commandments, the Lord’s Prayer, and the Apostles’ Creed engraved on the east chancel wall, and darkened the chancel by affixing permanent blinds on the east window and a side chancel window, the Court ordered that within three months the “Stations of the Cross,” the crucifixes, and the curtains should be removed out of the church by the incumbent, and the outside blinds over the above-mentioned windows taken down by him.

If the incumbent should not comply with the order of the Court within three months of its date, the Court would be prepared to issue a faculty to the parishioners’ churchwarden to carry out the order.

The erection in the chancel of a Communion Table with a reredos in substitution for the Communion Table formerly there, though made by the incumbent in opposition to a vote of the vestry, was sanctioned by a confirmatory faculty from the Court, on the ground of its being an artistic improvement to the church, subject to the platform on which the Communion Table stood being extended round the north end of the Table so as to enable the minister to officiate during the Communion Service standing at the north end.

The Court also sanctioned by confirmatory faculty the erection in the church of a side chapel with a Communion Table in it, though objected to by the parishioners, subject to the chapel being

Where a clergyman is deprived by sentence of the Consistory Court, and it appears to the bishop of the diocese that such clergyman ought also to be deposed from Holy Orders, the sentence of deposition, under the Clergy Discipline Act, 1892, s. 8, need not be delivered concurrently with that of deprivation, but may be passed at a subsequent time. *REG. v. 49. — “Preaching” — “Ministration” — “Ornaments of the minister”—Black gown in Pulpit—Custom—Long usage—Will—Charitable legacy—Gift for endowment of church—Continuing condition.

A testatrix bequeathed 1500*l.* towards the endowment of a church, provided certain conditions were carried out in every particular, and under this stipulation alone was her executor empowered to pay it. One of the conditions, called by the testatrix an “abiding condition,” was “that the black gown shall be worn in the pulpit, unless there shall be any alteration in the law rendering it illegal.”

The fund being in court in an action to administer the estate of the testatrix:—

Held, by C. A. (Lord Russell of Killowen C.J., Lindley and A. L. Smith L.J.J.), agreeing with North J., [1892] 1 Ch. 95, that the condition was a continuing condition, so as to entitle the incumbent of the church to the income of the fund from time to time so long as he performed the condition.

It is not illegal for a clergyman of the Church of England to wear a black gown in the pulpit when preaching, the legality of the black gown in preaching being sanctioned by the continuous usage of centuries uncontrolled by positive law or judicial decision.

The seats in a new parish church were in 1885 allotted by the Ecclesiastical Commrs. as follows: two pews for the vicar of the parish and his family: 315 sittings to be let to pew-renters; 222 sittings as free seats, and seventy-two sittings as seats for children, in the expectation that the population of the parish would in the main be composed of working men. This expectation was not realised, and in 1898 the vicar and churchwardens of the parish applied to the Ordinary to authorise by faculty the substitution of pews for adults in the place of the seventy-two sittings allotted as children's seats as above mentioned, and the letting of the substituted pews at pew-rents to be expended in church improvements and expenses:—

to grant a faculty appropriating to other purposes seats allotted by the Ecclesiastical Commrs. as free seats or authorizing the letting of any seats to pew-renters, but that a faculty might be decreed in his discretion for the substitution of pews for adults in which the churchwardens might seat parishioners in the place of the seventy-two sittings for children: the allotment of such sittings having been made by the Ecclesiastical Commrs. without statutory authority.

Semble, the churchwardens of a church built under the Church building Acts may in seating the parishioners in seats in the church not appropriated to pew-renters or allotted as free seats by the Ecclesiastical Commrs. give a preference to applicants who voluntarily subscribe to a fund for church improvements and expenses. *VICAR OF ST. 55. — Pew in church—Right appurtenant to a house—Prescription.

A pew may be annexed to a dwelling-house by a faculty, and a faculty may be presumed upon evidence of exclusive possession and repair for a long period. Long-continued user, inconsistent with mere possession by permission of the churchwardens, held to have established the right to a pew, although there was no evidence of any faculty, and there was evidence that the pew had been originally acquired under circumstances which would not confer a legal right.

56. — Pew in chancel—Site of ancient pew—Right appurtenant to house in parish—Prescription—Evidence—Exclusive possession—Acts of ownership other than repair—Lay rector—Right to chief seat in chancel.

The claimant of a right by prescription to a pew in the chancel of a parish church in respect of his ownership and occupancy of an ancient house in the parish must, as against the Ordinary, prove, not merely exclusive possession of the pew by himself and his predecessors, but also some act of user or assertion of proprietary right inconsistent with mere possession by permission of the churchwardens. The right to such a pew is subject to the burden of repair, but it is unnecessary to prove actual repair where evidence is given of other such acts of user or assertion of proprietary right, repair being only one of many possible acts of user. Upon such proof being given, a lost faculty should be presumed.

The removal of the woodwork of a pew in the chancel and the substitution of chairs for the former seats is an act of ownership or assertion of proprietary right inconsistent with any right in the Ordinary, and, together with exclusive possession, is sufficient to prove the claimant's right; such removal will not amount to an abandonment of the right, unless it be coupled with circumstances indicating an intention to abandon.

Re-lining a pew is not an act of repair.

The Ecclesiastical Courts have no jurisdiction to entertain a criminal suit against a lay rector who has neglected to perform his duty of repairing the chancel of the church of which he is the rector, unless the chancel was out of repair at the time of the institution of the suit. *NEVILLE v. Ordinary to relax sequestration where bankruptcy of incumbent of sequestered living discharged—Sequestration Act, 1871 (34 & 35 Vict. c. 45), ss. 1-4.

The Ordinary has no jurisdiction to relax the sequestration of the benefice of a bankrupt clergyman if the debts provable in the bankruptcy are unpaid, although the bankrupt has obtained his order of discharge.

The 52nd section of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, provides that "where a bankrupt is a beneficed clergyman the trustee may apply for a sequestration of the profits of the benefice, and the certificate of the appointment of the trustee shall be sufficient authority for the granting of sequestration without any writ or other proceeding, and the same shall accordingly be issued as on a writ of levavi facias founded on a judgment against the bankrupt."

The incumbent of a benefice having been adjudged a bankrupt, a sequestration of the profits of the benefice was granted under the above section by the bishop of the diocese, who appointed a sequestrator of the benefice, and (after the sequestration had been in force for more than six months) a stipendiary curate to serve the cure, assigning to the latter a yearly stipend. Subsequently an order was made in the bankruptcy discharging the bankrupt, and he applied by petition to the Consist. Ct. of the diocese praying the Court to relax the sequestration, to direct the discharge of the sequestrator, and to revoke the appointment of the stipendiary curate. The trustee in the bankruptcy opposed the application, and objected that the debts provable in the bankruptcy still remained in part unsatisfied:—

Held, by the Chancellor of the Diocese of Winchester, that so much of the application as asked for the relaxation of the sequestration and the discharge of the sequestrator must be refused, as the Ecclesiastical Court had no jurisdiction to determine the question whether the discharge of the bankrupt acted as a satisfaction of the sequestration:

Held, also, by the same judge, that the remainder of the application ought to be referred to the bishop to be dealt with in his discretion.

73. — Sequestration of benefice — Beneficed clergyman — Bankruptcy — Discharge of bankrupt — After-acquired property — Future profits — Bankruptcy Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 52), ss. 30, 52.

A beneficed clergyman having been adjudicated a bankrupt in April, 1889, the trustee in the bankruptcy, on May 31, 1889, obtained from the bishop a sequestration of the profits of the benefice, by which the sequestrator was directed, after making certain payments, to pay the residue of the profits to the trustee. On May 9, 1894, the bankrupt obtained an order of discharge. He then brought an action against the trustee, claiming a declaration that, as against the trustee, the pl't. from and after the date of the discharge was entitled to receive the profits of the benefice, and an injunction to restrain the deft. from receiving the residue thereof:—

Held, that for this purpose there was no distinction between the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and the Bankruptcy Act, 1883; that the profits of the benefice accruing due after the discharge were not after-acquired property of the bankrupt; and, on the authority of Ex parte Chick (1879) 11 Ch. D. 731, that the trustee in the bankruptcy was, notwithstanding the discharge, entitled to receive the residue of the profits under the sequestration until the debts provable in the bankruptcy had been paid. The action was accordingly dismissed. LAWRENCE v. ADAMS

The 2nd section of the Clergy Discipline Act, 1892, provides, inter alia, that if a clergyman is alleged to have been guilty of any immoral act, immoral conduct, or immoral habit, or of any offence against the laws ecclesiastical, being an offence against morality and not being a question of doctrine or ritual, he may be prosecuted by any person approved by the bishop, and tried in the Consist. Ct. of the diocese in which he holds preferment; and by the 34th rule of the Procedure Rules made under the Act, a clergyman holding no preferment may be prosecuted under the Act in the Consist. Ct. of the diocese in which he resides.

The complaint in a criminal suit lodged in the registry of the Consist. Ct. of London at the instance of a person approved by the bishop, charged the deft., a clergyman resident in the diocese, with having been guilty of offences against the laws ecclesiastical, being offences against morality and not being a question of doctrine or ritual, by having within the five years last past, and within the diocese, been guilty of simony, and knowingly made a false declaration against simony under the Clerical Subscription Act, 1865. The defendant brought in an answer denying that the offences alleged in the complaint were offences against the laws ecclesiastical, being offences against morality within the meaning of the 2nd section of the Clergy Discipline Act, 1892, and at the hearing of the issues of law raised on the pleadings, contended that the Consist. Ct. of London had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit:—

Held, also, that a false declaration against simony under the Clerical Subscription Act of 1865 cannot be isolated from the charge of simony and brought within the scope of the Act of 1892. BENEFICED CLERK v. LEE P. C. [1897] A. C. 226

11. — Sewage Works—Order to execute—Matter of Record—Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 75), s. 3.

By s. 3 of the Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1876, it is made an offence to permit sewage to flow into a "stream" from a sewer constructed at the date of the passing of the Act without using the best practicable means to render the sewage harmless. And by s. 20 the term "stream" is defined to include only such tidal waters as may be determined by the Loc. Govt. Bd. by order. Jurisdiction is by the Act given to the county court to make an order restraining the further commission of the offence, and ordering the offenders to execute the necessary sewage works to render the sewage harmless, and to inflict penalties for disobedience to such order.

Proceedings having been taken in a county court under the Act against the defts. for permitting sewage to flow into a certain river, and neglecting to use the best practicable means to render the sewage harmless, the defts. consented to an order declaring them to have committed the alleged offence and ordering them to execute the necessary sewage works to prevent its continuance. At the date of that order the defts. were under the belief that the part of the river into which the sewage flowed was non-tidal. Subsequently the defts., having been summoned for penalties for disobedience of the order, sought to shew that the part of the river into which the sewage flowed was tidal water, and that as there had been no order of the Loc. Govt. Bd. declaring it to be a stream, they had committed no offence:—

Held, that the order of the county court was

equivalent to a judgment, and that the defts. were estopped from disputing that they had committed the alleged offence, or from contending that the order of the Court in so far as it applied to the locus in quo was without jurisdiction. *JOINT COMMITTEE OF THE RIVER RIBBLE v. In an action brought to determine the title to certain land, the plt. tendered in evidence an ancient document coming from the proper custody which purported to be signed by M., a tenant of a predecessor in title of the deft., and which stated that J., a predecessor in title of the plt., had been persuaded to stop all proceedings at law that he then had against M. for wilfully and without leave bringing his sheep and cattle on to J.'s freehold land therein specified (which was assumed to be part of the land in dispute) for which wilful trespass M. bound himself to pay 16s. costs, and that he would for the future keep his own and other people's sheep and cattle from trespassing on the said land to the utmost of his power:—

Held, that the document was admissible in evidence, not as an admission by the tenant as to title, in which case it would not be evidence against the landlord, but as evidence of an act of ownership by a predecessor in title of the plt.:—

27. — Commission to take evidence abroad—Practice—Examination of witnesses abroad—Letters of request—Dissolution of partnership.

A commission or letters of request for the examination of witnesses abroad ought not to be issued unless the evidence which it is proposed to obtain is evidence directly material to an issue in the cause, and not merely evidence which may be incidentally useful in corroboration of other evidence.

In an action for a dissolution of a partnership in England between wine merchants, on the ground of alleged misconduct of the deft, the plts. alleged that the deft. had bribed an employee of Pickford & Co. to inform him of the names and addresses of persons to whom Pickford & Co. forwarded wines on behalf of Continental wine merchants, so that the firm might canvass those persons for orders, and that this became known, and brought the firm into bad repute. The books of Pickford & Co. during the period to which this charge related had been destroyed. The plts. set out a list of the names and addresses of the persons and firms to and by whom wines had been sent through Pickford & Co., and applied for letters of request to examine witnesses in Germany for the purpose of proving that wines were forwarded on their behalf during the period in question by Pickford & Co. Stirling J.

Held, that this order ought to be discharged, for that the evidence sought did not tend to prove bribery, though it might be useful in corroboration of direct evidence of bribery, and that it was not reasonable to require the admissions suggested, as the matters could not be within the deft.'s own knowledge, and he could only obtain information about them by writing to rival tradesmen. EHRMANN v. EHRMANN

28. — Commission to take evidence of party abroad—Defendant's application—Discretion—R. S. C. 1883—Order XXXVII., r. 5.

In granting or refusing a commission to take evidence abroad there is a material difference between a foreign plt. and a foreign deft., and the Court will not regard the case of a deft. with the same strictness as that of a plt. who has chosen his own forum. Prima facie, a foreigner who is sued in this country is entitled to a commission to examine him in the place where he lives.

(A) Defts., who were foreigners resident abroad, were temporarily in England when action was brought, were served, and entered appearance. They then returned abroad, and applied for a commission to examine them and their witnesses resident abroad. The Court was satisfied that the defts. had not gone abroad to avoid or delay the trial :—

Held, that the defts. were entitled to the commission. ROSS v. WOODFORD

Chitty J. [1894] 1 Ch. 38

(B) A deft. resident in Canada was served in London with a writ in an English action. He applied for a commission to take his own evidence in Canada. His presence in London had not been for the purpose of defending the action :—

On the trial of an action referred to a special referee, a witness in cross-examination was asked if he had any letters relating to the cause of action. He produced a mass of correspondence. Counsel proposed to call for them seriatim, and read each and cross-examine on them. This the referee refused to allow on the ground that it would occupy an inordinate time. Counsel then wished to put the letters in en bloc, have copies, and then examine them at his leisure. This was also refused:—

Held, that the proper course would have been to ask for an adjournment to examine the correspondence, and select what was material. In re MAPLIN SANDS - C. A. [1894] W. N. 184 affirm. Kekewich J. [1894] W. N. 141

1. — Appropriation to provide for deferred legacies.

The testator by his will gave immediate legacies, and legacies deferred until the death of his wife. The wife re-married, and her interest under the will was thereby reduced to the receipt of a life annuity:—

Held, that the deferred legatees were entitled to have 2½ per cent. Consols of a present value equal to the amount of their respective legacies set aside; and that if 2½ per cent. were purchased, and they were liable to be reduced to 2½ per cent., one-tenth more in value should be purchased. *In re TREDWELL. Summons in the matter of the estate of T. R. who died in England a domiciled Englishman possessed of personal estate situate entirely in England. He died intestate, leaving a widow and children resident abroad. Plt. had obtained letters of administration of the estate of the deceased as attorney for the widow, the debt to the summons. She had not been otherwise constituted the legal personal representative of the deceased anywhere. All debts had been paid. The object of the summons was to determine whether the plt. ought to hand over the assets to the widow, his principal, or distribute them himself among the next of kin.

Held, that the attorney could not take a good discharge from the widow. In re RENDELL. WOOD v. RENDELL

The purchaser from a testator of certain worthless shares in a limited co. claimed to be entitled to prove in an administration action for damages for misrepresentation against the testator's estate, and assessed his damages at 250*l.*, the price paid by him for the shares:—

Held, that where, as here, there was nothing among the assets of the deceased that at law or in equity belonged to the claimant, and the damages which had been done to him were unliquidated and uncertain, the executors of the wrong-doer could not be sued merely because his estate might have benefited by the wrong complained of; that the damages claimed were none the less unliquidated and uncertain from the fact that the claimant might be able to prove that the measure of his damages was the amount of the purchase-money paid for the shares, and that, for these reasons, the claim could not be allowed. *In re DUNCAN. Held, by C. A., that the claimant was, under the Act of 1868, in the same position as if on the day of registration he had obtained judgment for the amount in an English Court, and was entitled to prove in the administration. Order varied by restraining the claimant from enforcing the judg-

Held, that the three sons ought to bring into account, as against their respective shares of the residue, any sums due by them respectively to the testator at the day of his death, with interest at 4 per cent. from that date:—

Held, also, that the sons were entitled to the properties specifically given to them, without making good what (if anything) they owed to the testator's estate. In re AKERMAN. AKERMAN v. AKERMAN — Kekewich J. [1891] 8 Ch. 212

The rule—that a purchaser for value, of an asset of the testator, from an executor who is also residuary legatee, acquires a title free from the claims of unsatisfied creditors of the testator, if the purchaser took without notice of the unsatisfied debts or of anything which made it improper for the executor so to deal with the asset—applies in the case of equitable as well as legal assets; provided that neither the executor nor the Court administering the testator's estate still retain control over the asset, as, e.g., in Noble v. Brett (1858), 24 Beav. 499, and Hooper v. Smart (1875), 1 Ch. D. 90.

In 1878 the registered holder of ry. stocks covenanted to pay an annuity to the trustees of a settlement during the joint lives of himself and his wife and the life of the survivor. In 1882 he died having bequeathed all his property to his widow, and appointed her his executrix. The widow proved the will, and by various deeds from 1886 to 1892 transferred the stocks to her bankers to secure a debt of her own. In Dec., 1892, the widow gave an equitable charge on the stocks to the plt. to secure advances made to her. Neither the bankers nor the plt. when taking their respective securities had knowledge or notice that any debt of the testator remained unpaid, or that the widow was not entitled to deal with the stocks as she did, and the plt. before he had notice that there was any indebtedness of the testator, gave notice of his charge to the bankers. The bankers sold the stocks, and, having retained the amount owing to them, paid the balance into court:—

made under an honest mistake, and was neither fraudulent nor monstrous. Nor, if he complies with an order for payment into court of the balance representing the payments so disallowed, is he, in the absence of special circumstances, chargeable with interest thereon.

By the judgment in a probate action, unsuccessfully brought by two of the children and next of kin of a father who had died leaving a will, against the executor for revocation of the probate, the defendant's costs were ordered to be taxed and to be paid by the plts. Subsequently, in an action for administration of the estate of the mother, who had died intestate, the defendant, her administrator, who was the same person as the executor of the father, paid into court in that action a balance which had been found due from him in taking the accounts. On a summons in that action for the distribution of that balance among the several persons entitled to the intestate's estate, two of whom were the assignees of the shares of the two next of kin plts. in the probate action:—

The personal estate available for payment of debts was wholly insufficient, but it appeared from the master's certificate that the executrix had received, and properly accounted for personal estate to a considerable amount:—

40. — Action against executor who has not proved—Fiscal sale of testator's property.

A creditor of a testator cannot sue a person named in the will as executor, unless he has either administered or obtained a grant of probate; and a sale in execution of a judgment in such an action does not bind the testator's estate.

An order for probate without an actual grant does not prove the will or shew an acceptance of the trusts of the will by the executor. Letters of administration, even if irregularly granted, are valid till revoked. MOHAMIDU MOHIDEEN HADJIAR v. PITCHAY - P. C. [1894] A. C. 437

41. — Breach of duty—Wilful default—Omission to enable secured creditor to realise his security—Loss of interest—Action by residuary legatee—Will—Neglect to take out probate.

The executors appointed by a testator did not prove the will until nearly seven years after his death. Part of the testator's estate consisted of moneys payable under a policy of insurance on the life of the testator, which he had equitably mortgaged to his bankers as security for a larger amount. The insurance society would not pay over the moneys without production of the probate, and for nearly seven years the executors paid the bankers or their transferee out of the estate interest at 5 per cent. on their debt.

After production of the probate the insurance co. paid over the policy moneys to the bankers' transferee, together with interest at 1 per cent. per annum from the time when such moneys became payable; and the difference between the interest thus received and paid was 157l. 14s. 8d.

The executors never had sufficient assets in their hands to pay all the testator's debts; and it was

Held, that the executors could not be ordered to account on the footing of wilful default or breach of duty by reason of this loss of interest to the estate.

An executor who does an act by which his co-executor obtains sole possession of assets of the testator is only liable for misapplication by his co-executor if the act was "unnecessary." Such an act is not unnecessary if done in the regular course of business. A. made his wife B., J., and C. his executors. A. was the registered holder of certain American ry. shares; these shares could either be sold as registered shares or be unregistered and then sold as shares to bearer; the latter was the ordinary course of business. J. requested B. and C. to unregister the shares. This was done. J. misappropriated part of the proceeds, and absconded within eleven months of A.'s death:—

Held, (1.) that unregistering the bonds and handing them to J. to sell were not "unnecessary" acts, and that B. and C. were not liable for J.'s misappropriation; (2.) that as J. was trusted by A., and as B. and C. had no reason to suspect him, there had been no such delay in calling upon J. for an account as to make B. and C. liable. *In re GASQUOINE. 58. — Right of retainer—Debt—Assertion of right—Insolvent Testator—Administration order—Official receiver, vesting in—Vesting order, effect of—Payment of assets to official receiver without retaining debt—Mistake—Repayment—Bankruptcy Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 52), s. 125, sub-ss. 1, 2, 5, 9.

An executor who is a creditor of his testator is not bound, in order to preserve his right of retainer out of the assets he has got in, to assert his right before occasion arises, as on an attempt to take assets out of his possession: if he asserts it then, his right will be protected, unless he has done some act, by release or otherwise, to deprive himself of it.

When an order has been made under s. 125, sub-ss. 1, 2, of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, for the administration of the estate of an insolvent testator, thus vesting the estate in the official receiver under sub-s. 5, the effect of the order is to vest in the official receiver so much only of the estate as is properly distributable among the creditors, and not to deprive third parties of any rights which they have acquired to withdraw from distribution assets in their possession and which they have a right to retain.

Thus, such an order does not deprive an executor creditor of his legal and equitable right of retainer out of the assets which he has got in, even though by mistake and in ignorance of his rights he has paid over the assets to the official receiver under the administration order; nor is he deprived of that right by proving for his debt in the bankruptcy, if on discovering his error he withdraws his proof. In that case he is entitled to be repaid the sum he would have been entitled to retain had the assets been still in his possession.

After the bankruptcy the executors made some payments to the mortgagees in pursuance of the testator's liability under his contract of suretyship:—

61. — Right of retainer—Administration—Delay—Indemnity—Debt—Surety.

In an administration action an executor does not lose his right of retainer merely by reason of delay—such as not claiming his right until after the chief clerk has made his certificate under the judgment—or by the fact of his having paid the assets into court or to a receiver, provided the delay can be satisfactorily explained and there are assets against which he can exercise his right.

The father having died in 1896, succession duty became payable, and the trustees of the settlement claimed that the duty on the 112,000*l.* ought to be paid out of the son's estate in priority to the other creditors:—

Held, that the executrix having distributed the assets without notice of this debt, bonâ fide and without undue haste, the estate had been fully administered; and that the trustees, though creditors of a higher degree, had no right to follow the assets retained by the executrix in discharge of her own debt. *In re FLUYDER, WINGFIELD v. In a creditor's action for the administration of the real and personal estate of a testatrix, one of the executors was found to be a simple contract creditor of the estate to an amount exceeding 250*l.* By an order made in the action the executors were directed to pay, "out of moneys in their hands forming part of the testatrix's outstanding personal estate," a sum of 250*l.* to certain specialty creditors of the testatrix, but the order was to be "without prejudice to any question of retainer" by the executors or either of them. The 250*l.* was paid accordingly. Subsequently a receiver was appointed to get in the estate. The question was whether the right of retainer by the executor who was a creditor was lost or preserved to the extent of the 250*l.* so paid away:—

Held, that the case was within the principle of Richmond v. White, (1879) 12 Ch. D. 361, as explained in In re Compton, Norton v. Compton, (1885) 30 Ch. D. 15. The payment must be treated as made for the convenience of administration, and, as it was expressly made out of the outstanding personal estate, the fact that it was to creditors in a higher degree made no difference, though the case might have been otherwise if the payment had been to a secured creditor out of the subject-matter of his security:

Held, therefore, that to the extent of the 250*l.* the right of retainer was preserved. In re LANCE. SHARP v. REBBECK Kekewich J. [1900] W. N. 29

On the hearing of an application to extradite a person accused of theft abroad, O., a witness, produced certain articles under a subpoena duces tecum which he had purchased from the prisoner. After the magistrate had committed the prisoner to await the Secretary of State's warrant, he orally directed a constable to take charge of the property for production at the trial abroad. O. applied, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 5, for an order directing the property to be given up to him:—

Held, that the magistrate was functus officio when he had committed the prisoner, and any subsequent direction as to the property, whether given or omitted, was not an act relating to the duties of his office, and that the Court had no jurisdiction to make the order.

Held, further, that assuming the Court had such jurisdiction, O.'s possessory title (if any) had been lawfully divested by their passing out of his possession under the subpoena duces tecum, and therefore that he was not entitled to the relief asked. REG. v. LUSHINGTON. Ex parte OTTO.

2. — Evidence of accomplice—Corroboration—One committal for two offences—Extradition Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 52), s. 3, sub-s. 1.

M. was charged with causing two explosions in France, one of which caused loss of life. On an application for a writ of habeas corpus, it was objected that (1) there was no evidence of the identity of the prisoner with the person accused; (2) that the charges depended on the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice; (3) that there were two charges and one committal:—

Held, that (1) the evidence of identity was sufficient; (2) that the evidence of the accomplice was corroborated, and, even if it were not, that the magistrate had discretion as to whether the evidence was sufficient for committal; (3) that separate committals were not necessary. In re MEUNIER — Div. The offence in English law of fraudulent falsification of accounts by a director, public officer, or member of a public company is an offence within art. 147 of the French Code Pénal, and is covered by the expression “faux en écritures de commerce” in that article. Although it may not amount to forgery according to English law, that offence is an extradition

4. — Jurisdiction—Bona fides of Demand for Surrender—Offence of a Political Character—Extradition Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 52), s. 3, sub-s. 1.

Where the surrender of a fugitive criminal is demanded by the Government of a friendly State for offences within the provisions of the Extradition Act, 1870, and of the extradition treaty with that State, the Court has no jurisdiction to inquire whether the demand for surrender is made in good faith and in the interests of justice.

The provision of s. 3, sub-s. 1, of the Extradition Act, 1870, by which a fugitive criminal shall not be surrendered if he proves to the satisfaction of the Court that the requisition for his surrender has been made with a view to try or punish him for an offence of a political character, applies only to an offence of a political character which has been already committed. In re ARTON (No. 1) — [1896] 1 Q. 5. — Political offence—Habeas Corpus—Extradition Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 52), s. 3 (1).

The decision of a magistrate, who commits a prisoner for extradition, that the offence charged is not of a political nature, is subject to review by the Court on an application for habeas corpus. Definition of a crime incidental to and forming part of a political disturbance is a political offence. In re CASTIONI

In order to justify the extradition of the subject of a foreign State, there must be evidence of an act committed; by him in the foreign country amounting to an offence against the law of such country, and which, if committed in England, would amount to an offence against English law. In re BELLENCONTRE

7. — Surrender of British subjects—Treaty with Belgium—Person “liable to be surrendered”—Extradition Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 52), s. 6.

By s. 6 of the Extradition Act, 1870, “where this Act applies in the case of any foreign State, every fugitive criminal of that State, who is in or suspected of being in any part of Her Majesty's dominions . . . shall be liable to be apprehended and surrendered in manner provided by this Act.”

By a treaty made between this country and Belgium the contracting parties undertook to deliver up to each other reciprocally fugitive offenders accused of certain specified offences; but it was expressly provided that “in no case, nor on any consideration whatever, shall the high contracting parties be bound to surrender their own subjects, whether by birth or naturalisation.”

The surrender of a British subject was demanded by the Belgian Government in respect of certain extradition offences of the commission of which there was sufficient prima facie evidence to justify his extradition, and an order for his committal was made by a magistrate with a view to his surrender:—

Held, that the accused, although a British subject, was a person “liable to be surrendered” within the meaning of s. 6 of the Extradition Act, 1870, and that the order of committal was rightly made.

Under the provisions of the treaty with Belgium, the ordinary proceedings in extradition may be taken in the case of a British subject; it is not necessary that in each particular case the surrender should be the result of negotiations between the respective Governments and of an express consent by the British Government to the extradition. In re GALWEY

3. — Pledge—Documents of title—Foreign arrestment—Conflict of laws—Goods in Scotland—Factors Acts, 1889, 1890 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 45, ss. 3, 9; 53 & 54 Vict. c. 40, s. 1).

Where goods are lodged in warehouses in Scotland a pledgee of the goods must, to make effective all real rights which depend on the constructive delivery of the goods, give notice of the pledge to the warehouse-keeper.

The Factors Act, 1889, extended to Scotland by the Factors (Scotland) Act, 1890, enacts—s. 3: “A pledge of the documents of title to goods shall be deemed to be a pledge of the goods”; and s. 1: “For the purposes of this Act” (sub-s. 5) “The expression ‘pledge’ shall include any contract, pledging, or giving a lien or security on, goods, whether in consideration of an original advance or of any further or continuing advance or of any pecuniary liability.” Sect. 9 prescribes that the effect of delivery or transfer of the documents of title of the goods under any pledge, &c., by a person who having bought the goods obtains with the consent of the seller possession of the goods or documents of title, shall have the same effect as if the person making the delivery or transfer were a mercantile agent in possession of the goods or documents of title with the consent of the owner.

Goods were stored by G., a domiciled Englishman, in a bonded warehouse in Glasgow, transferred into the name of G. as owner; and the warehouse-keeper issued to G. delivery orders showing that the goods were held to G.’s order “or assigns by indorsement hereon.” G. obtained a loan from I., an English merchant, and delivered to him in England a letter of hypothecation bearing that he deposited a part of the goods with him in security, with power of sale, and G. indorsed and handed to I. the delivery warrants. I. did not intimate or give notice of the right he had acquired to the warehouse-keeper. R. & B., claiming as personal creditors of G., arrested the goods in the hands of the warehouse-keeper in order to found jurisdiction against G. in Scotland; and then raised an action against him in the Scottish Court, upon dependence of which they again arrested the goods, claiming through the arrestment a preferable right thereto:—

Held, affirming the decision of the majority of the whole Scottish judges, (1897) 24 R. 758 that the case was governed by the law of Scotland, and that the right of the pledgee, I., in the goods was defeated by the arrestment executed by R. & B., I. not having intimated his pledge to the warehouse-keeper:

Held, also, that s. 3 of the Factors Act, 1889, was merely intended to define the full effect of the pledge of the documents of title made by a mercantile agent, and that it had no application to the case of the pledge of the documents of title by one in the position of G., who was not a mercantile agent within the meaning of the Act; nor was G. a pledgor within s. 9 of the same Act. *INGLIS v. C., an auctioneer, in good faith and with no knowledge of A.’s rights, received the piano, sold it, and paid the proceeds to B.:—

Held, that C. had agreed to buy and obtained with consent of A. possession of the piano; that delivery by B. to C. had the same effect as if B. was a mercantile agent; that “delivery under any agreement for sale” was not confined to delivery to the receiver pursuant to a sale by the deliveror; that “agreement for sale, pledge, or other disposition” included a delivery of goods to be sold by the receiver for the benefit of the deliveror, and that therefore C. was protected from liability by s. 9 of the Act. *SHENSTONE & CO. v. 5. — Possession under agreement—Option to purchase—Hiring agreement—Pledge by hirer—Factors Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 45), s. 9.

The expression in s. 9 of the Factors Act, 1889, "a person having agreed to buy goods," means a person who has bound himself by agreement to buy, and does not include a person having an option to buy, the owner being bound to sell if the option is exercised.

A person who merely hires goods with an option of purchase cannot give a good title to a pledgee, under s. 9 of the Factors Act, 1889, until he has paid all his instalments and exercised his option. Decision of C. A., [1894] 2 Q. B. 262, reversed. HELBY v. MATTHEWS

B. entrusted a table-top to G., who was a dealer in similar articles. The table-top was not to be sold to any person or at any price without B.'s authorization. If sold, the cheque was to be handed to B. intact, who was to pay a commission. G. sold the table to E. for 200l. without B.'s authorization. E. was to pay S. 170l. to satisfy a judgment S. had against G., and 30l. to G. E. gave S. a diamond valued between them at 120l. and 50l. in cash :—

Held, that G. was acting altogether outside his authority in selling, and therefore E. acquired no title, and B. was not estopped from disputing E.'s title :

The plt. having invented a system of treating diseases by hot air, there appeared in a medical paper an article containing a favourable account of this system, with particulars of its application to specific cases. The deft., who was the inventor of a rival system of hot-air treatment, circulated amongst the patients of the plt. a pamphlet containing extracts from this article, but the extracts omitted all mention of the plt.'s name, and were so made as to induce the belief that the article, and the specific statements of fact therein, related to the deft.'s system. There was evidence that some of the plt.'s patients were misled by these extracts, but no evidence of any actual damage. Upon motion for injunction :—

Held, by Stirling J., [1899] W. N. 125, that, in the absence of any attempt by the deft. to pass off his system as the plt.'s, the Court ought not to interfere by way of interlocutory injunction.

Salmon and Freshwater.*5. — Boundary — Fishings ex adverso glebe lands—Salmon fishings.

Where in a pending cause it appears that the Crown has a primâ facie claim to the salmon fishings in dispute, the Court ought to direct intimation to be made to the Crown authorities; and stay the action pending their decision to appear or bring a separate action.

The pursuer's lands of Ardoe and the defender's lands of Banchory marched inland, and were both bounded by the River Dec. But at the river there was interjected between these two estates the glebe of Banchory-Devenick, which extended along the river front 350 yards. The minister had no title to the salmon fishings. The titles of Ardoe and Banchory included the salmon fishings "belonging to" the lands; but these titles contained no express grant to the fishings ex adverso the glebe. The pursuer admitted that the defender had an exclusive right to the fishings eastward from a drain leading to the river from the offices of the manse, but he claimed the exclusive right from the east march of Ardoe up to the same drain, a space of 135 yards. The defender maintained that the fishings in question belonged to him, as being ex adverso of his lands of Kirkton of Banchory :—

Held, reversing the decision of the Ct. of Sess., 21 R. 282, that it was a matter of reasonable inference from the proof that the glebe included no part of the lands of Kirkton, but did include portions of Banchory and Ardoe, and that the disputed fishings remained with Ardoe. OGSTON v. STEWART

A Secretary of State's certificate under the Salmon Fishery Acts, 1861 to 1876, defined the limits of the Severn Fishery District as including "so much of the River Severn and of all of the tributaries of the said river" as was situate within certain counties :—

(A) Held, that a reservoir, formed by damming the valley and enclosing the waters of the River Vyrnwy, was not a "tributary" of the Severn, and, therefore, not within the Severn fishery district, although the Vyrnwy was formerly a "tributary" of the Severn, and water still overflowed from the reservoir into the Severn. GEORGE v. CARPENTER — Div. Ct. [1893] 1 Q. B. 505

A fishing net with an illegally small mesh is not a "like instrument" to a snare within the meaning of s. 8 of the Salmon Fishery Act, 1861, as extended by s. 18 of the Salmon Fishery Act, 1873; and, therefore, the mere possession of such a net, although with the intention of catching salmon by means thereof, is not an offence within those Acts. JONES v. DAVIES

Div. Ct. [1898] 1 Q. B. 405

8. — Illegal methods—Fixed engines—Toot and haul net—Prescription.—Salmon Fishery Acts.

The toot and haul net used in the estuary of the Tay is fastened by a rope at one end to the shore. The net is then placed on a boat or coble; the boat with its net is pulled out by means of an overhaul rope to an anchor in the stream; the boatman on reaching the anchor attaches the net at about twenty yards from its end to a floating rope fastened to the anchor; the end of the net is then turned inward towards the shore forming a bend or hook, and the men on shore haul the net taut. Another rope attached to the boat keeps the net upright. The net is retained in this upright position until a fish strikes it, when the outer end is freed and hauled in by fishermen on shore so as to encircle the fish :—

Held, affirming the decision of the Ct. of Sess. (1899) 1 F. 651, that this mode of fishing for salmon was an illegal method within the meaning of the Salmon Fishery Acts.

SECOND APPEAL.*Salmon fishing—Hang nets—Illegal methods.

The drift or hang nets used in the River Tay are from 80 to 220 yards long and 12 to 19 feet in depth, and are shot into the river about an hour before the turn of the tide both at high and low water, when the current is least. They are run out of a boat over the stern, in a straight line across the river, and followed with the current by a man in a boat, who, when he sees or feels the net struck by a fish, rows to the spot and captures the fish entangled in the net, or, if the fish is getting away, he secures it with a gaff. The net is not fixed to any post on the shore :—

Held, reversing the decision of the Ct. of Sess., that fishing in the tidal portions of the River Tay with drift or hang nets was an illegal method of fishing for salmon within the meaning of the Salmon Fishery Acts. The debt. wrongfully discharged into the stream water loaded with sediment, the effect of which was to drive away the fish and injure the breeding:—

Held, by the C. A., that the grant did not give "mere licence to fish, but a right to fish and to carry away the fish caught; but this was a profit à pendre, and was an incorporeal hereditament; and that the plts. had a right of action against any one who wrongfully did any act by which the enjoyment of the rights given to them by the deed was prejudicially affected.

By leaving a mortgagor in possession the mortgagee impliedly authorizes him to carry on his business and to hire and bring in such fixtures as are necessary for his trade, and agree with the owners as to their removal.

B. joined in the agreement (which was not under seal) to enable C. to do this. Afterwards A. mortgaged his land to D. who had no notice of the agreement. After the mortgage, C., who had no notice thereof, set up the apparatus which was fixed in brickwork:—

In determining whether or not a chattel has become a fixture, the intention of the person affixing it to the soil is material only so far as it can be presumed from the degree and object of the annexation.

Holland v. Hodgson, (1872) L. R. 7 C. P. 328, explained.

Wood v. Hewett, (1846) 8 Q. B. 913, and Lancaster v. Eve, (1859) 5 C. B. (N.S.) 717, distinguished.

A gas engine was let out on the hire and purchase system under an agreement in writing, which provided that it should not become the property of the hirer until the payment of all the instalments, and should be removable by the owner on the failure of the hirer to pay any instalment. The engine was affixed to freehold land of the hirer by bolts and screws to prevent it from rocking, and was used by him for the purposes of his trade. Default having been made in the payment of the instalments, the engine was claimed by the owner, and also by a mortgagee of the land, who took his mortgage after the hiring agreement and without notice of it, and had entered into possession while the engine was still on the land:—

Held, that the engine was sufficiently annexed to the land to become a fixture, and that any intention to be inferred from the terms of the hiring agreement that it should remain a chattel did not prevent it from becoming a fixture; and consequently that it passed to the mortgagee as part of the freehold:

Held, further, that even if a licence to remove the engine could be implied from the mortgagee leaving the mortgagor in possession, the entry of the mortgagee into possession determined such licence.

2. — Unsound fruit—Found in the possession of any person—Public Health (London) Act, 1891, s. 47 (3).

A. sold walnuts which turned out to be unsound. A notice was posted in his shop to the effect that the walnuts were sold on the condition that the buyer should sort them and destroy any which were unsound. A. was charged under s. 47, sub-s. 3, of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, and elected to be tried on indictment. The jury were directed to find him guilty if he sold the walnuts when unfit for the food of man, unless he proved that he did not know and had no reason to believe they were so, and were told to disregard the printed notice: Held, by C. C. R. (Mathew J. dissent), that the conviction must be quashed: Held, by C. C. R. (Mathew J. dissent.), that the vendor can only be convicted under sub-s. 3 where the article is liable to be seized after it has got into the possession of the purchaser: Held, by Hawkins, Grantham, Charles, Lawrance, Wright, Bruce, and Kennedy JJ., that the jury should have been asked whether the sale was subject to the notice, and whether the walnuts were sold for the food of man: Held, by Mathew and Cave JJ., that assuming the notice was embodied in the contract of sale, that A. was not thereby relieved from the duty imposed by the sub-section, and that the jury should not be asked whether the walnuts were sold for the food of man: Held, by Mathew J., that when A. sold the walnuts they were sold to be used for food when unsound, and were, therefore, liable to be seized under the sub-section, and that the conviction should be affirmed. *REG. v. By s. 11 of the Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870, "If any person within the limits of Her Majesty's dominions, and without the licence of Her Majesty, prepares or fits out any naval or military expedition to proceed against the dominions of any friendly State, the following consequences shall ensue: (1.) Every person engaged in such preparation or fitting out, or assisting therein, or employed in any capacity in such expedition, shall be guilty of an offence."

Held, that, if there be an unlawful preparation of an expedition by some person within Her Majesty's dominions, any British subject who assists in such preparation will be guilty of an offence even though he renders the assistance from a place outside Her Majesty's dominions.

By s. 2 of the said Act, "This Act shall extend to all the dominions of Her Majesty." And by s. 3, "This Act shall come into operation in the United Kingdom immediately on the passing thereof, and shall be proclaimed in every British possession by the governor thereof as soon as may be after he receives notice of this Act, and shall come into operation in that British possession on the day of such proclamation."

An indictment alleged that "within the limits of Her Majesty's dominions and after the coming into operation therein of the Act called 'The Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870,' certain offences against the said Act were committed:—

Held, that the indictment sufficiently alleged the Act to have been in operation in that part of Her Majesty's dominions in which the alleged offences were committed. REG. V. JAMESON

FOREIGN JURISDICTION—continued.*1. — Jurisdiction of Consular Courts in Japan —Counter-claim against Japanese plaintiff.

By treaty the British Courts and the Japanese territorial Courts have exclusive jurisdiction over claims against British and Japanese subjects respectively. Accordingly, the Consular Courts have no jurisdiction to entertain a counter-claim in an action by a Japanese plt. against a British deft. IMPERIAL JAPANESE GOVERNMENT v. PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION CO.

2. — Powers of judge of Consular Court.

The Consular Court of Madagascar was by O. in C. of Feb. 4, 1869, vested with plenary civil jurisdiction over all British subjects within its limits, though it was not created in the sense of English law a Court of Record:—

Held, that a judge of such a Court is entitled to the same degree of protection which is accorded by the law of England to the judge of a Court of Record; and that an action for damages will not lie against him for dismissing without proof an action which he held to be vexatious. HAGGARD v. PÉLICIER FRÈRES

4. — Western Pacific—Jurisdiction of High Commissioner's Court.

In a suit in the High Commissioner's Court for the recovery of land in Samoa, and for damages for conversion of its produce, it appeared that the defts. did not dwell within the bounds of the said islands, but that they had a store in Samoa, affixed to which was a signboard with the name of their firm, where they carried on business by servants and agents:—

Held, that under the Pacific Islanders' Protection Acts, 1872, 1875, the Foreign Jurisdiction Acts, 1843–1875, the O. in C. of Aug. 13, 1877, and the Treaty between H. M. and the King of Samoa of Aug. 28, 1879, the defts. were within the jurisdiction of the Court, and that the latter was competent to grant the relief prayed. McARTHUR & CO. v. CORNWALL

P. C. [1892] A. C. 75

NOTE.—The jurisdiction over Samoa of the above Court was abrogated by the Treaty of June 14, 1889, between H. M., the U. S., and Germany, establishing a Supreme Civil Court for the island: see observations of P. C.

A promise by deft. to indemnify plt. against a liability which plt. is about to contract with a third person is not within s. 4 of the statute.

An oral promise by deft. to plt. that, if plt. would accept certain bills for a firm in which deft.'s son was a partner, deft. would provide plt. with funds to meet the bills, is a promise of indemnity and not of guarantee, and therefore not required to be in writing. GUILD & Co. v. CONRAD

7. — Section 4—Letter signed by purchaser on paper on which vendor's name and address printed—Vendor and purchaser—Statute of Frauds (29 Car. 2, c. 3), s. 4.

The plt., who lived at 285, St. Ann's Road, went to the Warwick Castle Hotel, which was kept by the deft., on April 3, 1899, when, after some conversation about the sale of a piece of land, the plt. took out of a paper-rack a sheet of the note-paper used in the hotel, at the head of which were printed the following words: "The Warwick Castle Hotel, Pier Avenue, Clacton-on-Sea, Sole Proprietor, Wm. Thos. Hook." The plt. then wrote on the paper—as he alleged, at the deft.'s dictation—as follows: "285, St. Ann's Road, Stamford Hill, N. April 3, '99. T. Hook, Esq. Dear Sir,—I hereby agree to give you the sum of 590l. for the piece of land at the corner of Marine Parade and Tower Road. Please instruct your solicitor to forward the contract to me. (Signed) F. J. Hucklesby, 6 Marine Parade." The plt. brought an action for specific performance of the contract between the parties alleged to be contained in the letter. The deft. pleaded the Statute of Frauds:—

Held, that the printed heading formed no part of the letter. The object of such a heading was to give information as to the place to which any reply was to be given, but by adding the address at St. Ann's Road the plt. had in effect struck out the printed address.

Schneider v. Norris, (1814) 2 M. & S. 286; 15 R. R. 250; Evans v. Hoare, [1892] 1 Q. B. 593, and Torret v. Cripps, (1879) 27 W. R. 706, distinguished.

The deft. had written no part of the document, and the mere fact that the document, written by the plt., contained the deft.'s name was not sufficient. No memorandum had been signed by him. If it had been proved that the deft. dictated the document, and thus did something equivalent to saying, "Sign that as the contract between us," there might have been a contract. But no such dictation took place. The words as to instructing a solicitor also shewed that the document was not

FRAUDS, STATUTE OF (29 Car. 2, c. 3)—*contd.

8. — Section 4—Liability undertaken at the request of another—Statute of Frauds (29 Car. 2, c. 3), s. 4.

If A. undertakes a liability at the request of B. and upon a promise by B. to pay to A. what he pays under the liability, B.'s promise is not within the statute. In re BOLTON'S ESTATE, MORANT v. BOLTON Chitty J. [1892] W. N. 114; affirmed by C. A. [1892] W. N. 163

An appeal was dismissed on the ground that on the evidence it was for B.'s own debt A. had rendered himself responsible, and that the statute had therefore no application.

A landlord verbally agreed to grant his tenant, the assign of an existing lease of the Warden Arms, a further lease of twenty-four years for a fine of 50l., on receipt of which sum in cash the landlord signed and handed to the tenant the following memorandum:—

" . . . . Dear Sir,—In consideration of you having this day paid me the sum of 50l. . . . I hereby agree . . . to grant you . . . a further lease of 24 years . . . of . . . the Warden Arms . . . to run immediately after the expiration of . . . the now existing lease. . . . "

The name of the proposed lessee was not stated in this memorandum:—

Held, that, for the purposes of the Statute of Frauds, the proposed lessee was sufficiently described as the person who had paid the 50l.

Whether the reference to a further lease would by itself have identified the proposed lessee with the existing tenant, quære. CARR v. LYNCH — Farwell J. [1900] W. N. 69; [1900] 1 Ch. 613

12. — Section 4—Oral agreement—Letting for non-continuous period—Entry—Payment of rent on account—Right of landlord to recover balance of rent—Statute of Frauds (29 Car. 2, c. 3), s. 4.

The plt. orally agreed to let a piece of waste ground to the deft. for three successive Bank holidays; the deft. was to have exclusive possession of the ground on those days, and to pay 45l. for the use of the ground, paying an instalment of 15l. for each of the three days. The deft. entered and occupied the land on the first of the three days, and after entry paid the first instalment of 15l.; he refused to occupy the ground on the other two days, or to pay to the plt. the balance of the rent. In an action by the plt. to recover the two remaining instalments, the deft. contended that the claim was barred by the Statute of Frauds, s. 4:—

Held, that there having been an entry for the purpose of occupation under an agreement for a single letting (although the period of the agreed letting was not continuous) at a single rent, and a payment of rent on account of the entry, the plt.'s right to recover the balance was not affected by the fact that the agreement was not in writing, and the Statute afforded no defence to the claim. SMALLWOOD v. A landlord having verbally agreed with his yearly tenants to grant them a lease for twenty-one years of the messuage held by them (without the inclusion in the lease of any additional property) at an increased rent, the tenants for some time afterwards paid the increased rent:—

Held, that the decision in Nunn v. Fabian, (1865) L. R. 1 Ch. 35 (as explained by Baggallay L.J. in Humphreys v. Green, (1882) 10 Q. B. D. 148, 156), applied, notwithstanding anything laid down in Maddison v. Alderson, (1883) 8 App. Cas. 467; that the payment of rent was a sufficient part performance to take the case out of the Statute of Frauds; and that parol evidence of the agreement was therefore admissible. MILLER & ALDWORTH, LD. v. formance, taking the case out of the Statute of Frauds.

A contract for a lease of land for more than three years was, after negotiation, entered into and reduced into writing in the form of a draft lease, which, however, was not signed by the intended lessor. Shortly before the contract was made, the intended lessee was let into possession, and he subsequently continued in possession and paid rent according to the terms of the draft lease:—

Held, that, although the entry into possession was antecedent to the contract, yet the subsequent continuance in possession being, under the circumstances, unequivocally referable to the contract, constituted a part performance sufficient to take the case out of the Statute of Frauds. HODSON v. 15. — Section 4—Part performance—Contract relating to interest in land—Allegation of partnership—Resulting trust—Admission of parol evidence—Statute of Frauds (29 Car. 2, c. 3), s. 4.

The plt. alleged that he and the deft. had had several transactions together as partners in joint adventures, and that in April, 1898, they determined to acquire certain property with a view to mining for gold. He further alleged that he and the deft. arranged with the owner of the property for the grant of a lease to the deft. on behalf of himself and the plt., and that a lease and a Crown licence were granted to the deft. on behalf of himself and the plt. The deft. had since worked the mine, but had refused to recognise the plt.'s title or interest, and wrongfully claimed to be entitled to the sole benefit of the lease and licence. The plt. claimed a declaration that the deft. was trustee of one moiety of the property for him, and consequent relief:—

Held, that the plea of the Statute of Frauds must be allowed. Before parol evidence could be admitted as to the contract it was necessary to show that a partnership existed. It was not enough merely to plead a partnership in order to get rid of the defence of the statute. The case was governed by Caddick v. Shidmore, 2 De G. & J. 52, which was binding on the Court. The authorities relied upon by the plt. as to the statute being used as an instrument of fraud were all cases of trust. Here there could be no trust unless the partnership were proved. The law was laid down in Britain v. Rossiter, (1883) 11 Q. B. D. 123, and Maddison v. Aderson, (1883) 8 App. Cas. 467. ISAACS v. EVANS

A letter written by an agent within the scope of his authority, which refers to and recognises an unsigned document as containing the terms of a contract made by his principal, is a sufficient memorandum of the contract within the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds, and it is not

Held, that there was no concluded agreement between the parties. There was no agreement on the part of the plts. to take the lease unless the house was put into a satisfactory sanitary state, and no agreement by the deft. to put the house into a satisfactory sanitary state, and, although that condition might have been waived by the plts. there was no waiver of the condition before the date of repudiation, and the parties were never ad idem.

auction; but subsequently the deft. sent a letter addressed on the face of it to J. & Co., who were the auctioneers, offering to purchase the house for 350*l.*, and stating that if his offer was accepted he would "sign contract on auction particulars." J. & Co. replied by letter stating that on behalf of their client (who was the vendor), naming her, they accepted the offer "subject to contract as agreed. We enclose draft contract." The draft was identical with the contract embodied in the conditions of sale and indorsement, except that the draft stated the vendor's name; but the deft. never signed it:—

Held, (1.) that as the offer contained the names of both contracting parties (though one was only agent of an undisclosed vendor), on its acceptance there was a valid contract within the Statute of Frauds; (2.) that the acceptance was absolute and unconditional, inasmuch as a form of contract definitive in all its terms was identified by the offer, and that signature to the form of contract was unnecessary.

Prior to 1873 the plt., a married woman, was owner of certain estates in Ceylon subject to a considerable mortgage. In 1873 the mortgagees sold and conveyed the estates to the deft., who, without the privity of the plt., raised large sums by mortgage of them, and afterwards became bankrupt in 1879, and obtained his discharge in 1880. The estates were afterwards sold by the mortgagees. The plt.'s case was that the deft. had purchased the estates as trustee for her subject to a lien for his advances. In 1880 the deft.'s trustee in bankruptcy repudiated the plt.'s title. The deft. never expressly did so, and the plt. never gave either of them to understand that she had given up her claim; but she took no active steps to assert it till 1894, when she commenced an action against the deft. asking for a declaration that the deft. purchased as a trustee for her, and for an account of his dealings with the property, and payment of what should be found due from him. The deft. pleaded—(1) that the estates were conveyed to him as beneficial owner; (2) that the trust alleged by the plt. was not evidenced by any writing signed by the deft., and that the Statute of Frauds was a defence; (3) that the plt.'s claim, if proved, was barred (a) by the deft.'s bankruptcy; (b) by the Statutes of Limitations; (c) by laches and delay. Kekewich J. held that no trust was proved, and dismissed the action on the first ground. The C. A., being of opinion that the evidence, which partly consisted of letters signed by the deft., completely proved that the deft. purchased as a trustee for the plt., and held the estates as such trustee subject to a lien for his expenditure:—

Held, that even if the letters signed by the deft. did not contain enough to satisfy s. 7 of the Statute of Frauds, parol evidence was admissible; and as the whole of the evidence taken together established that the deft. had purchased as a trustee, the plt. was entitled to a decree.

The Statute of Frauds does not prevent proof of a fraud, and it is a fraud for a person to whom land is conveyed as a trustee, and who knows it was so conveyed, to deny the trust and claim the land as his own. Therefore a person claiming land conveyed to another may prove by parol evidence that it was so conveyed on trust for the claimant, and may obtain a declaration that the grantee is a trustee for him.

Bartlett v. Pickergill, (1759) 1 Eden, 515, is inconsistent with a series of later decisions, and is not now law.

A trust thus established is an express trust within the definition given in Soar v. Ashwell, [1893] 2 Q. B. 390, and the Statute of Limitations, therefore, is no defence to the claim; nor is the bankruptcy of the grantee, if governed by the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, a defence to an action for an account of his dealings with the estates, since by s. 49 of that Act bankruptcy does not bar the claims of a cestui que trust.

The deft. knew that land held by the deft. was claimed by the plt. as having been conveyed to the deft. as a trustee for her; and in the correspondence between them he never denied her title, though he never expressly admitted it. The plt. took no proceedings for twelve years after the correspondence between them had ceased:—

Held, that as she had done nothing actively to lead the deft. to suppose that she had given up her claim, there was nothing against her but the lapse of time; and that the mere lapse of time in a case of express trust was not a bar.

A very difficult account directed to be taken by an official referee instead of in chambers, on account of the great saving of time which would thus be effected. ROCHEVOUCAULD v. BOUSTEAD

the mother and brother with the view of saving the bankrupt's property, as he was a man of very extravagant habits and had already during his minority incurred debts to a considerable amount. A sum of 3000*l.* was left out of the settlement to pay these debts, and was handed to him for that purpose. In May, 1895, the bankrupt charged his life interest under the settlement, and in Oct., 1895, a receiving order was made against him. The trustee claimed that the settlement was void both under s. 47 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, and also under 31 Eliz. c. 5:—

Held, that the settlement was not void under s. 47, as the covenant of the mother was a sufficient consideration for it; and further, that it was not void under the Statute of Elizabeth, as the evidence failed to show that it was executed with intent to defeat and delay creditors. *In re TETLEY - V. these assignments was impeached under 13 Eliz. c. 5, and the plts. moved for an order for payment into court of the policy moneys, or for a receiver :—

Held, that, if the fund existed in specie, it would be assets of the testator, assuming the assignments to be within the Statute of Elizabeth, and the Court would have jurisdiction to secure the fund for the benefit of the creditors until the determination of that question; and that there had been no such alteration in the nature of the fund as to oust the jurisdiction of the Court, the fund being still in the hands and under the control of the assignee, although not in its original shape; and, accordingly, the Court exacted an undertaking from the assignee not to receive the moneys secured by the mortgages, so far as they represented the policy moneys, and not to deal with the mortgages except with the sanction of the Court. *In re MOUAT. A rule of a friendly society made at a time when that Act was in force provided that "No new rule shall be made, nor any of the rules herein contained or hereafter to be made shall be amended, altered, or rescinded, unless with the consent of a majority of the members present at a general meeting":—

Held, that that rule of itself conferred an independent power of altering the rules of the society, which power survived notwithstanding the repeal of the Act.

A person became a member of a friendly society at a time when the rules of the society contained a general provision that the rules might be altered. After he had become entitled under the rules to a benefit from the funds of the society in the nature of a superannuation allowance, and whilst he was in actual receipt of it, the rules of the society were so altered as to have the effect of depriving him of that benefit in case of a breach by him of the altered rules. To such alteration of the rules he did not assent except in so far as the fact of joining the society which had a general power of alteration constituted an assent:—

Held, that he was bound by the alteration.

4. — Dissolution—Infant members—Branch composed of minors—Governing committee—Friendly Societies Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 63), ss. 9, 13, 15, 25, 27—Friendly Societies Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 60), ss. 6, 15, sub-s. 8; s. 25.

In 1873 a friendly society, called the "Loyal Social Design Lodge," instituted a society to be called the juvenile branch of the lodge, and drew up rules for it which were registered and certified. The society was to consist of persons between the ages of six and eighteen. By rule 3, it was to be "governed" by a committee of eight appointed by the lodge. It was provided by rule 21 that no rules should be altered without the consent of a majority of members present at a special meeting. The members having been reduced to six persons about sixteen years of age, one of the members and the fathers of the rest on their behalf, without the consent of the committee, signed an instrument for dissolution of the society and distribution of its funds under the Friendly Societies Act, 1855, s. 13, and the Friendly Societies Act, 1875, s. 25, and the dissolution was advertised. The trustees in whom the property of the society was vested brought an action to set aside the instrument. Keke-wich J. held that it must be set aside, on the ground that the fathers had no sufficient authority to sign on behalf of their children:—

Held, by the C. A., that as the Act of 1875 preserved the rules of old societies so far as they were not contrary to the Act, rule 3 was still in force; that it was to be considered a fundamental rule of the society from which the members could not escape; that the members could not dissolve the society without the consent of the committee; and that the instrument of dissolution must be set aside.

Whether, if the infant members had power by themselves to dissolve the society by signing an instrument of dissolution, an instrument signed for them by their fathers, guardians, or agents would suffice, quære. RUPD v. JAMES

A member has no right of appeal under s. 25, sub-s. 8 (e), of the Act of 1875, against an award of the chief registrar dissolving the society, merely on the ground that he is dissatisfied with the provision made for settling his claims. WILMOT v. GRACE — Div. Ct. [1892] 1 Q. B. 812

6. — Failure of objects—Poverty—"Charity"—Charitable legacy—Lapse—Cy-près.

In 1800 a friendly society was established to provide, by subscriptions, contributions, and fines, an "invested fund" for the relief, by means of annuities, of members, their widows and children, in distressed circumstances.

By the will of a testator who died in 1893 a legacy of 500*l.* was bequeathed to the society for the purposes thereof. At that time there were only three annuitants living, being widows of deceased members, and there was only one member remaining, who was also sole surviving trustee of the "invested fund," which was amply sufficient to provide for the three annuities. Subsequently two of the three annuitants died.

On an originating summons by the executors of the will against the sole surviving member, sole surviving annuitant, and the residuary legatees, to ascertain whether the society was entitled to the legacy:—

Held, (1.) that the society was a "charity" within Commissioners for Special Purposes of the Income Tax v. Pemsel ([1891] A. C. 531); (2.) that it was a charity existing at the testator's death and therefore the legacy had not lapsed; and (3.) that the legacy, not being required for the remaining annuity, was applicable cy-près.

7. — Failure of objects — Surplus or unexpended funds—Charity—Cy-près—Bona vacantia—Resulting trust.

In 1810 a society was established to raise a fund, by the subscriptions, fines and forfeitures of its members, to provide annuities for the widows of its deceased members. In 1830 the rules were revised, and the society conformed to the provisions of the Friendly Societies Act, 1829, but the objects of the society were in no way altered. By 1879 all the members had died. The last widow-annuitant died in 1892, the society then having a surplus or unexpended fund of 1250*l.*:—

Held, that there was no resulting trust in favour of the legal personal representatives of the members of the society; that the society was not a "charity," and therefore the unexpended fund was not applicable cy-près to charitable purposes; and that the fund passed to the Crown as bona vacantia.

The Friendly Societies Act, 1895, s. 10, sub-s. 1, merely extended the period during which s. 22 of the Friendly Societies Act, 1875, was applicable to disputes within it, and did not extend the provisions of that section to a class of disputes not previously within it, namely, disputes as to the title of a person to be a member of the society. The jurisdiction of the Court of the trustees of the society and the treasurer, received moneys of the society and misapplied them. On his death an action was commenced to administer his estate, and a claim was carried in by the trustees of the society to be paid in full in priority to other creditors.

Held, following Ex parte Fleet (4 D. G. & Sm. 52), that though an officer of the society the secretary had not received the moneys so misapplied by virtue of his office within sub s. 7 of s. 15 of the Friendly Societies Act, 1875, so as to give the trustees a priority. *In re ABERDEIN. 2. — Ground game—Occupier of land—Alienation of right to kill—Ground Game Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 47), ss. 1, 2, 3.

The plt., who was occupier of a farm with the sole right of taking game and rabbits on it, in 1889 agreed in writing to let to the deft. for an annual sum the sole right of killing all winged game, hares and rabbits "on the farm":—

Held, that this agreement was not made void by s. 3 of the Ground Game Act, 1880. MORGAN v. JACKSON — Div. Ct. [1895] 1 Q. B. 885

3. — Ground game—"Occupier of land"—Owner occupying his own land—Ground Game Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 47), s. 1.

An owner occupying his own land is an "occupier of land" within the meaning of the Ground Game Act, 1880, s. 1.

The owner of land granted to the plt. a lease of the exclusive right of sporting upon the land, and subsequently, during the currency of the lease, sold and conveyed the freehold to the deft., who entered into occupation of the land. The deft. caused the rabbits on the land to be trapped, claiming as occupier a right to do so under the provisions of the Ground Game Act, 1880, whereupon the plt. brought an action against him for infringement of the plt.'s exclusive right of sporting:—

Held (by V. Williams L.J. and Romer L.J., A. L. Smith L.J. dissenting), that the deft., being the occupier, was entitled under the Ground Game Act, 1880, to kill the ground game, none the less because he happened to be also the owner.

became tenant to the deft. of a farm, induced by a promise that, if the plt. left the ground game unshot for the deft.'s benefit, the deft. would compensate the plt. for damage done to the plt.'s crops by the ground game; that the plt. allowed the ground game to go unshot, and the deft. shot over the farm; and the growing crops of the plt. were damaged by the ground game, and the plt. claimed compensation.

The deft. pleaded that the agreement was void in law by reason of the Ground Game Act, 1880, s. 3, and the statement of claim disclosed no cause of action.

Held, that the agreement purported to alienate the right given by the Act to the occupier to kill and take the ground game, and purported to give the occupier an advantage in consideration of his forbearing to exercise his right, within the meaning of s. 3, and was therefore void, and the plaintiff was not entitled to recover. *SHERRARD v. 5. — Sporting rights—Reservation severable as to ground game and winged game—Ground Game Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 47), s. 3.

Sect. 3 of the Ground Game Act, 1880, which "makes void "every agreement, condition, or arrangement which purports to divest or alienate the right of the occupier as declared, given, and reserved to him by this Act," avoids them only so far as they are contrary to the provisions of the Act. Where, therefore, a lease of a farm contains a reservation to the lessor of the exclusive right of the lessor and his friends to enter upon the farm for the purpose of sporting, the reservation is severable; and, although void as to the ground game as being in contravention of the provisions of the Act, is nevertheless good as to the winged game. *STANTON v. By s. 4 of the Gaming Houses Act, 1854, "any person, being the owner or occupier, or having the use of any house, room, or place, who shall open, keep, or use the same for the purpose of unlawful gaming being carried on therein," is made liable on summary conviction to a penalty not exceeding 500*l*.

The debt, with three friends whom he met went to his house for the purpose of having a game of cards; after playing whist, they played for money a game called "German Bank," which the jury found to be an unlawful game. There was no evidence that they or any one else had ever played an unlawful game of cards at the debt's house on any other occasion:—

Held, that the debt. could not be convicted under the above section of using the house or room for the purpose of unlawful gaming being carried on therein:

Held, also, that the question whether a particular game of cards is an unlawful game is a question of law for the judge, and not of fact for the jury. REG. v. DAVIES

6. — "Coupon competition"—Office used for betting—Events relating to horse-races—Betting Act, 1853 (16 & 17 Vict. c. 119), s. 1.

The debt was the occupier of an office and the proprietor of a newspaper published weekly at that office. Each number of the paper contained a notice of what was called a "coupon competition"—that is to say, of a promise by the debt. to pay a certain specified sum of money to such persons as should correctly guess the result of a certain horse-race then shortly about to be run, and should write their guesses upon certain forms called "coupons," which were issued with each number of the newspaper, and should return the coupons so filled up to the debt.'s office, together with the sum of one penny in respect of each guess made. A large number of persons every week sent in to the debt.'s office coupons filled up as aforesaid, accompanied by remittances of money. The debt. was upon these facts convicted under the Betting Act, 1853, of having unlawfully kept the office for the purpose of money being received by her as the consideration for undertakings to pay thereafter money on events relating to horse-races:—

Held, that the conviction was right. REG. v. STODDART — C. C. R. [1900] W. N. 258

All in run or not—pay first past the post.” Before each race the odds offered by the respondent against the various horses running were written on the board. He stood on a box placed close to the structure, and invited people to bet with him; and, assisted by his clerk who stood near, made bets on each race with backers of the horses running:—

12. — “Place” used for betting—“Betting with persons resorting thereto”—Betting Act, 1853 (16 & 17 Vict. c. 119), ss. 1, 3.

The respondent, a professional bookmaker, was charged with using a certain place called “The Pit Heap” for the purpose of betting with persons resorting thereto upon contingencies concerning horse-races.

The Pit Heap was a piece of ground, comprising about one-eighth of an acre, bounded by various buildings and hoardings and a row of posts and a road. It was occasionally occupied by shows, for which rent was paid to the owner; otherwise the public had free access. On the day in question no one was in personal charge of it. On that day the Lincolnshire Handicap was run. In the morning a crowd began to assemble on the Pit Heap, and soon afterwards the appellant came on to the ground, and stationed himself at a point on it, with his back against a hoarding, where he remained about three hours. During that time men in the crowd came to him, gave him money, and made bets with him on the Lincolnshire Handicap, of which he made entries in his betting-book.

The justices found that the spot where the appellant stood was a “place,” and was used by him “for the purpose of betting with persons resorting thereto,” within the meaning of the Betting Act, 1853.

On a case stated:—

Held, that the decision of the justices was right, and the appellant was rightly convicted under s. 3. McINANEY v. HILDRETH

13. — “Place” used for betting—“Betting with persons resorting thereto”—Payments of bets made elsewhere—Betting Act, 1853 (16 & 17 Vict. c. 119), s. 1.

The respondent, a bookmaker, was charged with using the bar of a beerhouse for the purpose of betting with persons resorting thereto. He went to the beerhouse on several days, at the same hour in the evening of each day, and persons who had made bets with him elsewhere, and had won, came to the beerhouse, and he paid the bets to them in the bar.

On a case stated by a police magistrate:—

Held, that paying bets, previously made elsewhere, was not using the bar for the purpose of betting with persons resorting thereto, within the meaning of the Betting Act, 1853, s. 1, and the respondent could not be convicted. BRADFORD v. DAWSON fenced in by iron rails, to which when race-meetings were held the public were admitted by the owners of the racecourse on payment of an entrance fee. Among the five hundred to two thousand persons so admitted were always one or two hundred professional bookmakers, and most of the persons admitted, other than the bookmakers, went for the purpose of backing horses with the bookmakers, but some did not bet at all. The bookmakers, who were accompanied by their clerks, did not use any apparatus such as a desk, stool, umbrella, or tent, but any particular bookmaker was usually to be found in or near the same part of the inclosure, calling out the odds to attract backers. In some cases the backers were required by the bookmakers to deposit their stakes; in others credit was allowed. This use of the inclosure was known to and permitted by the owners thereof:—

Held, affirming the decision of the C. A., [1897] 2 Q. B. 242 (Lords Hobhouse and Davey dissenting), that the inclosure so used was not "a place opened, kept or used" for the purposes prohibited by the Betting Act, 1853.

Held, contra (by Lord Hobhouse and Davey), that the inclosure was a "place kept and used" by the owners for the purpose of the bookmakers who used it betting with persons resorting thereto, and (by Lord Davey) for the purpose also of the bookmakers receiving deposits of money on bets, and that the case fell within the Act.

The respondent, a professional bookmaker, was charged with unlawfully using a certain place, to wit, an inclosure situated upon a racecourse, for the purpose of betting with persons resorting thereto, on contingencies relating to horse-races.

The inclosure was contained within the racecourse, which was itself inclosed. Admittance was obtained by payment—to the racecourse of 1s., to the inclosure of 1l. At a race-meeting the respondent, accompanied by his clerk, was admitted within the inclosure, where he shouted the odds against the horses about to run, inviting persons to bet with him. The backer in each case was required to pay the money for which he backed the horse to the respondent, and received a ticket bearing the names of the respondent and the horse, and the odds laid. If the horse won the respondent repaid to the backer his stake, and paid him the odds. The respondent did not confine himself to any fixed spot in the inclosure, and had no apparatus to denote the spot where he carried on his operations, but moved about and made bets in various parts. He had no control over the management of the inclosure.

Held, that the inclosure was a "place," and was used for the purpose of the respondent "betting with persons resorting thereto," within the meaning of the Betting Act, 1853, s. 1, and therefore the respondent was liable to be convicted under s. 3. HAWKE v. DUNN

The beerhouse keeper had no interest in the bets made, and the bookmaker had no interest in or control over the business of the beerhouse or the house itself:—

Gaming contracts between a stockbroker and his client, for differences on the sale and purchase of stocks and shares, resulted in a balance in favour of the client. It was agreed that the broker should sell certain stock to the client which he would accept in payment of the balance due to him, and in pursuance of this agreement a contract note was forwarded by the broker. The stock was not delivered, and the client sought to prove in bankruptcy, against the estate of the broker, for damages for non-delivery of the stock:—

Held, reversing the judgment of Wright J., that, as the balance resulting from the gambling transactions could not have been recovered from the broker, there was no consideration for the promise to deliver the stock, and no proof could be admitted in respect of the non-delivery.

The client had deposited money with the broker as cover to secure him against loss on the gaming transactions which had resulted in a balance in favour of the client:—

A limited co. (M. & Co.) was supplied with gas by a gas co. In Feb., 1896, P. was appointed manager and receiver of the business of M. & Co. by debenture-holders, and shortly afterwards P. and S. were appointed by the Court joint receivers and managers in an action on behalf of a higher class of debenture-holders. They entered and carried on the business, and were supplied with gas by the gas co. At the time when P. was appointed there was due to the gas company 90l. for gas supplied to M. & Co. The gas co. threatened to cut off the supply unless the 90l. arrears was paid, and the receiver brought an action to restrain them. Kekewich J. granted an injunction to restrain them from doing so, holding that the receivers were new tenants entitled in their own right to a supply of gas without liability for the arrears due from M. & Co.:—

Held, on appeal, that the relation of the plts. to M. & Co. was not that of incoming and outgoing tenant, but of caretaker and owner, and that the plts. were in no better position against the gas company than M. & Co. were, and could not claim a supply of gas except on payment of the arrears. *PATERSON v. A gas co. was by its special Acts required to supply a statutory minimum of gas to the public lamps in Richmond for a fixed annual sum per lamp. The gas co. failed to supply the statutory quantity of gas during a severe frost, and the corporation declined, in consequence, to pay the full amount of the statutory annual charge for each lamp:—

Held, that the failure of the co., through vis major, to fulfil their statutory obligation did not excuse the corporation from fulfilling theirs, and that they must pay the full annual charge per lamp, although they did not receive the full amount of gas. *In re RICHMOND GAS CO. plts. were empowered to do all such work as they might deem requisite for preparing and laying of putting greens, mowing and keeping down rank or rough grass, and otherwise laying out and improving the golf course and for keeping the same in condition. They had power to put up a movable pavilion and to put up stiles over the hedges. The defts. agreed not to mow the fields, but to keep them grazed. The plts. had put up posts round the putting greens with a single iron wire round to keep cattle and horses from the putting greens. The defts. had removed the posts and wire, which they complained of as being dangerous to horses and cattle, and as interfering with grazing on the putting greens. The plts. claimed a mandatory injunction to compel the defts. to restore the fences. The defts. put in a counter-claim for damages for (inter alia) mowing more grass than the agreement allowed, and injury to a horse from the wire fencing, and an injunction to restrain the plts. from fencing in the putting greens. They raised, among other defences, the contention that the agreement was a mere licence and terminable at the defts.’ option, and not an agreement for a lease:—

North J. held, on the evidence of custom as to fencing putting greens, that no agreement to allow the greens to be fenced in could be implied; that the agreement did not give the plts. the exclusive right to occupy any part of the land, and amounted to a mere licence. He dismissed the action and gave the defts. assessed damages and costs. He refused them an injunction on the ground that, there being a mere licence they could revoke; an injunction would be futile. EDWARDS v. SUMMERTON

A tenant for life applying to the Court under s. 37 of the Settled Land Act, 1882, for leave to sell heirlooms with a view to obtaining an increased income, must shew that the proposed sale is in the interests of all parties entitled under the settlement, and the fact of his having got himself into difficulties by his own extravagance is not a circumstance which will have any weight with the Court in favour of a sale.

If the application is for leave to sell an heirloom of unique character and historical repute, such as a famous jewel or work of art, the Court, in the exercise of the judicial discretion given to it by the Act, will have regard to the intention of the settlor and also to the wishes and feelings of the remaindermen.

for life got into pecuniary difficulties, and some of these heirlooms were distrained upon by his landlord for arrears of rent and sold. The value of those that had been thus sold had been estimated at 550*l.* The tenant for life had been adjudicated a bankrupt and had obtained his discharge, but his life interest had been sold by the trustee in bankruptcy. The question now raised was whether the trustees could retain income, as against the purchaser from the trustee in bankruptcy, to make good the amount lost to the trust estate by the sale of the heirlooms:—

Held, that the trustees were entitled to be paid out of income the loss the trust estate had suffered by reason of the carelessness of the tenant for life in allowing his landlord to distrain on these heirlooms; the tenant for life had had the benefit of the money produced by the sale of these chattels in the payment of his debt; and the trustees had a right to retain the income until the loss was made good to the estate, and this right to retain was superior to the right of the trustee in bankruptcy, or of any persons claiming through him. *In re HOPE. A water co. in exercise of statutory powers laid down pipes under the surface of a street, and the highway authority of the district afterwards, in exercise of the power in that behalf given by s. 98 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, proposed to lower the surface of the street, and to do so without altering or disturbing the position of the pipes, but so as to leave only a few inches of soil over them.

In an action by the water co. to restrain the highway authority from lowering the surface of the street without at the same time lowering the pipes of the co. to a corresponding depth under the new surface:—

5. — Reasonable user—Loading and unloading of goods—Public nuisance—Injunction.

In a case of doubt or difficulty the right of the occupier of premises abutting on a highway to make a reasonable use of it, for the purpose of loading and unloading goods at his premises, must yield to the public right of unobstructed passage along the highway.

It is in each case a question of degree whether the exercise of this private right of access to premises, which must of necessity involve some obstruction of the highway, is or is not reasonable, and in determining this question regard must be had to all the facts of the case.

Traders carrying on a large business in a populous town, at premises situate in a street the roadway of which was less than twenty feet wide, kept as many as six vans at once during every alternate hour in the daytime loading and unloading goods at their premises, thus occupying half the width of the street, and seriously obstructing the passage of vehicles through it:—

Held, that this was an unreasonable use of the highway, and that it amounted to a public nuisance the continuance of which must be restrained by injunction. ATT.-GEN. v. BRIGHTON AND HOVE CO-OPERATIVE SUPPLY ASSOCIATION

The vestry of a parish had let the grazing on a highway made under an inclosure award ever since the award, viz., for 115 years:—

11. — Exemption from highway rate—Liability to repair ratione tenuræ—Alteration of highway—Estoppel—Res judicata—Highways Act, 1835 (5 & 6 Will. c. 50), s. 33.

The appellants had from time immemorial repaired a certain highway ratione tenuræ, and were consequently exempt from contributing to the repair of other highways in the districts. In 1782 the highway was placed under trustees who materially altered it. In 1862 the trust expired, but the appellants, believing that their liability still existed, continued to repair the highway. In 1866 the Court of Q. B. decided that they were not liable to be rated for the repair of the highways in the district, but the fact of the alteration of the highway by the trustees was not brought before the Court. In 1892 the highway was declared a main road, and the appellants ceased to repair it:—

Held, that the duty to repair ratione tenuræ and with it the exemption from being rated had come to an end by the alteration of the highway by the trustees:—

Held, also, that the previous decision did not make the case res judicata, as the fact of the alteration had not been brought to the attention of the Court. HEATH v. WEAVERHAM OVERSEERS

Extraordinary expenses having been incurred by the highway authority by reason of the damage caused by excessive weight passing along the highway or extraordinary traffic thereon, within s. 23 of the Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878:—

He sued the deft., charging that he was liable to repair ratione tenuræ :—

In a hamlet forming part of a township all the highways were repairable by the occupiers of lands ratione tenuræ, and highway rates were not leviable by reason of the exemption in the Highway Act, 1835, s. 33. A ry. co. occupied lands in the hamlet, and, prior to the after-mentioned order, were liable ratione tenuræ to repair a portion of a highway therein. An order was made by justices under the Highway Act, 1862, s. 35, by which it was declared that all the highways in the hamlet should be parish highways, and be repaired by the highway board of the district in which the hamlet was situated. The order fixed the sums to be paid by the respective occupiers of lands previously liable to repair ratione naturæ "in full discharge of all claims thereafter in respect of the repair and maintenance of the highways" as provided by the Act. These sums were nominal in amount. They were duly paid. The co. were subsequently rated in respect of their lands in the hamlet for expenses incurred in the repair of highways within the district, including those in the hamlet :—

Held, that the order did not operate to deprive

The plt. was possessed of land which was crossed by a highway. A trainer of race-horses had agreed with the plt. for the use of some of his land for the training and trial of race-horses. A view of the land so used was obtainable from the highway on the plt.’s land. The deft. was one of the proprietors of a publication which gave accounts of the doings of race-horses in training. On the occasion in respect of which the action was brought, the deft. walked backwards and forwards on a portion of the highway on the plt.’s land, about fifteen yards in length, for a period of about an hour and a half, watching and taking notes of the trials of the race-horses on the plt.’s land. A., who married after the passing of the Act, gave his wife presents of jewellery, as birthday presents, and she to his knowledge kept the jewels in her possession, or in a bank in cases stamped with her initials. It also appeared that he made the presents in the same manner and with the same words as in making her presents before marriage, and till he took proceedings for a divorce never suggested that the jewels were only lent to her. A married woman, while under a protection order obtained by her under s. 21 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857, is in the position of a feme sole as regards all property coming to her after the date of the order (s. 25), and also for all purposes of contract (s. 26); so that her execution by will since the Married Women's Property Act, 1882, of a general power of appointment created subsequently to the date of the protection order makes the property appointed liable, under s. 4 of the latter Act, for debts or liabilities incurred by her while under the order, even though they may have been incurred before that Act, s. 4 extending to an appointment since the Act by a married woman who had debts and liabilities existing at the date the Act came into operation.

A married woman, who was entitled to an equitable life interest in the rents of certain premises for her separate use without power of anticipation, was deserted by her husband and obtained a protection order under the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857. She afterwards executed a mortgage of her life interest covenanting to pay the mortgage debt. Judgment was obtained against her as a feme sole in an action on the covenant :—

Held, that, although the Act allowed a married woman with a protection order to sue and be sued as a feme sole, it did not apply to property to which she was entitled before the protection order; consequently the restraint on anticipation prevailed, and no receiver of the property could be appointed. *HILL v.
